Upon motion the report was adopted.

To Vote on By-law.

To the Council of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—Your Committee of the whole council beg leave to report as follows:

Your committee held a meeting with the Peterborough Water Commissioners, who had received reports from Wm. Kennedy, Jr., of Montreal, in regard to the electric power development at the waterworks dam and street lighting, in which Mr. Kennedy estimated the cost of a building and machinery to generate electrical power at $67,100, and the cost of street lighting plant, not including poles, at $14,100. After considering the reports and other information received from the Commissioners we gave instructions that a by-law be prepared to provide for borrowing $70,000 to develop electric power at the waterworks dam, the debentures to be for twenty years and to bear 4½% interest, with a sinking fund based on 4 per cent.

We also gave instructions to have a by-law prepared to appoint W. H. Moore arbitrator on behalf of the city to ascertain the amount payable by the City to the County for administration of justice, etc.

We further instructed the City Solicitor to prepare an agreement with the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co., regarding the sale of Quaker St., and the diversion of Hunter St., and a By-law to carry the matter out.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. J. TURNER, Chairman.

The by-laws in accordance with the above report were then authorized to be prepared. It was moved by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that the by-law to provide for borrowing $70,000 be submitted to the ratepayers on Tuesday, April 19th. This motion was carried.

Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the polls on that day be kept open until 7 o'clock. The motion was lost and the polls will, therefore, close at five o'clock.

Ald. Turner stated that in regard to the crowding of the coaches on the C. P. R. local train from Toronto that he had received word from Mr. Oborne, at Toronto, that in future a parlour car would be added to this train.

Upon motion of Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. Batten was passed a resolution of condolence, and ordered to be forwarded to City Solicitor Hall, in the loss he has sustained by the death of his wife, and that the Council attend funeral in a body.

The Council then adjourned.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP?

Anonymous Writer Says He Fired the Shots Which Were Heard Sunday Night.

Peterborough, March 7.

Dear Editor,—No doubt the people are at a loss to know who fired the shot on King St. I was the one and you will not blame me when I tell you how it happened. I was going home and I saw a man peering out from behind a fence, so as I had considerable money on my person at the time I thought I would take no chances, so I fired and he dropped. I saw he was not dead so I fired several shots to finish the beggar, so send a policeman out about the 1st of April. I think he will be dead by that time and he will find him in the empty field behind a high board fence.—Yours, SANDY.

Mr. W. S. Given Explains Dog Shooting Incident

Millbrook, Ont., March 7th.

Dear Sir,—You have been badly stuffed and misinformed re the "dog shooting" affair in your issue of Saturday, and I should like you to set it right at once. The facts are as follows. A strange dog came about my premises on Wednesday morning last and crawled under the shed and would come out but seldom and would not go away. On Thursday morning a dog belonging to a chum of my son went home with my boy as he had often done and seeing the strange dog there pitched into a fight. My son in trying (foolishly no doubt) to separate them, got bitten. The one dog being a stranger to us, and the "mad dog" agitation being so common now, we at once sent him to the doctor to have the bite treated. I reported the circumstances to the Medical Health Officer and he at once ordered the strange dog shot and its head forwarded to Dr. Hodgetts, Toronto, which was done by Chief Miller. Subsequently it was found that the dog belonged to Mr. Elson and had remained in the village from the time stated, some two miles from home. Perhaps had the Medical Health Officer known that the stray dog belonged so near here he would have ordered the dog tied up for a while as he did the other dog. I, as the cause of the excitment, regret that any good dog should be so disposed of, but in the present agitation throughout the country regarding "mad dogs" would not you or any sane person have recommended the course taken. It was only some evil disposed person who so misled you, one of those busy bodies not lacking in some communities, who would rather make trouble than quiet it down. In talking to Mr. and Mrs. Elson they viewed the circumstances as any right-thinking person would, Mrs. Elson saying to me, "I know if it was my boy who was bitten by a strange dog at the present time I should want him disposed of too," or words to that effect. I do not know what steps the chief will take to have himself vindicated, but in the meantime I must ask you to do the "amende honorable" to my position in the matter. I am, yours,

W. J. GIVEN.

The blood was enriched, colour improved, new flesh was added, and I got strong and well."

APPROVED STORE SYSTEM

Peterborough's Branch Store Methods to be Introduced in all of Grafton & Co's Branch Stores.

Mr. Herb Conway, of Grafton & Co., Peterborough branch store, was home on Saturday, after an absence of two weeks. He had been instructed by the Grafton Company to proceed to Brantford and introduce the excellent store system into their branch store in that city, which has been so successfully adopted in the Peterborough branch. Mr. Conway returned again to Brantford yesterday to assist in putting the system into practical use. He has also instructions to introduce this system into all the Company's branch stores in Ontario, which will take some months to complete. It is complementary to the Peterborough branch manager, Mr. W. E. Conway, that his practical store methods have been so highly approved.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S GUILD

Being devotional night Mr. Wm. Lorimer presided at Knox Church Young People's Guild last night. An interesting and helpful paper was given by him. The members expressed their regrets on the latter leaving the city, the best cordial wishes were tendered to him. Monday, March 14, Miss Warren presides over the missionary meeting.

BOY CARRIED OFF FARMER'S MITTS

Of course the boy needed the mitts and the farmer should have put them in his pocket, not leave them on the sleigh, particularly when he noticed the boy there. However, these circumstances were in no degree extenuating but on account of his youth, Magistrate Dumble allowed him out on suspended sentence. The farmer was James Vicary, and, while in one of the flour mills Earl Schweier picked up Vicary's leather gloves and disappeared. The affair was reported to the police and within a short time P. C. Meagher had secured the boy, who was brought before Magistrate Dumble at noon. The boy is anxious to go West.

Allan's Lung Balsom is warranted to cure the most distressing Cough.

AN EVENING IN NEW ENGLAND

The New England environment with all of its quaintness and puritanic simplicity will contribute greatly to the enjoyment of the social evening being held in the Murray Street church lecture room on Friday evening of this week. The themes of the Puritans will furnish subjects for such speakers as Judge Huycke, F. D. Kerr, Esq., and Mr. L. J. Petit of the Collegiate Institute.

The music will follow closely the prevailing idea—poems of New England writers will be recited by Mrs. J. A. Morgan, Miss Clara Kidd and Mr. Morphet will be the soloists of the evening. The Examiner has been asked about what goes to make up the menu of the New England table. We suppose that such elements as Boston beans, pumpkin pies, doughnuts and coffee would form a part of the repast, but our puritanic days are so far behind us that we hardly pose as authorities on such a subject. Undoubtedly the accommodation of the school room will be taxed to receive those who will be anxious to have a part in an evening as educative and entertaining as the New England tea.

THE EXAMINER'S NEW SERIAL STORY

The Examiner's new serial story, "The Port of Missing Men," will commence in to-morrow's issue and will be continued each day until completed. Great excitement is being taken in the story and there is likely to be a brisk demand for copies of the paper containing the romance.

LOOK OUT FOR PNEUMONIA

Your system is in a run-down condition. You catch cold. You think it will soon pass off. It doesn't. You neglect taking any special care of yourself. Bronchitis developes and then comes pneumonia and a fight for life. A fight which is too often unsuccessful. Why not take every cold seriously and cure it promptly by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

"Molly May" Company Arrive

A special train of two baggage cars and one coach arrived at the Grand Trunk station this afternoon at 1.15 from Kingston. This train brought to Peterborough the scenery and stage crew used in the production of the big comic opera, "Molly May," which will be the attraction at "The Grand" to-night. The Company will not arrive until 5.30 this evening. It takes six hours to get the scenery in position for the production, and the stage crew of the local theatre, with the assistance of the big staff carried by the company, are busy with this work this afternoon.

Damage By The Storm

Expensive New Structure at Power Plant Yields to Swollen River—Chatham Suffers From Flood — Lightning Strikes Church at Niagara Falls — Many Barns Are Destroyed Throughout Ontario.

Erindale, Ont., March 8.—With a crash and a roar that startled the entire neighborhood, the Erindale Power Co.'s dam broke away at 6.45 yesterday morning, and the pent-up body of water, half a mile square and 15 feet deep, in the pond above swept down, converting the stream into a raging torrent, and doing considerable damage to property between the dam and the lake.

The Italian and Macedonian workmen living in a shack below the dam had a close call. One Macedonian was rescued after he had twice disappeared from view in the ice and water.

Since the water commenced to rise in the pond, the contractors, the McKnight Construction Co., have maintained two watchmen at the dam and this precaution saved the lives of the workmen. When the first small portion of the concrete gave way, they rushed to the shack and gave the alarm. The men were at breakfast and had only time to get out and reach the bank before a piece of the dam 150 feet long broke loose. One Macedonian tried to go back to save his suit case, but before he emerged from the shack the water had swept it away. The man finally succeeded in grasping a pole, which was extended him, and was hauled to safety.

Flood Around Chatham.

Chatham, March 8.—The Louisville jam broke away at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and is now piling on the already formidable jam at Prairie Siding, below here. This jam extends all the way from Prairie Siding to Bagnall, and the water has been diverted so that it is now rushing in torrents four feet deep over the countryside.

Some houses in the lowlands are submerged to their second storeys, and it is feared that the G.T.R. and Wabash tracks will be washed away before morning.

Struck Church at Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 8.—The congregation of the Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church was thrown into a panic during the anniversary services Sunday evening, when the edifice was struck by a bolt of lightning. The electric flash first struck the carriage shed, and then ran into the church along the electric wires.

The interior of the building was plunged into darkness, and at the same moment a large section of the ceiling loosened by the shock fell down among the worshippers, causing great excitement.

Rev. Prof. Robertson of Knox College, Toronto, who was conducting the services, was slightly affected by the shock.

Barns Burned.

Cannington, March 8.—During the heavy thunderstorm Sunday, the barns of Alex. McRae, second concession of Thorah, were struck by lightning and destroyed by fire, along with 24 head of cattle, one horse, 600 bushels oats, 20 tons hay, and all his farm implements.

Delta, March 8.—J. Wilson's barns, three miles from here, were struck by lightning and burned; loss $3,000.

Port Hope, March 8.—Wm. Berry's two barns were struck by lightning and burned with two valuable horses.

Lakefield, March 8.—Lightning struck Edward Dunford's house in Dowie Township, and destroyed it.

Glenburnie, March 8.—J. J. Keenan's barn was destroyed with contents, loss $5,000.

Bowmanville, March 8.—T. Evan's barns, con. 8, Darlington, were struck and burned, with cattle, 2,000 bushels of oats, etc.

Welland, March 8.—The Presbyterian Church at Lundy's Lane, one house in town, and two barns at Allanburg were damaged by lightning.

Dry Dock at Port Arthur.

Ottawa, March 8.—An order-in-council has been passed by the Government, granting a subsidy of 3 per cent. on the cost of the new dry dock which is to be constructed at Port Arthur. The estimated cost is $1,200,000.

A deputation from the Soo yesterday asked the Government for assistance toward the dry dock proposed there.

REFORMS SUGGESTED.

Opponents of Anti-Betting Bill Present Their Case.

Ottawa, March 8.—The written argument by counsel for the Jockey Clubs was submitted yesterday to the members of the special Parliamentary committee that heard evidence for and against the Miller anti-betting bill. Fifty pages of a printed pamphlet are devoted to an analysis of the facts adduced by the enquiry, the report being signed by F. E. Meredith and Aime Geoffrion, for the Montreal Jockey Club; Leighton McCarthy, for the O.J.C.; J. L. Counsel, for the Hamilton J.C., and J. H. Moss, for the horse breeding interests.

They submit that the committee should report back to the House a bill based on the British statute of 1906, thus meeting the evasion of the law by the hand-book man, by the samples and direct method of prohibiting, frequenting and loitering in streets and public places, for the purpose of betting, in lieu of attempting to create an impossible distinction between the professional and the private bettor, and avoiding the possibility of the recurrence of the British Columbia situation of last summer by limiting the exemption in favor of betting on incorporated race tracks to meets not exceeding twelve days in length, held not oftener than twice a year.

In addition, provisions might be usefully added prohibiting advertising, publishing, etc., or supplying information regarding to pool selling or betting.

The opponents of the bill argued that if this course is adopted the most effective law to suppress the real and serious evils disclosed by the evidence, namely the practices of the hand-book men, the tout, the tipsters, and the advertising which is ancillary to their operations will be obtained, and at the same time the important breeding interests of the country will be undisturbed and the legitimate and popular sport of horse-racing will continue to be carried on under the best possible conditions.

CURE WAS QUICK AND COMPLETE

Dame Parent's Heart Disease Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

She Suffered for Two Years but Now Advises All Troubled as She Was to Give Dodd's Kidney Pills a Trial.

St. Robert, Richelieu Co., Que., March 7.—(Special)—"I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all my friends." These are the words of Dame Joseph Parent of this place. And the good dame gives excellent reasons why she does so. "For two years," she says, "I suffered from Heart Disease, Headache, Backache, and a dragging sensation across the loins. Seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. I hope all who are troubled as I was will give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial."

Some people may ask how Dodd's Kidney Pills, which are purely a Kidney remedy, can cure Heart Disease. And the answer is simple. Diseased Kidneys fail to drain the impurities out of the blood. If these impurities are left in the blood they not only increase the work of the heart in propelling the blood through the body, but act on the valves causing disease. Pure blood removes the cause of the disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills make pure blood by putting the Kidneys in condition to strain all the impurities out of it.

monaco Wants Constitution.

Monte Carlo, Monaco, March 8.—Half of the subjects of the principality marched to the palace and waiting upon the Prince of Monaco, demanded a constitution, declaring that Monaco was the only absolute monarchy remaining on the face of the globe.

Monaco, an Italian principality, is the smallest state of Europe, having an area of only eight square miles. It is governed by a sovereign bearing the title of prince, who is assisted by a state council. The principality consists mainly of the Town of Monaco and its suburbs, La Condamine and Monte Carlo, the famous gambling resort from which the state derives its revenues. The population is about 17,000, only about 1,200 of whom are actual subjects of the prince.

At last I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and with the first few doses I found great relief and to-day my hacking cough has entirely disappeared and I am never without Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in the house."

ESTIMATES DOWN EARLY

Col. Matheson Announces That Ontario Will Spend $7,623,745.66 In 1911, Mostly on Ordinary Items of Current Expenditure — Early Prorogation Is In Sight—Mr. Lennox's Railway Clause.

Toronto, March 8.—Under the new fiscal system, by which the financial year ends on Oct. 31, it is necessary, if there is to be any money to run the province between that date and the time of the opening of the House, for the Legislature to pass the estimates almost a year ahead of the time when they will need to be expended. In accordance with this necessity, Hon. Col. Matheson yesterday brought down the main estimates for the year ending Oct. 31, 1911, which were passed through committee of supply the same afternoon.

The estimates call for an expenditure of $7,623,745.66, of which $6,989,845.66 is current expenditure, $535,000 on capital account, and $118,000 for other purposes.

A grant of $50,000 is made towards a provincial museum.

For the Hydro-Electric Commission a further expenditure of $200,000 on capital account is authorized.

For the new Government House $100,000 was voted; for the new wing of the Parliament Buildings $200,000, and for the new provincial prison $50,000.

Very few changes are noted in the salary items over the year 1910, as nearly all the increases were included in the supplementary estimates.

Under salaries and contingencies there are decreases from $138,935 to $137,900 in the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines, from $177,765 to $173,345; in the Provincial Secretary's Department and an increase in the Department of Agriculture from $61,610 to $62,010. The total salaries and contingencies is $615,585, as against $624,620 for 1910.

Under civil government there is a decrease from $624,620 to $615,585. In the Attorney-General's Department there is a decrease from $65,916 to $65,376. The Education Department stands at the same figure, $29,960. The Department of Lands, Forests and Mines shows a slight decrease from $138,935 to $137,900. The Public Works Department gets $66,660, a nominal increase; the Treasury Department $33,804, a small decrease, and the Provincial Secretary's Department a decrease from $177,765 to $173,345. The appropriation for the Department of Agriculture is $62,010, a slight increase. The salary of the Deputy Minister is increased from $3,600 to $4,000. This is in addition to the $600 extra included in the supplementary estimates. Among the miscellaneous items the cost of the official gazette is brought down from $6,500 to $5,000.

The cost of "legislation" is decreased from $279,810 to $255,450. This includes a cut of $10,000 in the stationery account, and $15,000 instead of $29,000 for the library.

The Administration of Justice will cost $690,741.66, instead of $727,388.30 in 1910. The increase from $43,000 to $51,600 for salaries of the provincial police is accounted for by the fact that the former figure was only for ten months. For uniforms for the police there is a decrease from $2,850 to $1,500, and for traveling expenses an increase from $4,000 to $4,800. The administration of justice in districts is lowered from $168,676. The decreases are in the districts of Thunder Bay, Kenora, Nipissing, Parry Sound and Manitoulin. In the Niagara River district appropriations amounting to $18,118 are carried over.

The Education Department will require $1,734,187 against $1,750,526.88 for 1910. Items are a decrease from $20,000 to $10,000 for the text-book committee, and an increase from $10,500 to $12,000 to the education department of Queen's University.

Indications of impending prorogation were not wanting at yesterday's session of the Legislature. The Lieutenant-Governor attended and gave his assent to a number of bills, which have succeeded in escaping the carnage of the last week or two.

T. H. Lennox (North York) brought in a bill to amend the Ontario Railway Act by allowing municipalities to apply to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board for a connection between two railways. At present only either company can apply. The immediate object of the bill is to permit the County of York to apply for a connection between the Metropolitan and the Toronto Railway Co.'s lines at North Toronto.

Dr. E. Jessop (Lincoln), introduced a bill to amend the Ontario Medical Act. As the law now stands, a medical practitioner who refuses or cannot pay an annuity fee to the College of Physicians and Surgeons has his name erased from the register, and if he continues to practice, can be summoned to the Police Court and fined from $25 to $100, or, in default, be sent to prison. Dr. Jessop's amendment provides that the name may not be erased, nor may the doctor be prosecuted, but the fee may be collected in the Division Court.

London, March 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Major A. G. Brodrick hopes to take his party of emigrating territorials to Canada under arms, get them jobs, and hand them over the Canadian militia, according to a Standard correspondent.

Love's Young Dream.

Detroit, March 8.—Anna Asken of Port Elmo, Ont., aged 17, is detained by the police until her parents are heard from. She was taken in charge after her arrival with William Cotell of Berlin, Ont. They were eloping.

London, March 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is admitted throughout the West Indies that any preference given to Canada must also be given to Britain and other parts of the Empire.

THE VALUE OF TEAM PLAY

"An Old Time Hockey Player," send to The Ottawa Journal the following comment on the match between the Ottawas and Wanderers, which is worthy of repetition here:

"Team play is a winner—the phrase 'team play' does not mean merely the possibility of members of a team transferring a hockey puck to each other on the ice to advantage at particular junctures, by deliberate head work. The phrase means a heap more than that. It means the working together of a team with confidence in all sorts of ways, unconsciously, as well as consciously. It means a cohesion due to long familiarity with each other. It means that when Jones is getting down the ice like a bullet, something inside him is telling him, without his knowledge, that he is thinking about it at all, that Brown is a few feet behind, or Smith five yards to the left or right ready for a pass. And Jones feels this without thinking about it, because throughout the matches of a season—maybe for two or three seasons—Brown and Smith have made a habit of being in just those places, four times out of five. It means that each man on a team has in him the idea of every man making a custom of certain procedure—that each man can keep his own proper place and follow his own duty serene in the conviction that each other man is minding his own business in a certain way to be relied on. It means that if Robinson is playing cover and moves to check an opposing rush, he knows in his soul that Williamson at point will surely cover a certain area behind him or to right or left; and conversely Williamson knows exactly what Robinson proposed to attend to, and how he will try to do it; and each of them is sure of the other, not because he looks to see, but because each, from previous long association together, has an instinct on the subject. Also the men in the centre, know by instinct what the wing men make a habit of, and how to play, or what to expect of them. It is possible for a good lot of men, particularly when playing against an inferior team, to do some pretty passing and good headwork, even though they are a job lot recently thrown together. But that is an exotic brand of team play, which is apt to collapse under pressure. For real team work, men must know each other thoroughly; must have practised and played together a lot, and mostly in the same positions.

HER WONDERFUL VOICE

A Short Story.

She was ready and waiting. And she was not a bit nervous. She had too much confidence in herself for that. She smiled serenely as she glanced at the programme in her hand. How well her name looked printed. "Miss Maude Vance, soprano." Yes, taken all in all, she was quite perfect in training and figure and stage presence. And her dress—why, it was Parisian to the last degree and, therefore, perfect, too. She had chosen it because she had always had a fondness for pink of just that shade and she remembered that he had, too. Certainly she had meant from the first to show him that she could succeed, that her voice was worth something. She had never quite forgiven him what he had said that night two years ago, when she had told him that she was going abroad to study.

"Don't do it, Maude," he had said. "You haven't voice enough." He had said it just like that. And he was the only one who had ever said it. Everybody else had praised her to the skies—her mother and her dearest friends and her teachers, of course. They must know better than he did. Yet she could never get those words of his out of her mind. And his way of saying them! He was always so deadly in earnest about everything. Especially about that. How angry she had been.

"I'll show you!" she had flung back at him and bit her lips cruelly to keep the tears from her eyes. During those two years of study that determination of hers had been ever present: "I'll show him!" It had driven her to do pains-takingly all the drudgery demanded of her. It had kept her on her feet under the exacting eyes of the famous maestro, who had been coaxed to accept her as his pupil, when she was ready to fall down with fatigue. And now she had learned all there was to learn apparently and had come back to show him that she had a voice and could sing, after all. She would flaunt her success in his face and, since he was fair, he would be obliged to admit it. Then she would smile at him and forgive him.

She knew that he was out there in the audience waiting with the rest—her mother and her cousins and aunts and the old uncle who had advanced the money for the training. They were impatiently listening, she knew, to the performers that preceded her and longing for her to appear. Not one of them, of course, except her mother, who had been her constant companion, had heard her sing since she returned. She had been very careful that they should not. She wanted to surprise them all—him especially. It was, indeed, curious that she should still care so much for his opinion—that she had always cared, even when she would not own it. What was there, aside from his love for her, that should have any weight with her whatever. He was not rich or handsome or of great influence, as were a half dozen other men she knew almost as well, but somehow it was always his face and not theirs that she saw in her dreams.

"Miss Vance!" said the manager. Her turn had come. From beyond the stage came the diminishing applause of an encore. She thought "Mr. Herford must have pleased them." Then she rose, arranged her train and followed her accompanist out upon the stage. They were all there, and she faced them calmly smiling and bowing in acknowledgment of the whirlwind of applause that greeted her. There was her mother, very flushed and conscious in her new lavender satin; there was Aunt Belle, her bosom twinkling with jetted lace; there was her cousin Violet Vance, who, too, longed to sing and there was Uncle James, whose bounty had supplied her with French gowns and Italian teachers. And there was he, with his clear grey eyes fixed upon her! Did he notice that her gown was pink? Or dream of it meaning? She wondered a great many things foolishly as she stood waiting for the applause to end so that she could sing. She felt quite eager to sing. She felt capable of doing her best. Her voice had never been better and the aria she had chosen was sure to please. Ah, there was the keynote! As she sang she was still conscious of what was going on before her upon the faces of the audience, which was composed largely of people she had known all her life. The general look of eager expectation, had changed, not to one of gratification, but to one of amazement, of perplexity almost of pain. Only his face told nothing. He sat very still, with his chin slightly lifted, listening closely. She could not understand what those other faces meant, and she did not care. But his face she could understand. Oh, if only it would convey some message to her. After all, it was really to him she was singing. It was only his approval that she sought. She had worked hard to show him that she could sing. And now she was showing him.

The applause that followed the singing of the aria seemed somehow perfunctory. She felt jarred and puzzled. Yet she came back smiling in response to the encore, though a little subdued, perhaps; a little less radiant. There was surely something a little wrong. She was not making the impression she had planned to make.

"It's hard work singing before one's own people," she thought. "A prophet is not without honour," etc. 'Perhaps they didn't like that French aria. There is certainly nothing wrong with my voice or me."

Between that appearance and her next upon the programme she could not sit still, but walked about restlessly. She knew very well what her mother thought — that she had never done so well in her life. And Uncle James — that she had given him good value for his money. "By George that niece of mine, she's a winner," he would be saying at his club tomorrow. And Violet would go home to dream of French gowns and bunches of orchids as large as her own fuzzy little blonde head. And Aunt Belle would be planning a dinner to take place before "Maude starts on her tour." But he—what did he think? His eyes were so unfathomable. That was because they held so much. Had she convinced him that she could sing? Had she?

Ah, there was her second call at last! She went out again upon the stage; she bowed and smiled and sung again her best—to him. And still he sat with his arms folded and his chin lifted and his inscrutable eyes watching—watching. It was over at last. She was whisked away in Uncle James' big motor car to their apartments, where a little supper had been arranged for her. They were all there but he. Would he come? And they were all trying to talk at once about her. They wearied and worried her with their praise. Somehow it suddenly sounded meaningless to her. What she wanted was the truth. And she felt deep down in her heart that only he could give it.

The apartments were suffocatingly sweet with flowers—all offerings at her shrine. He had sent his bouquet with the rest. She took it up now and then and held it close to her face. It was pink — pink roses. And down among them was his card. Why didn't he come? Why didn't he come?

Suddenly the door opened and he entered. Her colour rushed to meet the roses' colour in a warm sweet flood. He had seen her at once without seeming to see her, just as she had seen him. And now he was coming toward her. Above his roses their eyes met. She held out her hand.

"Well?" she demanded. "What have you to say?"

"What do you wish me to say?"

She looked down at the roses. And it was well, because she did not see his face.

"You know," she said—"the truth."

He caught his breath as if in pain.

"The truth!" he repeated. "Ah!" And then she looked at him sharply, for it was as if he had said: "Let me tell you something pleasanter than the truth."

"Oh," she cried, piteously, understanding. "I have failed! I haven't shown you—"

"You have shown me," his voice was exquisite, "that you are all things a woman should be — the rarest, the sweetest, the best. Dear," he faltered, "I know I am breaking your heart, but better for me to break it who love you so than for strangers whose indifference will make them unnecessarily cruel. As I listened to you to-night I felt that I must tell you the truth even as you have asked me, before you went out into the world in all your happy confidence to learn it by bitter defeat. For that is what awaits you. I speak as a man and a critic, not as your lover, for I know that after this you will not consider me such. I am sacrificing a good deal, am I not, just to tell you the plain truth? You are a glorious woman, Maude, but you can't sing. It is not your fault; you have been deceived by praise and flattery. But I can't deceive you."

Above the pink roses her face was perfectly white. She had done her best and they had all told her that she had succeeded. They had all lied to her because they loved her—all except this one man. He had never lied. Better to hear it from his lips than, as he said, from the lips of strangers. She thought of her prospective tour and shuddered. She was a brave woman, and though she had her moment of bitter struggle her spirit rose presently from the black depths into which he had plunged it and she looked him steadily in the face.

"After all," she said, "I did it all for you. It was your opinion I wanted, because I knew it would be the right one. When I asked you to tell me the truth I did it because I knew that you would tell me the truth. And you have. Thank you, Alan."

She held out her hand again. And as she lifted it reverently to his lips he felt with a sudden thrill of joy and hope and thanksgiving that the great good he craved was nearer to him than ever before—that he had, indeed, not lost, but gained all.

GO WEST AND BE SURPRISED
Is the Advice of SIR CHARLES RIVERS WILSON

Real Estate is the great money-making medium of the West. Thousands of fortunes have been made by people who invested in Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver, Fort William and other Western towns, btfore the great developments took place which made them cities.

YOU WILL BE SURPRISED

how fast $100 invested in a likely townsite will grow. The same opportunities to buy before great developments took place are again offered to the people of the East.

WE SUBMIT

Entwistle, A Growth

FOR YOUR APPROVAL

Situated on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 65 miles west of Edmonton, necessary to make a great city. These include timber, coal, water power, and 2,000,000 acres of fine farming country.

Look before you leap. Don't pay inflated prices for Western lots. buy first hand. Our prices are right and calculated to please every investor.

Entwistle is not a prospective townsite. It was incorporated by an Act of the Alberta Legislature, and already has Post-office, Dominion Government Offices, Churches, School, Stores, Hotel, and many modern residences.

In addition the resources of Entwistle are: Immense coal areas in the vicinity; exceptionally fine sandstone which experts claim rivals the celebrated Calgary sandstone; timber limits extending over 200 miles up the river, from which lumber will be cut by mills now erected here; pulpwood in abundance; many good homesteads yet to be had; splendid hay lands within short distance of town; inexhaustible water power supplied by Pembina and Lobstick rivers.

Large Coal Areas, 10,000 acres are optioned by an English syndicate who propose to spend $4,000,000 next summer. The coal is of good quality. Another large coal area adjoining the town will have a spur line run to it and start work.

Upon reliable authority it can be reasonably stated that the C. P. R. will run their line towards Entwistle river.

Two C... erate st... backed by ... fiercely. Negotiat... the wip... pulp mill in the district, and this would mean employment for 1000 people.

An Entwistle Development Syndicate has been incorporated and hold sandstone and mineral rights, freehold land in the town, also sawmill outfit, planer, etc., and the erection of an excelsior factory is under the consideration of the Board.

These facts with the great natural features for building up a town, should attract the attention of all interested in investments or speculations, also bring conviction to the Government of the readiness and adaptability of Entwistle to tackle this great land settlement scheme right now.

Mr. S. J. THOMAS, who is interested in Entwistle, is in the city, and would be pleased to make appointments with intending investors. PHONE or CALL

Ordered to Hospital

FOR OPERATION FOR ACUTE INDIGESTION—DID NOT GO AND WAS CURED BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

A medicine that will save one from a surgical operation must be worth while.

The doctors seem to have made the common mistake of dosing the stomach when the real source of trouble was with the liver and kidneys. Anyway Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills made a complete cure and here is the record:

Mrs. F. O. Bacon, Baldwin's Mills, Que., writes: "I was very sick and the doctors said I must go to the hospital for a surgical operation. I had acute indigestion and the liver and kidneys did not act. I did not want to undergo an operation so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and have used them ever since. "I am feeling well now and doing my own work for a family of seven. I think there is no equal for acute indigestion and liver and kidney troubles such as I had and they and nothing else made me well again. There is no medicine I like half so well, for this did wonders for me."

The real serious cases of indigestion almost always have their location in the bowels and can only be reached by making the liver and kidneys active. No medicine regulates the liver, kidneys and bowels so nicely and so promptly as do Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers; or Edmanson Bates & Co., Toronto. Do not be satisfied with a substitute or you will be disappointed.

The caretaker will be at the Street Railway Rink every evening this week between 8 and 9 o'clock, when people may get toboggans belonging to them. The owners of all toboggans, left at the rink during the Summer, will be charged 50c storage. 3d-ttf

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Waller will sympathize with them in the loss of their infant son Layland, aged three months. He had been ill since Sunday with indigestion, but the medical aid proved unavailing. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon from the family residence on the first con. of North Monaghan, to the Little Lake cemetery.

HOLD A CELEBRATION

Several thousands of former members of the Queen's Own Rifles will assemble from all parts of the continent at Toronto next June, for a reunion in celebration of the Semi-Centennial of the regiment. The festivities will commence Saturday, June 18, with a reception at Government House, his Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor, like many other notables, being an ex-member of the crack regiment. On Sunday, a monster church parade of ex-members and the present members will be a unique affair. During the week, grand historical pageants on a scale only equalled at the Quebec Tercentenary, will be given by several thousand performers on the Rosedale Athletic grounds. In addition, there will be numerous social meetings of old comrades.

In nearly every town and city in the Dominion, and in many in the United States and elsewhere, are men who have served in the Queen's Own, and the Semi-Centennial Committee is desirous of getting personally in touch with as many of them as possible. To that end, it will greatly facilitate matters if the ex-members who see this will at once communicate with the permanent Secretary, Mr. G. I. Riddell, 36 King Street East, Toronto, and prevail upon all the other ex-members they know to do the same. Mr. Riddell will promptly send them particulars.

PRESBYTERY IS IN SESSION TO-DAY

Large Number of Presbyterian Ministers Here—This Morning's Meeting.

The Presbytery of Peterborough opened this morning at 9 p.m., in St. Andrew's church. The Rev. D. A. McKenzie, B. A., Moderator, presided. There were present Rev. D. A. Thomson, Hastings, Clerk of Presbytery, and Rev. Messrs. Burns, Lakefield; Beattie, Cobourg; Brown, Campbellford; Currie, Omemee; Brokenshire, Port Hope; Black, Harwood; Johnston, Millbrook; Keith, Peterborough; Dr. Marsh, Springville; McDonald, D. D., Keene; McLeod, A.R., Brighton; Pogue, Peterborough; Potter, Peterborough; Skene, Baltimore; Thornton, Colborne; ministers, and Messrs. Carruthers, McNaughton, Port Hope; R. Lees, M.A., Wm. Madill, J. C. Shook, R. Harrison, Peterborough; Albert Sanderson, Springville; Horsburg, Coldsprings; Gardiner, Millbrook; Kennedy, Harwood; Spier, Cobourg.

The Rev. G. A. Brown of Campbellford reported for the committee appointed to visit Havelock in view of the illness of the pastor, Rev. J. A. G. Stirling. Mr. Brown urged that the sympathy of the Presbytery be extended to Mr. Stirling in his serious critical condition.

A committee, consisting of the Rev. J. G. Potter, Rev. H. J. Keith and Mr. J. C. Shook was appointed to consider the selection, with power to make such arrangements as will relieve the afflicted minister.

The Clerk reported that a call from Norwood Presbyterian church had been most heartily and unanimously proffered to a member of the graduating class in Knox College, but inasmuch as he was not yet licensed to preach, the Presbytery agree to give the Moderator the authorty to proceed with all necessary steps, and the day of ordination and induction was set for April 14.

Rev. Messrs. Burns, McDonald and Marsh were appointed a committee to strike standing committees and report this afternoon.

A Presbyterial certificate was granted Mr. Harry Wilkie, which will enable him to resume his studies in McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago.

The Rev. Jas. Skeene of Baltimore, Convener of the Augmentation Committee, reported that the Harwood congregation had renounced their annual grant, and would be henceforth self-sustaining. Grants were passed for Havelock and Mill Street, Port Hope.

The very hearty appreciation of the Presbytery was extended to the congregation of Harwood and Roseneath for the generous treatment of their minister in voluntarily and cheerfully abandoning aid from augmentation, and deciding to pay the full minimum alone. The pastor, Rev. J. R. Black, has proved that a man of ripe experience, and years of service in the ministry can be as active, forceful in preaching, and faithful in pastoral work as the most active politician or physician in their spheres of activity.

The following were then elected as Commissioners to the General Assembly, which meets at Halifax, N.S., in June:

Ministers—Rev. D. D. McDonald, Keene; Rev. Dr. D. B. Marsh, Springville; Rev. Wm. Beattie, Cobourg; Rev. Wm. Johston, Millbrook.

Elders—R. Fairbairn, Lakefield; W. Madill, Peterborough; A. Sanderson, Springville; R. Lees, Peterborough.

The Presbytery adjourned at noon to resume business at 1.30.

The reports of all standing committees will be given as follows:

Home Missions—Rev. S. S. Burns.

Foreign Missions—Rev. Wm. Johnston.

Aged and Infirm Ministers and Widows and Orphans—Rev. D. A. McKenzie.

Sabbath Schools—Rev. H. J. Keith.

Systematic Giving—Rev. Dr. Marsh.

Church Life and Work—Rev. P. Thornton.

Young People's Societies—Rev. D. D. McDonald.

Evangelistic Work—Rev. R. Pogue.

Social and Moral Reform—Rev. J. G. Potter.

French Evangelization—Rev. Mr. Stirling.

Statistics—Rev. D. A. Thomson.

The Presbytery will, in all probability finish its work to-night.

HEAVY TRAFFIC TO THE NORTHWEST

One Train Had Fifty Cars of Horses by Time Muskoka Was Reached.

An adequate idea of the extent of the egress of settlers for the west from our own eastern provinces can be secured only by making the trip. Mr. Albert Parker has returned from a trip to Alberta where he delivered several carloads of horses. The train was made up in Toronto and by the time Muskoka was reached it numbered 50 cars of horses. The train had to be broken up at that point. The traffic to the west is of surprising proportions and from all reports continues in a steady stream. At Winnipeg the yards are filled with cars and the stock pens crowded with cattle and horses. The present spring is witnessing what may be termed an unprecedented influx into the west. The passenger trains are said to be crowded and in every particular the traffic is unusually heavy.

Many young ladies who were supposed to be going into decline have been restored to health and vigour by the use of Miller's Compound Iron Pills.—Wm. Mudill, druggist.

The Stock of an Art Store

is most difficult to describe. To say it is artistic, or exclusive, or select, is vague and amounts to little; particularly when similar claims are made by many others.

Words cost nothing. It is so easy to say our stock is better, cheaper, more artistic and desirable than that of others; but such assertions are not always convincing to one of knowledge and experience.

Therefore we ask that you personally come and see what we have to offer. We shall gladly accept the verdict of your judgment. Upon this basis we ask your patronage, for by this policy we have won recognition from a discriminating and experienced clientele. But again we say, come in and see for yourself. We are supremely confident that you will not be disappointed.

SEVERAL SHOT IN PHILADELPHIA STRIKE RIOT

Trouble Came Suddenly and Unexpectedly After Two Days of Sullen Inactivity of Labor Forces—Car Loaded With Armed Men.

SHOT INTO THE CROWD

Philadelphia, March 8.—A girl and three men were shot last night in a pistol battle in Frankford between employes of the Rapid Transit Company and a mob of 10,000 strikers and sympathizers. The rioting came suddenly and unexpectedly after two days of sullen inactivity on the part of the union labour forces.

Early in the evening the motormen and conductors of cars along Frankford Avenue were savagely cursed by crowds strung out along the thoroughfares for a mile. When it grew dark bricks were thrown. About ten o'clock, after several cars had been shunted into the Frankford Avenue barns with their windows broken, a car loaded with armed men was started from the barns. At Frankford Ave. and Overington street the car, moving slowly, was attacked fiercely. Stones and bricks rattled against its sides and whizzed through the windows. The sidewalks were jammed with troublemakers. No police were in sight.

There were fifteen men in the car and they were armed with revolvers. They shot rapidly while the car was in rapid motion. A fourteen-year-old girl, named Helen May, whose home is in Coral street, was hit in the leg by a bullet. The shout was raised that she was dead. The mob renewed its attack more violently than ever, shouting the news down the avenue faster than the car could move. The garrison continued firing. Three men were dropped between Overington St. and Allegheney Avenue, John Maloney, Frank Bromley and Michael Osborne, all shot in the leg. At Allegheny Ave. the car was switched into a "Y" and started back towards the barn. It ran a gauntlet of bricks and some of its defenders were knocked senseless and cut about the face and head. The car returned to the Frankford barns, racing between walls of rioters. A large police force was hustled to Frankford in response to a riot call. The trouble was over and the avenue pretty well cleared when the reserves arived. The police sent the injured persons to the Frankford Hospital and chased the loiterers.

Time for Dallying Past.

The manufacturers of this city have started a backfire to fight labour unionism. Unless the thousands of men who broke their agreements by laying down their tools return to work within the week, the mill owners have determined to close their factories indefinitely.

As things stand, the textile workers —20,000 in number—the main body of the strikers, are not likely to get a chance to work when they will need work most. Other labouring men will be in like position. The manufacturers have come to realize that there is no use dallying with organizations that have shown an utter disregard for signed agreements.

Ten of the biggest carpet and tapestry mills in the city have served notice that they would keep their factories closed indefinitely, if their men did not get on the job next Monday.

Wives Not "Sympathetic."

A very interesting factor in the situation is of the wives of the union men men who have kicked themselves out of a job. The wives are not in favour of "sympathetic" strikes. They have been exerting a steady pressure on their bread-hunters since last Saturday to go back to work and behave themselves. Some of the men who reported back to work to-day told their bosses that they got tired arguing with their wives.

There is another phase of the situation that has not been taken into account by the strikers, apparently. Although the aggregate of strikers is large, only a few industries have been seriously affected to date. Hundreds of shops and stores have lost no small a number of men that they have been able to continue business without much trouble.

It is impossible at this time to make the flat statement that the sympathetic strike is petering out. It is true, though, that the movement has failed to gain an inch in the past 24 hours. It seems apparent, even, that it has lost appreciably.

HIGH COURT JUDGES TO BE INCREASED BY TWO

Special to The Examiner.

Toronto, March 9: — The Ontario Government has decided to increase the number of high court judges by two.

CONCLUDING SESSION OF THE PRESBYTERY

The Presbytery of Peterborough resumed work yesterday afternoon at two o'clock.

The Rev. Dr. Marsh asked leave to moderate in a call to a minister for Pontypool and Janetville.—Granted.

The Rev. H. J. Keith was given leave to moderate in a call to a minister for Warsaw and Dummer.

The Rev. James Skene was granted leave to moderate a call to a minister for Mill St. church, Port Hope.

The Rev. S. S. Burns presented the report of the committee to strike standing committees, which, after a few changes, was adopted as follows:

Home Missions—Rev. S. S. Burns, Rev. J. G. Potter, R Fairburn, elder.

Augmentation—Rev. Jas. Skene, Rev. A. C. Stewart, A. Fairbairn, elder.

Church Life and Work—Rev. Wm. Beattie, Rev. A. K. McLeod, T. Spear, elder.

Young People's Societies—Rev D. H. Currie, Rev. Jas. Skene, Jas. F. Clark, elder.

Supervision of Students—Rev. D. B. Marsh, Rev. G. A. Brown, elder, from Keene.

French Evangelization—Rev. D. D. McDonald, Rev. J. R. Black, Elder from Havelock.

Evangelistic Work—Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. H. J. Keith, Rev. Wm. Beattie and Wm. Mudill, elder

Foreign Missions.—Rev. Wm. Johnston, Rev. H. E. Abraham, Rev. J. R. Black, and elder from Norwood.

Systematic Giving.—Rev. A. K. McLeod, Rev. A. C. Stewart and elder from Warkworth.

Aged and Infirm Ministers—Rev. D. A. McKenzie, Rev. Jas. Skene, and elder from Grafton.

Social and Moral Reform.—Rev. J. G. Potter, Rev. H. E. Abraham, Rev. Wm. Beattie and Wm. Mudill, elder.

Statistics.—Rev. D. A. Thomson, Rev. A. K. McLeod, Rev. Jas. Skene, Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. Dr. Marsh and Mr. Buttars, elder.

The Rev. S. S. Burns, Convenor of Home Missions, reported continuous services had been given at Marmora and Harvey throughout the year. The people at Buckhorn are busy preparing to erect their new church, which will be proceeded with at once.

Regarding the re-arrangement of the congregations in Chandos and Burleigh, the whole matter was referred to the Home Mission committee with power to act.

The Rev. Wm. Johnston for the Foreign Mission committee, reported gratifying progress| It was shown that if all the members gave 10 cents per week it would give a splendid and very much needed addition to the missionary income. The following recommendations were adopted:

1. That the attention of elders and managers be drawn to the great value of the adoption of the Duplex envelope.

2. That sessions be urged to provide for an intelligent study of mission from time to time.

3. That the united prayers of the people be asked that there may be given to the congregation a vision of God and the attitude and intent of God into the world.

The Rev. Hiram Clark, from Honan, China, will visit the Presbytery during April and will no doubt give a great impetus to the work of missions.

Rev. H. J. Keith reported for the Sabbath school committee. The standing of the numerical side of the work seemed to remain the same. The financial aspect was encouraging and although there was a difference in the division of the givings over 1908 the aggregate was good.

The committee recommended:

1. That when ministers make exchanges that they visit the Sabbath school and show their interest.

2. That the attention of the teachers and children be called to the question of missions arranged for each week.

Rev. Percy B. Thornton reported for the committee on Church Life and Work. A most interesting survey was made of the development of the spiritual life of the churches throughout the Presbytery.

Reference was made to the great value of the Simultaneous Evangelistic campaign last November, and the committee find that many of the sessions anticipate a continuance of such missions from year to year. Mr. Thorton recommended that some definite action should be taken to secure, stimulate and maintain the regular attendance on church services.

The Rev. D. D. McDonald reported for the Young People's Society. There were twenty societies reported, all in a healthy condition, and doing excellent work in their different churches. There were five new societies organized during 1909. There are 817 members, an increase of 72, made up as follows: 318 male, 495 female. The number of communicants is 513, an increase of 193.

There was contributed by the Societies $1,08, an increase of 471 over 1909.

The Rev. Mr. Beattie reported for Mr. Pogue, the results of the Simultaneous evangelistic campaign held last November. From every quarter of the Presbytery came the message of great delight at the complete blessings the meetings had been to the congregations, and it was recommended:

1.—That the Presbytery expresses its appreciation of the help which was rendered in the recent Evangelistic campaign by the General Assembly's Committee, and also thanks to the many ministers of our church who at much sacrifice so assited in the movement.

2.—That the Presbytery heartily endorse the simultaneous idea in Evangelism as best commending itself to our presbyteries and congregations and as most likely to remove unrea-

THE EIGHT HOUR BILL.

The eight hour bill before parliament in the hands of a special committee if passed and made of general application, will create disturbance in some industries. While it might serve for certain forms of work it seems that experience has shown that in, especially coal mining, the effect is not only no good, but bad. The Dominion Government Trade Commission in South Wales reports that the depression is even worse there than last year owing to a threatened strike in the coal fields and to the miners' eight hour bill, which "has undoubtedly had a prejudicial effect upon trade in all directions, the employees themselves being the ones who chiefly complain."

A FEW AUSTRALIAN FIGURES.

In 1908-9 the wheat crop of Australia amounted to 63,674,279 bushels, and the estimate for 1909-10 is 83,000,000. The revenue of Australia — customs and excise and post office — for July to December 1909, six months, was $37,500,000. The production of gold was in 1909, 2,900,000 ounces, at 18 cents per ounce of a value of 52 millions odd. The exports of meat in 1909 was, mutton, 1,163,042 carcasses; lamb, 1,270,460 and of beef quarters, 390,626. Of these amounts 92 per cent. of mutton and 98 per cent. of lamb were shipped to Great Britain. A limited amount is shipped from Australian ports by mail steamers to Vancouver. There are at present four Canadian commercial travellers operating in Australia, one representing several manufacturers.

ALIEN LABOUR LAW.

In the House on Monday Mr. Thoburn, North Lanark, called the attention of the government to the alleged fact that 12 men from Buffalo had passed through Carleton Place to build a steamer at Arnprior. The local Trade Union had written him protesting against this breach of the Alien Labour Law, and he asked the government if the law would be enforced. Hon. Mr. King, Minister of Labour, replied that it was open to any person aggrieved to set the law in motion to remedy the situation. There is sometimes a demand for too much paternalism. Governments are asked to do what is the duty of private citizens or local officials. According to the Confederation Act the administration of the law comes within provincial jurisdiction. In the case mentioned, if any government is called upon as a matter of obligation to enforce the law, it is the government of the Province of Ontario. Mr. Thoburn seemed inclined to hold the Department of Labour responsible for the Arnprior incident; he said, "I thought that was a matter within the jurisdiction of the Labour Department." And no doubt party use will be made of the facts to try to show that the Labour Department is hostile to the interests of labour—because it does not usurp the function of the Provincial Government and institute prosecution. It is the duty of the Provincial Government to administer —enforce — within the province the laws passed by the Dominion Parliament. It would be just as reasonable to ask the Department of Railways and Canals to prosecute a man for trespassing upon a railway track as to ask the Department of Labour to enforce the Alien Labour Law in the Arnprior case.

GERMAN NAVY NO MENACE.

The Examiner has continuously contended that there was no ground for the existence of the German war scare, which has been so industriously and ardently, or clumsily, as the case might be, exploited by scheming politicians. It did duty in the British elections and it has done duty in the present debate in the House of Commons over the Naval Bill. Mr. Borden, leader of the Opposition, has made it the foundation of his amendment to the Naval Bill of the Laurier Government. This amendment provides that owing to the condition of the imminent danger of Germany descending on England, sizing the country and, as one Conservative speaker suggested, carrying off King Edward captive in chains; that owing to this condition Canada should at once cable over to Great Britain 20 or 25 million dollars, to build two Dreadnoughts or to spend in any way she likes. This is carrying coals to Newcastle with a vengeance. England is not in need of Canadian money, but her greatest financier, Sir Edwin Speyer, is in Canada now, looking for places to drop a few millions of Great Britain's surplus cash. Then, after the money is sent we must submit the question of a Canadian navy to popular vote. We must postpone carrying out the resolution voted unanimously by both sides of the House on March 29, 1909, to build a Canadian navy—to build it in Canada, with Canada's material, by Canadian workmen; to equip it with Canadian-made guns, to man it with Canadian seamen. The Naval Bill has not yet come to the voting stage, and the only ground for Mr. Borden's emergency gift of about a quarter of Canada's highest annual revenue, is cut out by recent pacific declarations of the German Imperial Chancellor Dr. Von Rethman-Holweg. Last Saturday, when the German naval estimates—by the way, six million dollars less than last year—were under consideration, the Chancellor made a most pacific speech.

Replying to the arguments of Herr Sudekums, the Socialist member, that Germany's great fleet was not called for by commerce or the colonies, and that England was justified in the belief that it was directed against her, the Chancellor spoke shortly but vigorously, saying:

"Our relations with England lie clear open before everybody's eyes. It is not necessary to repeat that our fleet is not for aggressive purposes, but for the protection of our coasts and commerce. The limits of our naval programme are known to every one, with the dates for the completion of our ships. Nothing is secret about the programme, and nothing is done in such a way as to arouse suspicion or belief that a threat is intended against anybody.

"Finally, it is our wish to cultivate unprejudiced and straightforwardly friendly relations with England. I do not see why the existing friendly relations should be disturbed between Germany and England, with whom we are so closely connected, both economically and in culture. No nation on earth can divert or suppress free competition of other nations. We must all proceed on the same lines as an honest merchant, and on this foundation I am convinced that the relations of confidence existing between Germany and Great Britain will develop favourably and that public opinion of both countries will be influenced in the same way."

These are very significant words, and do not sound much like a desire on the part of Germany to make a breakfast off John Bull. If a statement thus publicly made on the responsibility of a high German official, were not reassuring, these are confirmatory reasons. Germany's programme of naval construction fulfils itself in 1916, the hundredth anniversary of the close of an alliance between Prussia and Great Britain, and there is no sign of a new programme of battleship building. Then, which is self evident, Germany wants trade, not war. So anxious is she for trade that she humiliated herself by approaching Canada and suing for closer trade relations. The German war bogie has lost its power to scare and whatever imaginary justification it furnished for Mr. Borden's gift, or rather, give-away amend, reaches the vanishing point.

AUTOMATIC STAMPING MACHINE FOR POSTAL PURPOSES.

For some two years there has been in use in offices in New Zealand an ingenious device which entirely does away with the necessity of using adhesive postage stamps. After exhaustive practical tests by experts, the New Zealand Postal Department, not only granted permission for its general use, but also adopted it in various departments of the public service. It has been favourably reported upon by the Commonwealth authorities and a Bill has been prepared for presentation at the next session of parliament to legalize its use.

It is stated that a big saving will be effected by the government in the matter of printing stamps and in the prevention of fraud through stamps being cleaned and reused. Some advantages claimed by the inventors are that the machines prevent fraud, keep a reliable record of the stamp account, and—after an experience with them—are found to be of such convenience as to be indispensable in every office handling considerable correspondence.

In appearance the automatic stamping machine is not unlike an ordinary cash register. The indicator is placed in front of whatever denomination stamp is required, and, after the envelope is inserted, the handle is turned which causes the stamp impression to be made. Money is not used, but every firm requiring a machine has to be approved by the postal authorities, and their account guaranteed, before the device is installed. A postal official calls every fortnight to read the meter. A cheque to the value of the stamps shown thereon is forwarded to the department. The impression made by each machine is identifiable, and letters which, from some cause, cannot be delivered can be returned unopened to the sender.

It is probable a sample machine will be demonstrated before the Canadian postal authorities by a representative of the patentees at an early date.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Of the mileage of 7,000 miles main lines and branches of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway authorized, there are built and under construction 4,800 miles.

The many friends of Hon. Senator Ross will regret to learn that he is confined to his home at the Cecil Hotel, Ottawa, with illness, and also be pleased to know that his condition is improving.

Premier Asquith acts logically in seeking to destroy the veto Home of the Lords. It would be no use to take an action in regard to the budget that would be neutralized by the hereditary chamber.

The Hamilton Spectator has the "protection" rabies badly. On the assumption that a case of rabies has been traced to a dog from the United States, the Spectator advocates a protection tax high enough to exclude the dogs of Uncle Sam.

According to statistics compiled by the United States Department of Commerce and Labour, Canada is among the chief meat exporting countries of the world. It looks as if too much meat exporting explains the high price of a slice of bacon for breakfast.

The fathers of the German war scare explain the feverish naval preparations by the desire of Germany to acquire colonial possessions and Britain having the best stock on hand is a special object of attack. That danger is now removed by the fact that Germany is about to try to reach and seize upon the south pole. If she suspends her hostile attitude towards Great Britain till she reaches the South Pole, we can draw a big breath of relief. We shall be immune long enough to permit the numerous Canadian naval policies to bear fruit.

MR. BORDEN'S DILEMMA.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The Liberals of Halifax have not been slow to seize the very evident opportunity afforded them by Mr. R. L. Borden's change of front on the naval issue to point out that not only is his attitude of to-day opposed to his position of last year, but that it is in direct antagonism to the best interests of the constituency which has sent him to the House of Commons. The Halifax Chronicle thus puts the case:

"Mr. R. L. Borden, M.P., in his capacity as representative of the best interests of the City of Halifax, is opposed to the construction and equipment of a Canadian navy.

"He is, therefore, opposed to the construction and equipment of a shipyard in Halifax.

"He is, therefore, opposed to the establishment and maintenance of a Naval College in Halifax.

"He is, therefore, opposed to the renewal and maintenance of the dockyards in Halifax.

"He is, therefore, opposed to the expenditure of Two and a Half Million Dollars a year in Halifax.

"He is, therefore, opposed to the addition of probably ten thousand people to our population.

"It is well for the people of this city to know where Mr. R. L. Borden stands in this matter. It is well for them to remmeber that Mr. R. L. Borden, in order to make political capital, is willing to sacrifice the best interests of the people he has been elected to represent."

Carleton County may once again have to be a haven of refuge after the next general election.

MOST REMARKABLE CURES

EVER MADE BY ANY REMEDY.

Are Daily Credited to the Wonderful Powers of "Fruit-a-tives."

Bancroft Man Thinks This Fruit Medicine Will Work Miracles.

It is the old chronic case, the stubborn case, the case that will not yield to the ordinary remedies of the physician, that "Fruit-a-tives" never fails to cure. Many of the cures made by "Fruit-a-tives" are the wonder and admiration of the doctors who cannot understand how "Fruit-a-tives" can do what they cannot.

Bancroft, Ont., October 17th.

"I have been troubled for years with Indigestion—have tried every kind of medicine, and found only temporary relief. Then I used "Fruit-a-tives" and now I am no longer troubled with Indigestion. I think it is a splendid remedy."

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

There are few people who have never experienced a headache from one cause or another. It effects all ages and both sexes alike, but the female sex is naturally the more effected through the higher nervous development and more delicate organization of the system. Those also of a nervous temperament and studious or sedentary occupation are subject to it.

The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and if you will only give it a trial we are sure it will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

Headache and Constipation Cured.

Mrs. John Connors, Burlington, N.S., writes: "I have been troubled with headache and constipation for a long time. After trying different doctors' medicines a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after having taken three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all."

For sale by all dealers. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

With the spirits of dead and missing royalties and statesmen for spectators and in a maze of mediaeval intrigue and romance, the love affair of Shirley Claiborne and John Armitage was brought to its happy conclusion—mediaeval, we say, and advisedly, since, although the scenes of our tale are laid in up to date Europe and Virginia, it is necessary to hark back to the quaint tales of the old time romancers for such stirring adventures as befell Shirley Claiborne of Virginia and John Armitage of—where? Beautiful in the manner of southern maidens of high lineage, fine spirit and daring devotion was Shirley Claiborne, daughter of a famous diplomat and sister of Captain Dick Claiborne, the best rider in the American army. Boldly she believed in her lover, confident in her faith in him even when all her world had turned against him. And who was John Armitage, to whom so much love was given and around whom so many great affairs revolved? Read, and you shall learn from his story and his deeds of knightly bravery that the spirit of chivalry and loyalty still abides in the prosaic, workaday, modern world, ready at the call of duty to fight against intrigue, chicanery, falsehood and crime.

Chapter I

"EVENTS, EVENTS!"

"THE knowledge that you are alive gives me no pleasure," growled the grim old Austrian premier.

"Thank you!" laughed John Armitage, to whom he had spoken. "You have lost none of your old amiability, but for a renowned diplomat you are remarkably frank. When I called on you in Paris a year ago I was able to render you—I believe you admitted it—a slight service."

Count Ferdinand von Stroebel bowed slightly, but did not take his eyes from the young man who sat opposite him in his rooms at the Hotel Monte Rosa in Geneva. On the table between them stood an open dispatch box, and about it lay a number of packets of papers which the old gentleman, with characteristic caution, had removed to his own side of the table before admitting his caller. He was a burly old man, with massive shoulders and a great head thickly covered with iron gray hair.

He trusted no one, and this accounted for his presence in Geneva in March of the year 1903, whither he had gone to receive the report of the secret agents whom he had lately dispatched to Paris on an errand of peculiar delicacy. The agents had failed in their mission, and Von Stroebel was not tolerant of failure.

It was not often that the light in the old man's eyes was as gentle as now. He had sent his secret agents away, and was to return to Vienna on the following day. The young man whom he now entertained in his apartments received his whole attention. He picked up the card which lay on the table and scrutinized it critically, while his eyes lighted with sudden humor.

The card was a gentleman's carte de visite and bore the name John Armitage.

"I believe this is the same alias you were using when I saw you in Paris. Where did you get it?" demanded the minister.

"I rather liked the sound of it, so I had the cards made," replied the young man. "Besides, it's English, and I pass readily for an Englishman. I have quite got used to it."

"Which is not particularly creditable, but it's probably just as well so."

"I hope you are well," said Armitage kindly.

"I am not. I am anything but well. I am an old man, and I have had no rest for twenty years."

"It is the penalty of greatness. It is Austria's good fortune that you have devoted yourself to the affairs of government. I have read—only today in the Contemporary Review—an admirable tribute to your sagacity in handling the Servian affair. Your work was masterly. I followed it from the beginning with deepest interest."

The old gentleman bowed half unconsciously, for his thoughts were far away, as the vague stare in his small, shrewd eyes indicated.

"But you are here for rest. One comes to Geneva at this season for nothing else."

"What brings you here?" asked the old man, with sudden energy. "If the papers you gave me in Paris are forgeries and you are waiting"—

"Yes. Assuming that, what should I be waiting for?"

"If you are waiting for events—for events—if you expect something to happen!"

Armitage laughed at the old gentleman's earnest manner, asked if he might smoke and lighted a cigarette.

"Waiting doesn't suit me. I thought you understood that. I was not born for the waiting list. You see, I have strong hands, and my wits are—let us say—average!"

Von Stroebel clasped his own hands together more firmly and bent toward Armitage searchingly.

"Is it true"—he turned again and glanced about—"is it positively true that the Archduke Karl is dead?"

"Yes; quite true. There is absolutely no doubt of it," said Armitage, meeting the old man's eyes steadily.

"The report that he is still living somewhere in North America is persistent. We hear it frequently in Vienna. I have heard it since you told me that story and gave me those papers in Paris last year."

"I am aware of that," replied John Armitage, "but I told you the truth. He died in a Canadian lumber camp. We were in the north hunting. You may recall that he was fond of that sort of thing."

"Yes; I remember. There was nothing else he did so well," growled Von Stroebel.

"And the packet I gave you"—

The old man nodded.

"That packet contained the Archduke Karl's sworn arraignment of his wife. It is of great importance indeed to Francis, his worthless son, or supposed son, who may present himself for coronation one of these days!"

"Not with Karl appearing in all parts of the world, never quite dead, never quite alive, and his son, Frederick Augustus, lurking with him in the shadows. Who knows whether they are dead?"

"I am the only person on earth in a position to make that clear," said John Armitage.

"Then you should give me the documents."

"No. I prefer to keep them. I assure you that I have sworn proof of the death of the Archduke Karl and of his son, Frederick Augustus. Those papers are in a box in the Bronx Loan and Trust company in New York city."

"I should have them! I must have them!" thundered the old man.

"In due season, but not just now. In fact, I have regretted parting with that document I gave you in Paris. It is safer in America than in Vienna. If you please, I should like to have it again, sir."

The palsy in the old man's hands had increased, and he strove to control his agitation, but fear had never been reckoned among his weaknesses, and he turned stormily upon Armitage.

"That packet is lost, I tell you!" he blurted, as though it were something that he had frequently explained before. "It was stolen from under my very nose only a month ago! That's what I'm here for. My agents are after the thief, and I came to Geneva to meet them, to find out why they have not caught him. Do you imagine that I travel for pleasure at my age, Mr. John Armitage?"

"The packet has been stolen?" observed Armitage calmly. "Whom do you suspect of taking it?"

The old man leaned upon the table heavily.

"That amiable Francis"—

"The suggestion is not dismaying. Francis would not know an opportunity if it offered."

"But his mother—she is the devil!" blurted the old man.

"Pray drop that," said Armitage in a tone that caused the old man to look at him with a new scrutiny. "I want the paper back for the very reason that it contains that awful indictment of her. I have been uncomfortable ever since I gave it to you, and I came to ask you for it that I might keep it safe in my own hands. But the document is lost. Am I to understand that Francis has it?"

"Not yet. But Rambaud has it, and Rambaud and Francis are as thick as thieves."

"I don't know Rambaud. The name is unfamiliar."

"He has a dozen names—one for every capital. He even operated in Washington, I have heard. He's a blackmailer who aims high—a broker in secrets, a scandal peddler. He's a bad lot, I tell you. I've had my best men after him, and they've just been here to report another failure. If you have nothing better to do"— began the old man.

"Yes, that packet must be recovered," answered Armitage. "If your agents have failed at the job it may be worth my while to look for it."

His quiet acceptance of the situation irritated the minister.

"You entertain me, John Armitage. You speak of that packet as though it were a pound of tea. Francis and his friends, Winkelried and Rambaud, are not chasers of fireflies, I would have you know. If the archduke and his son are dead, then a few more deaths and Francis would rule the empire. Karl was a genius; therefore he could not be king. He threw away about 500 years of work that had been done for him by other people, and he cajoled you into sharing his exile. You threw away your life for him. Bah! But you seem sane enough!"

The prime minister concluded with his rough bur, and Armitage laughed outright.

"Why the devil don't you go to Vienna and set yourself up like a gentleman?" demanded the premier.

"Like a gentleman?" repeated Armitage. "It is too late. I should die in Vienna in a week. Moreover, I am dead, and it is well when one has attained that beatific advantage to stay dead."

"Francis is a troublesome blackguard," declared the old man. "I wish to God he would form the dying habit, so that I might have a few years in peace, but he is forever turning up in some mischief. And what can you do about it? Can we kick him out of the army without a scandal? Don't you suppose he could go to Budapest tomorrow and make things interesting for us if he pleased? He's as full of treason as he can stick, I tell you."

Armitage nodded and smiled.

INVIGORATING TONIC

FOR RUN-DOWN PEOPLE

Miss Ella Muriel Wood, of Brownsville, Ont., says: "Two years ago I was going into a decline. I could hardly drag myself across the floor, I could not sweep the carpet. If I went for a drive, I had to lie down when I came back; if I went for a mile on my wheel I was too weak to lift it through the gateway, and last time I came in from having a spin I dropped utterly helpless from fatigue. My father would give me no peace until I secured PSYCHINE, knowing it was excellent for decline or weakness. I must say the results are wonderful and people remarked my improvement. Instead of a little, pale, hollow-cheeked, listless, melancholy girl, I am to-day full of life, ready for a sleigh-ride, a skating match, or an evening party with anyone, and a few months ago I could not struggle to church, 40 rods from my home. I have never had the slightest cause to fear any return of the disease."

RESTORES THE APPETITE

LISTEN TO US

"We are only little ones, but we know Zam-Buk eased our pain and cured our sores. Perhaps it would cure you, too, if you tried it?"

Isn't this sound advice from "babes and sucklings?" Take it! The speakers are the children of Mrs. L. Webster, of Seymour St., Montreal, and the mother adds weight to their appeal. She says: "My little girl contracted scalp disease at school. Bad gatherings formed all over her head, and not only caused the child acute pain but made her very ill. The sores discharged, and occurring on the scalp we feared she would lose all her hair. She was in a pitiable plight when we tried Zam-Buk, but a few days' treatment with this balm gave her ease. Then the sores began to heal, and we continued the Zam-Buk treatment. In a short time she was quite healed.

"My little boy sustained a serious scald on the neck. It set up a bad sore, and quite a few things we tried failed to heal it or give him ease. Once more we turned to Zam-Buk, and we were not disappointed. It acted like a charm in drawing away the pain, and soon healed the wound."

Zam-Buk is "something different" in the way of balms. It contains powerful healing herbal essences, which, as soon as applied to skin diseases, kill off the germs and end the painful smarting. Other essences contained there so stimulate the cells that new healthy tissue is speedily formed. Eczema, itch, ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, festering sores, blood poisoning, chronic wounds, cold cracks, etc., are healed and cured in this way. Use it for all skin injuries and diseases. It is also of great service for piles. All druggists and stores at 50 cents box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

IMPORTANT MEETING TO BE HELD AT LAKEFIELD MARCH 12

On Saturday evening, March 12, another of the series of meetings decided upon at the Liberal Convention in Norwood, to be addressed by distinguished members of Parliament, will be held in the Town Hall, Lakefield, beginning at the usual hour. The gentlemen who will address the gathering are Mr. A. H. Clarke, M. P., South Essex, and Dr. M. Clarke, M.P., for Red Deer, Alta. These gentlemen, who are among the most forcible, finished and effective speakers in the House, will deal in a most interesting manner with live questions that are at present enjoying the attention of the members, two hundred odd, of the Dominion Parliament. The object of these meetings is to put or keep the electors in touch with the course of parliamentary events and measures, and give them an opportunity of seeing how their representatives are discharging their trust.

BEGINNERS' NIGHT WITH THE ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY

Lecture on the Planets and Other Interesting Events Featured the Programme.

A GOOD ATTENDANCE

The meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society last evening in the Collegiate gave evidence of the increasing interest the public are taking in the study of Astronomy. It must be very gratifying to the officials of this society to note the improvement in attendance and the apparent added interest.

It was "Beginners' Night," and the lecture was part chalk-talk and part stereopticon views, giving altogether a very comprehensive resume of the elementary principles of the movement of the planetary system and the characteristics of each of the planets comprising the Solar family.

In opening the meeting the president, Mr. H. B. Collier, referred briefly to the condition of the sky at present in connection with the positions of the more prominent constellations and planets. He also noted an article by Prof. Maunder of Greenwich, dealing with the planet conclusions relative to the planet Mars, to the effect that the atmospheric conditions there were such as to probably make it impossible to secure the flow of water through the so-called canals, in such quantity and for such a distance as an irrigation scheme would demand.

Several new members were proposed for membership and accepted accordingly.

The lecture of the evening was given by D. B. Marsh, Sc.D., under the title of "Among the Planets." He began the talk by using the blackboard to illustrate the meanings of a number of the terms used in astronomy, and as they were used so frequently it was necessary that all should have a clear idea of their significance and application.

Lantern views of the planets were then presented on the screen and through some very wonderful mechanical slides the planets in their various orbits were set in motion and performed their movements before the eyes of the audience. Undoubtedly this was the most instructive as well as intensely interesting to all, as a most comprehensive idea was thus presented of the planetary system.

Among the business items of the evening there was presented the question of the society securing a telescope for the use of members. It met with very favourable comment and accordingly it was decided to open a fund for this purpose, that the members and their friends might contribute to this object. The response was generous and no doubt the remainder of the required sum will soon be secured and the telescope purchased.

Headache

"My first experience with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills was a sample package handed me. They relieved the pain so promptly that I have never been without them since. I have given them to many friends when they had headache and they never failed to relieve them. I have suffered with neuralgia in my head, and the first one I took relieved me. They have cured me of neuralgia. I would not be without them."

FARMERS' CLUB

South Douro Organization Had a successful Meeting.

The South Douro Farmers' Club held its regular meeting on March 3, in the school house, Sec. No. 7. The subject for discussion was a debate "Resolved that it is more profitable to sell your grain than to feed it on the farm." Mr. Schuyler of Norwood, was present and acted as judge and critic, sustaining the affirmative by a very few points. He then gave an excellent address on corn and the silo, which was much appreciated and will go a long way toward making this crop more popular with the farmers of Douro.

The Club will hold its next meeting on March 24th, at 7.30 p.m., in St. Patrick's Hall, when there will be a debate, subject, "Resolved that from a financial point of view dairy cattle are superior to the beef breeds.

A full attendance of members is requested, as there is important business to be transacted.

DR. ZIMMERMAN

Meetings in Bethany Tabernacle Well Attended and Profitable.

The meetings being held in Bethany Tabernacle have, thus far, been well attended, and very profitable. Dr. Zimmerman's messages have been blessed to many hearts.

Last evening he spoke on the Lord's Second Coming as the Christian's hope and incentive to holy living. He said that if Christians realized the imminence and blessedness of that coming their hearts would find their joy and delight in fellowship with Jesus, and in seeking and saving souls. There would be no desire for the pleasures ad frivolities of the world.

Dr. Zimmerman will speak again this evening, and each evening until Saturday, when the Rev. E. J. Richards of Binghamton, New York, and the Rev. John Woodberry, of Shanghai, China, will speak. A four days' convention will follow.

"SHAUN RHUE" WILL BE SEEN MARCH 17

To be Presented at Grand Opera House by Dramatic Section of St. Peter's T. A. S.

The dramatic section of St. Peter's T.A.S. are almost ready for their final rehearsal of the Irish play they have been preparing for some weeks for presentation on the evening of the 17th of March. Their vehicle this year is none other than "Shaun Rhue," with Mr. George Lynch in the title role. It is doubtful if he has ever appeared in any production which affords such scope for his abilities as does the role of Shaun Rhue. Mr. Lynch as stage manager and instructor has broadened the parts with an effect that will surely meet with the expected success. He is ably supported by Miss Lavina Hallihan and the caste throughout is a strong one. Those who have attended past performances under the auspices of the dramatic section of St. Peter's T. A. S. appreciate the thoroughness with which they are invariably staged. As usual there will be a number of appropriate specialties, the exact nature of which will be announced in the near future.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The membership campaign in the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. is becoming very active. Yesterday five new members were added to the list and several others have expressed their purpose to join before the campaign closes next Saturday, all of which indicates that a large increase will be gained in boy members.

During Easter holidays a five team Basketball League for junior school boys will be played off, and is attracting much attention in this class.

IN AGONY WITH PILES

Mr. G. W. Cornell, with the Shaw Milling Co., St. Catharines, Ont., writes, "For six years I was a victim of itching, protruding piles and was in dreadful agony by and night. Doctors were unable to help me and I was about as miserable as any creature could be. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which did and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. This ointment would be cheap at fifty dollars a box in view of what it did for me."

DEPARTMENT STORES Cressman's

WAS HONOURED ON EVE OF DEPARTURE FOR WEST

Mr. Adam Thompson Presented With a Gold Watch and Appreciative Address by Otonabee Friends.

WILL BE MUCH MISSED

A pleasing event took place at the residence of Mr. Robert Jackson in Otonabee on Monday night when a number of the friends of Mr. Adam Thompson gathered to say farewell to him on the eve of his departure for Indian Head, Sask., where he will reside in future. About thirty-five or forty couples were present and the evening was very pleasantly spent in dancing for which music was provided by Stewart's orchestra.

During the evening Mr. Thompson was presented with a gold watch and fob as a testimony of the esteem in which he is held by his friends and neighbours. The presentation was made by Mr. Edgar Ruth, while Mr. Fred Roan read the following address:

Dear Mr. Thompson,—On this evening of your departure from our midst we, your relations and friends, have gathered together to spend another few of the very pleasant hours we have often spent in your company.

Mr. Thompson, you are leaving Otonabee, carrying with you the admiration, love and good wishes of all those who have the privilege of knowing you. You are leaving behind you a host of friends who, while regretting much your departure, at the same time feel it inevitable, knowing that you are going to a country where opportunities unceasingly present themselves to a man of your capabilities.

Mr. Thompson, in your choosing a new home in the west, we wish you unlimited success and would have you in your lonesome hours there—if any you have—to think of your many friends here, who will be always interested in your welfare.

Especially in your social gatherings we will miss you, but we must console ourselves in this case as in many others, what is the loss of the east is unquestionably the gain of the west.

Now, Albert, if you will pardon us for using the name most familiar to us, we feel we cannot let you go from among us without taking some small token of remembrance, which although small, may remind you of the space you hold in the hearts of your friends here. We therfore beg you to accept this watch and fob as a momento from your old associates.

Signed on behalf of your friends,

FRED FOOT.
EDGAR RUTH.

DISEASE ORIGINATES IN THE BLOOD

Pure blood is a safeguard against disease. Keep your blood rich in Iron and its essential elements, and the body will be healthy, strong and well. The best way to administer iron is by taking Vinol, which is a combination of the medicinal elements of Cod Liver Oil and Tonic Iron, it makes red blood corpuscles and thus creates strength quicker than any other method.—McDermid & Jury, Druggists, Peterborough, Ont.

FELL THROUGH WINDOW OF A GEORGE STREET STORE

Two young men were charged with being disorderly at the police court this morning. They pleaded not guilty. Several clerks from the Kingan Hardware Store, were called, but their evidence was of little account. It appears that on Saturday night, February 26th, these two men were going down George St. and one shoved the other through the window in the store door. They paid expense of putting in a new glass. His Worship dismissed the case.

IS HONOURED

Former Peterborough Cleric Will Preach in Westminster.

(Montreal Herald.)

The Rev. Dr. Symonds, vicar of Christ Church Cathedral, will probably preach this summer in the pulpit of St. Margaret's church, Westminster, the famous church under the shadow of the Abbey, whose rector is the Rev. Canon Hensley Henson. The rector is also a Canon of Westminster, and it is possible that the sermon will be delivered in the Abbey itself, Canon Henson and Dr. Symonds have been firm friends for a great many years, and the Westminster cleric visited Montreal last summer and delivered several sermons and speeches, at the Cathedral and elsewhere, which made Montreal Anglicans do a lot of thinking.

Dr. Symonds sails early in June for Edinburgh, to attend the great Missionary Conference to be held in that city, and he has been invited by Canon Henson to preach at Westminster on the last Sunday in June. The arrangement is not yet final, but it is practically certain that the Canadian preacher will be heard there on or about that date.

WAS SENT TO JAIL FOR ONE MONTH

Frank Lynch Pleaded Guilty to Being a "Vag" in Court This Morning.

Frank Lynch was charged with vagrancy at the police court this morning. He was given one month in the county gaol. Lynch only arrived here last night from Toronto. He said he was on his way to Montreal, looking for work.

"Are you pretty good with the bucksaw?" His Worship asked.

He replied that he could use one, and the Magistrate concluded that a month on the hill would do him good.

No Two Tories Think Alike On Naval Bill---Liberals Stand Firmly For Canadian Navy

Conservatives Who Say They Will Vote for Either Mr. Borden or Mr. Monk's Amendment, Frankly State They are Not in Favour of Either of Them---National Transcontinental Railway is Delayed---Contractors Injured by Lumsden Charges---In Consequence of Tory Obstruction, Some Contractors Cannot Get Their Pay, and are Seriously Crippled Financially and National Work is Delayed.

DEBATE ON NAVY GOES INTO NEXT WEEK

The week just passed has seen the making of political history which will have far-reaching consequences in the political life of Canada.

Three Important Incidents.

First, the continuation of the naval debate, and the various policies enunciated by Opposition speakers.

Second, the fact that the contractors on the National Transcontinental Railway cannot get their pay in consequence of what is known as the "Lumsden charges" and the pernicious delay in prosecuting this important public work.

Third, the verdict given in Toronto in the Foster-Macdonald libel suit, which resulted in favour of Dr. Macdonald, Editor of the Globe, with costs.

Liberals Stand Firm.

Take first the naval debate on the second reading of the bill. Every man on the Liberal side, stands for a Canadian navy, built in Canada, with Canadian money by Canadian working men. Upon the Conservative side every man appears to have a policy of his own. Let us enumerate some of them for the purpose of illustrating the muddle in the Conservative ranks.

Various Tory Policies.

First comes the leader of the party, Mr. Borden, who advocates giving $25,000,000 of money to Great Britain to do with as she sees fit, without Canada having anything to say in the matter. This is in plain words "TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION."

Then comes Mr. Monk, the alleged leader of the Conservative party in Quebec, who advocates no navy, no contribution of either money, vessels or anything else. In this connection it may be said that Mr. Monk is repudiated by leading and influential Conservatives in Quebec, who have appeared at Ottawa and registered their objections to his policy.

Mr. Schnaffner, of Manitoba, said he was in favour of one navy, an Imperial navy, and Canada should contribute to it but have no control over it.

Mr. Cowan, of Vancouver, did nothing but vilify the prime minister. He had no policy to announce, but would support the amendment of Mr. Borden.

Mr. Broder, of Ontario, thought the best thing to do would be to send a sum of money to help out now, and let it end there. He expressed the opinion that the Canadian people did not want a Canadian navy.

Col. Sam Hughes, Ontario, advocated doing big things, entering into obligations to provide half a dozen Dreadnoughts would meet with his approval.

Dr. Chisholm, Ontario, would give England the interest, per annum in sufficient amount to enable the Old country to spend $50,000,000 on Dreadnoughts, and then there would be enough of them to lend to Canada in case of emergency.

Dr. Roche, Manitoba, believed that Canada should give two Dreadnoughts at once, or the equivalent in money, and then submit the question of a Canadian navy to the people.

Dr. Edwards, of Ontario, cast a reflection upon the loyalty of the French-Canadians, particularly upon that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He enunciated no policy but for his slur on the French-Canadians he was severely called down by members on his own side of the House.

Mr. Barnard, Victoria, B.C., advocated a fleet unit on the Pacific Coast, but he said he was in favour of a Canadian navy, which is the Government policy.

Dr. Daniel, New Brunswick, wanted to provide the money for two Dreadnoughts.

Mr. Doherty, Montreal, thought the time for Canada to establish a navy was when she had a voice in Imperial foreign affairs. In the meantime he advocated delay, which showed that he did not believe there was any present emergency.

Mr. Magrath, Alberta, would make a contribution of $10,000,000 to Great Britain, spread over a few years (whatever that means), and for this he would take vessels in exchange at some future time.

Mr. Sharpe, Ontario, wanted the Canadian navy as outlined by the Government, increased to the extent of two Dreadnoughts, and this should be done without any delay.

Mr. Armstrong, Ontario, would give two Dreadnoughts at once to Great Britain, and submit the question of establishment of a Canadian navy to the people.

Mr. Lewis, Ontario, announced no views on the navy policy of the Government, but intimated that he would support Mr. Borden's amendment, although he might not be in favour of it.

These Are Only Samples.

These are some of the views expressed by the Opposition, no two alike, and not one of them with a true Canadian ring to it. On the other hand the Liberal party stands solidly for a Canadian navy, built in Canada, with Canadian money by Canadian working men. Take your choice.

Resented the Insult.

Last week there appeared in Ottawa a very influential delegation of Conservatives from Quebec province, headed by Mr. Bergeron and Mr. T. Chase Casgrain, both ex-members, protesting against the insults offered in the House to the French Canadians of Quebec by Dr. Edwards, Conservative member for Frontenac. This illustrates the lengths to which Tories will go in the House in opposing anything that is suggested by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. However, in this case Nemesis has overtaken the member who was so ignorant of Canadian history as not to know that the French Canadians have always been, and are now, among the most loyal subjects of His Majesty the King.

Contractors are Delayed.

Contractors working on the National Transcontinental Railway complain that in consequence of the Lumsden charges, they are unable to secure payments for work done, and the result is that serious delay in the construction is likely to ensue.

By and by the Government will be blamed for loss of time in the building of this road, and yet the whole delay was caused by Mr. Lumsden who resigned because he said he had lost confidence in a part of his staff. He did not name those in whom he had lost confidence, but said that they had over classified the work. Why the man did not promptly discharge the engineers and employ new ones, is not stated, but this reasonable solution of the difficulty would have occurred to most men who had the interests of the country at heart.

Tories Hinder Construction.

In the meantime the contractors are crippled for funds, and the Conservatives will be correspondingly jubilant because it will mean more delay, and they will not hesitate to charge the delay up to the government, which has had nothing whatever to do with it.

Delay Investigation.

The investigation of the Lumsden charges was done at the instance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and ever since the committee convened, the Conservatives have done nothing but delay the investigation upon first one and then another foolish pretext. It is well for the people to know this.

ITCHING SKIN EASILY SOOTHED

By D. D. D. Prescription.

That awful, agonizing itch, torturing day and night!—then suddenly the skin calmed, soothed and refreshed.

That is what any eczema sufferer can accomplish in two minutes by the use of the right treatment; just oil of wintergreen, mixed with thymol, glycerine and other healing ingredients in liquid form. While a smeary salve would only close up the pores of the skin, driving the disease germs in still deeper, the medicine in liquid form penetrates the epidermis, kills and washes out the eczema germs and stops the itching instantly.

Don't hesitate to try this D. D. D. Prescription. It is practically certain to cure, and absolutely certain to give immediate relief from that awful itch.

POST CARD COLUMN.

To the Editor of the Examiner. . . .

Dear Sir,—Not long ago the writer heard a prominent Rev. D. D. of the Methodist Church of Canada announce from his pulpit in this city, that the proposed church supper for raising funds would be called off and a free will offering would be taken from the congregation instead. He added there is no religion nor business in turning God's house into a restaurant." The free-will offering was taken and exceeded far the amounts realized from previous church suppers. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness in publishing my letters, I remain,

Yours, etc.,

"A MAN'S JOB," SUBJECT OF AN INTERESTING ADDRESS

The recently organized Brotherhood of St. Paul held its first regular meeting last evening in St. Paul's church, with Dr. Taylor, of Cook's Church, Toronto, as the speaker. Dr. Taylor chose as his subject "A Man's Job," and succeeded in showing the members of the Brotherhood that they have great possibilities ahead of them in their work, not only as it pertains to church work itself, but to the larger public questions of the day, as well. Dr. Taylor pointed out that the great questions of capital and labour and of social reform were pressing for solution. Hitherto, Christian men in the churches have been practically dead as far as grappling with these questions is concerned. The issues of the day have been passing by the churches, because the men in the churches have not taken hold of their job. Unless the men in the churches give these problems intelligent consideration and take concerted action to bring about improvements, the men outside of the churches will undertake to do so, to the disgrace of the church.

The men's organizations in the churches should prepare programmes of definite work and should stand by the job through fair weather as well as through foul. Only by appreciating the importance of their work and the responsibility that rests on them can they hope to accomplish definite results for good.

Sme short speeches made on the conclusion of Dr. Taylor's address by the President of the Brotherhood, Mr. Percy McLean, who presided, by Rev. Robert Pogue, and Messrs. H. B Cowan and James Connel, showed that the members of the Brotherhood appreciated the importance of the message that had been given them. Dr. Taylor suggested that the Brotherhood should meet weekly. This suggestion may be adopted. The Brotherhood is planning aggressive building work that should be productive of much good. The musical portion of the programme was furnished most acceptably by the Misses Helen Davies, Lillian Moore and M. G. McGaw.

TO VOTE ON NAVAL BILL

M. F. McLean of South Huron Stirs Up a Wasps' Nest When He Heckles George A. Clare, and Dr. Neely Comes to Words With Dr. Edwards Over Latter's Meaning of a Recent Speech.

Ottawa, March 9.—The temperature of the House of Commons, which has remained in the neighborhood of zero for the past week through the depression caused by the protracted talk on the naval bill took a sudden rise yesterday, and for a time the atmosphere of the Chamber was distinctly sultry. The first sign of a change came when Mr. McLean of Huron rose to put a question to Mr. Clare, the member for South Waterloo, who resumed the debate.

Though obviously opposed to the Dreadnought contribution scheme, Mr. Clare had not a word of criticism of his leader's amendment to offer, and when Mr. McLean ventured to put a direct question to him on that point he declined to be drawn, and the member for South Huron was howled down.

Mr. Clare paid a warm tribute to the Germans of Waterloo County, and of Canada. He said they were loyal Canadians, and proud of the great empire to which they owed allegiance. His parents had been born in Germany, and while they were proud of the land of their birth, he believed they were prouder of the country in which they had made their home.

Neither the people of Germany nor the people of England wanted war, and he knew that the educated and working classes of Germany had the warmest respect and love for the British nation. All he could see in the future was a war of commerce. In any danger which might occur, he believed the French and the Germans would stand for Canada and its interests always.

"We are one people in this country, and one people only," he said, "and the only way we differ is in how best to do our duty to the Empire to which we belong."

Dr. Neely of Humboldt, Sask., followed, and a somewhat lively scene occurred when he said he resented the charges of disloyalty leveled at French-Canadians by Dr. Edwards of Frontenac.

Dr. Edwards interrupted to deny that he had made any such charge.

Dr. Neely said he had read Dr. Edwards' speech a number of times, and he couldn't interpret it in any other way.

Dr. Edwards insisted on a withdrawal. Dr. Neely said he would accept the statement of the member for Frontenac, but he would have to qualify his withdrawal by saying that, if Dr. Edwards hadn't made such a charge, he had used the wrong words and phrases to express his intention. This was not satisfying to Edwards, and some more cross-firing occurred, but the Speaker in the end ruled that Neely had complied with the rules of the House.

Dr. J. D. Reid, Grenville, supported Mr. Borden's amendment, as something of material service to Canada and the Empire would be gained by it.

W. H. Smyth, West Algoma, read a newspaper report which stated that Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux had, at a public meeting in Montreal, supported a resolution declaring for Canadian independence.

Mr. Lemieux denied the truth of this, and stated that he had expected to be reminded of an incident at Sohmer Park in 1893, when as a member of the Monument Nationale, he had been asked to take part in a four-cornered academic debate. He had been assigned the role of urging the independence of Canada, and Elgin Myers had advocated annexation with the United States. Another Montreal gentleman, Mr. McGoun, had pleaded the cause of Imperial federation.

J. E. O. Gladu, Yamaska, supported the bill, and advocated the building of Canadian warships in Canada. He reviewed the Foster-Macdonald libel suit and made an attack on Mr. Foster.

Major Beattie, London, said he would have remained silent but for the remarkable statement of M. Y. McLean of South Huron, that Canada owed nothing to Great Britain but good-will and affection. He reminded the House of the great benefits which the Imperial authorities had conferred on the Dominion of recent years. He used the word Dominion advisedly, he said, for he hated the word "nation." It smacked of separation.

The adjournment was moved by W. S. Loggie, for Hon. R. R. Emmerson.

The division on the navy bill is not expected to take place until Thursday night, but there are over a dozen speakers to come yet and the whips are undecided to-day whether it will take place to-night or not.

PEACE IS EXPECTED

Messrs. Emery and Pepper Conclude Their Confab With the Dominion Authorities and Leave Ottawa—Result of Session Is Said to Have Been Highly Satisfactory to Both Countries.

Ottawa, March 9.—The American Tariff Board representatives had their last conference with Hon. Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, yesterday afternoon, and will leave for Washington to-day. The only official announcement made as to the result of the negotiations of the past week is simply that the exchange of views and discussions throughout have been of the most friendly and frank character, and it is hoped that as a result of the better mutual understanding reached as to the respective American and Canadian viewpoints on the aspects of the tariff problem under consideration, there will be a mutually satisfactory and peaceful outcome. It is stated that the proceedings were naturally of a confidential nature, and no announcement could be made as to what transpired pending the report of the American visitors to the Government at Washington.

It was further pointed out that the mission of Messrs. Emery and Pepper to Ottawa was for purposes of investigation and gathering information at first hand as to the feature of Canada's fiscal policy bearing on the question of undue discrimination against the United States. They had no plenary powers to promise any tariff concessions in the future by the United States to Canada in return for any which might be made by Canada, and consequently no definite agreement as to mutual concessions either at present or in the future could be made.

There are no definite promises on either side. At the same time it can be stated that as a result of a clarifying exchange of opinions the outlook is bright for a continuance of friendly trade relations between Canada and the United States, and, indeed, it seems probable that the heart-to-heart talk of the past few days between the Canadian and American representatives will open the way to a more satisfactory reciprocity in trade between the two countries than has obtained since the Dingley tariff went into effect in 1897.

It is believed here that in the next tariff revision at Washington, which will probably not be long delayed, any changes that are made will make for better and more equal tariff relations between the two countries. This, of course, is contingent on President Taft being able to find on the report of his tariff advisers that it will not be necessary to impose the maximum tariff against Canada on March 31st next. That he will be able to do so, even though strict judicial interpretation of American tariff law may have to be strained a bit, is the confident belief here among those who have been in close touch with the negotiations of the past week. As one of the parties concerned in the negotiations said last night: "What is the constitution between friends?"

Still After Rutherford.

Edmonton, Alta., March 9.—Insurgent leader Boyle has introduced a resolution in the Legislature "resenting the action of the Government in tampering with and stripping the files" relating to the Great Waterways Railway deal; while Stuart Sedgewick gives notice of a demand for "immediate and conclusive evidence" as to the whereabouts of $740,000 on the sale of the bonds as represented by the difference between sale at par, as claimed by the Government, and 110, as indicated by reports.

The Rush to America.

Southampton, Eng., March 9.—More than 6,000 steerage passengers have left Southampton for the United States within a fortnight, breaking all records.

Every steamer has taken her full capacity, while the Oceanic, which will sail to-day, was compelled to close her bookings nearly a week ago.

Emigrants unable to secure passage on the continent, are arriving here in great numbers daily, in the hope of reaching America by the British lines.

Railway Men Vote.

Chicago, March 9.—Counting of the ballots cast by firemen and engineers on about fifty railroads of the west, northwest and southwest, on the "strike vote," was completed yesterday.

According to the official returns 8 per cent. of the union men and 80 per cent. of the non-union employes voted for a strike.

Reverse For Merchants.

Ottawa, March 9.—Mr. Monk's bill respecting co-operative credit and loan societies was reported by the banking committee yesterday and an endeavor will be made to have it taken up as a Government measure.

A Clean Man

"Outside cleanliness" is less than half the battle. A man can scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Get health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, enables pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the chief unclean condition. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

Insane Man's Crime.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 9.—August Muller, for a time confined in an insane asylum, drew a revolver upon Policeman Dietz yesterday and killed him. Turning around to the startled people on the sidewalk, Muller emptied his weapon, wounding two, and started to run. He was captured and taken to the police station, where he shrieked for the Rockefellers and Vanderbilts to come and bail him out.

Wealthy Westmount.

Montreal, March 9.—Westmount claims to be the richest city in Canada.

Its assessment is $25,481,802, while its population of 13,500 figures out at $1,888 per head. The debt is only $128 per head and the municipal lighting plant shows a balance for the year of $50,000.

The tax rate is to be reduced at the end of the year.

King Edward In Paris.

Paris, March 9.—King Edward was received with military honors when he visited the palace yesterday. His Majesty had an interview with President Fallieres lasting half an hour.

Monday night King Edward attended the performance of "Chantecler." He repeatedly applauded heartily. The audience quickly recognized the sovereign and gave him an ovation.

NO INDIGESTION OR STOMACH DISORDER

No Gas, Heartburn, Headache or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later.

Why not get some now—this moment, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion? A dieted stomach gets the blues and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juice working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of gas, or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and dizziness and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of indigestion and upset stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines and besides one single dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as the sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When diapepsin works your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all stomach misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to take a little Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin because you want to become thoroughly cured this time.

Remember if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now you can get relief in five minutes.

His Foot On Single Tax

Although A. E. Fripp, Who Introduced the Measure, Allan Studholme and Hon. A. G. MacKay Think It Is a Good Move, the Premier Sees the Doctrines of Henry George, and Denounces It.

Toronto, March 9.—If any single taxers were present at the session of the Legislature yesterday afternoon, it must have grieved his heart to hear the ruthless way in which Premier Whitney put his foot down on Mr. Fripp's baby Henry George bill. The Prime Minister's foot came down so hard that the cradle was rudely upset and the baby cast beneath the wheels of the Government Juggernaut.

"There are a number of gentlemen who believe in the Henry George theory," said Sir James Whitney, when the House came to the amendment to the assessment act introduced by A. E. Fripp (West Ottawa). "Printed resolutions were sent all over the province; in fact there was a propaganda. And many municipalities did pass these resolutions, without much thought, as I believe.

"I am entirely in opposition to the proposition of this bill, but I think it just that it should be discussed, together with the bill of Hon. Mr. Hanna, as that is the only way that the matter can be brought to the notice of the members of this House and the people they represent."

Hon. W. J. Hanna recalled the arguments heard by the special committees on assessment and called attention to some of the features of the Government bill.

Religious institutions which were practically money-making concerns were to have exemption from taxes removed.

In connection with the proposal to raise the mass exemption to $1,200, he called attention to the fact that the assessment commissions of Toronto, Ottawa and London, made a practice of allowing the double expense of railway men at both ends of their run to be considered as a reduction of the salary.

Clubs were made liable to business assessment. Practically no farm assessment was left in cities under the new bill.

A. E. Fripp (West Ottawa) claimed that his bill had been misunderstood. It gave the municipalities, if they so desired, the power to put a higher tax rate on land than on improvements. People were beginning to consider the incidence of taxation, as was shown by the fact that 270 municipalities had passed resolutions in favor of the principle of his bill.

"Land values," said Mr. Fripp, "are given by the community, and not by the individual. It is the coming together of people that gives the value.

"In our effort to get at the income of the rich man," he continued, "we tax 99 people who can ill afford it."

Manitoba, he said, did not tax houses and building in rural districts, Alberta and Saskatchewan taxed land only. Australia had wiped out all personal property taxation whatever. Mr Fripp read from an American magazine, an article in which the exodus of American farmers to the Canadian west was ascribed to the new system of taxation which was springing up here.

Hon. A. G. MacKay was not shocked by Mr. Fripp's bill he said. It had worked out well in farming communities to give the assessor power not to assess improvements too high. He thought, however, that the matter should not be made one for conflict at annual municipal elections as to what the tax rate should be based on. He would prefer that any action taken should be along the lines of a resolution he himself had brought forward some years before, in which the tax rate on improvements, all over the province, was to be fixed at not more than 50 per cent. of their value.

Allan Studholme (East Hamilton) declared that there was "no Henry Georgeism about it—only a little wee bit." This was nothing to what they were doing in England.

In moving the second reading of his bill to amend the Ontario Railway Act, 1906, C. A. Brown (East Elgin) stated that it was intended to meet a grievance which existed on the electric line running from St. Thomas to Port Stanley, where passengers who got on between stations were charged double fare to the next station.

Hon. J. S. Hendrie said that when the bill was framed, it was thought that a two cent a mile rate would meet the difficulty, but it was found in the case of lines running on the highways that it was sometimes difficult to say just where a passenger got on.

Two bills of H. P. Innes (South Norfolk) to amend the public schools act and the truancy act were withdrawn on the suggestion of Hon. I. B. Lucas.

The bill of H. Eilber (South Huron) to give municipalities power to pass a second bylaw to raise debentures for telephone purposes after construction is begun, and they know better what the cost will be, passed its second reading.

Hon. J. S. Duff introduced a bill to extend the machinery now used to combat the San Jose scale to the ravages of codling moth, yellow, little peach, black knot, pear psylla and pear blight. It is made an offence to sell or import trees suffering from any of these troubles. By the new act a petition of 25 fruit-growers is necessary to the appointment of an inspector.

Majority For Miller Bill.

Ottawa, March 9.—A private meeting of the Parliamentary committee on the Miller anti-betting bill was held yesterday, and adjourned till Thursday.

It is believed that a majority of the committee favor the bill.

Suffered Terrible Pains From His Kidneys.

Perhaps no other organs work harder than the kidneys to preserve the general health of the body, and most people are troubled with some kind of kidney complaint, but do not suspect it.

There is no way of getting the kidney poisons out of the system except through the kidneys, and no medicine so effective in taking them out as Doan's Kidney Pills.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages.

Doan's Kidney Pills are entirely vegetable, and may be safely taken by old and young.

Mr. Dougald A. McIsaac, Broad Cove Banks, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for nine months, and suffered with such terrible pains across the small of my back all the time that I could hardly get around. After taking two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I began to feel better, and by the time I had taken three I was completely cured."

STANLEY CUP HAS HAD SOME INTERESTING HISTORY

Montreal, March 8.—It was in 1893 that Lord Stanley donated a silver trophy cup to be representative of the best hockey played in the Dominion. It has ever since been sought after by teams from Nova Scotia to the Yukon, and is now once more booked for a return to Montreal.

The date of St. Patrick's Day, 1902, is well remembered by Montrealers, when Montreal defeated Victoria, of Winnipeg, and started home with the cup. It was on that trip that the team was named "the little men of iron." They were the nucleus of the present Wanderers.

The cup has been played for since 1895, when Montreal defeated Queen's, and then were obliged to hand over the cup to the Victorias, as the latter had won the championship of the old Amateur Hockey Association of Canada.

Visits to Montreal of the Winnipeg Victorias will always remain fresh in the minds of hockey enthusiasts. That Winnipeg team flashed on Montrealers in February, 1896, as something new in the game, when they defeated the Montreal Victorias by a score of two to nil, and the white bowl went west for the first time.

The following December the Montreal Victorias went after the prize and captured it from Winnipeg, the score being six goals to Winnipeg's five. It was at that time the practice to determine the championship by a single contest.

The next match of any interest was in 1899, when the westerners came after the mug again. The series of three games ended in a dispute. The local Vics. won the first, and in the second they had a score of three goals to two, when Tony Gingras claimed he had been cut down by Bob Macdougall. The referee refused to allow the claim, and the visitors left the ice.

It was in this year that the Montreal Shamrocks came into form by winning the league championship. In the final match with the Victorias the Irishmen won by one to nil, Harry Trihey scoring the goal.

In 1900 Winnipeg came after the trophy, winning the first and losing the last two to Shamrocks. But in 1901 the western hockeyists were more successful, when they won the majority of the three games. Shamrocks had begun to decline in their play, and have never since assumed their old form as a team.

Reference has already been made to how Montreal went after the cup in 1902. Winnipeg came back again, but was defeated in a series of four games, one being a draw.

When Ottawa won the championship in 1903 the cup went to them, and they held it till 1906.

The E. C. H. A. had been formed in the fall of 1905, and in 1906 the Wanderers defended the cup successfully, but in 1908 they lost it to the Kenora Thistles in January, but won it back in March. Last year the Wanderers lost the championship and cup to Ottawa. Now, it is practically certain to return to Montreal.

The history of the cup has been the history of Ottawa and Wanderer clubs since 1903. Kenora held it for less than two months in 1908. Apart from that short period, it has been in the possession of Wanderers or Ottawa clubs, which have proved their superiority over all challengers, generally without much difficulty.

RENFREW SWAMPED OTTAWA BY UNUSUALLY WIDE MARGIN OF 17-2

Renfrew, March 9.—In a sensational, though one-sided, exhibition at the local rink last night, Renfrew defeated Ottawa by a score of 17 to 2, thus tieing the team from the capital for second place in the National League.

Last night's revenge was sweet for the Creamery Town septette, as they had vowed to trim Ottawa, and to win by such an overwhelming score caused the greatest of loyal rejoicing. The ice was hard and play fast, penalties being so numerous that the teams for the greater part of the second half fought it out with four men aside, Renfrew scoring five goals while playing five men against four. At one period Lindsay, Taylor and Frank Patrick were the only Renfrew players on the ice.

Ten minutes after the start of the first half Hay Millar and Roberts mixed things up, others joining in. Millar and Roberts were banished for the balance of the match. Towards the end of the game "Newsy" Lalonde and Lesuer almost punched each other's heads off in a fight, the two falling and fighting on the ice. Renfrew suffered 55 minutes in penalties and Ottawa 49.

Fred Taylor starred against his former team mates, scoring four goals, one of which he scored while skating backwards, thus fulfilling the promise which he made in Ottawa at the commencement of the season. The Ottawa team was without Fred Lake, who is ill, but Renfrew played the greatest hockey of its career in last night's match and Ottawa never had a look-in. There came near being no game on account of the failure of Bob Meldrum to appear as referee. Chauncy Kirby refused to go on without him, and over an hour elapsed, with two thousand people waiting in the cold rink before they agreed on Herb Jordan, of Renfrew and Ken Mallen of Ottawa. Play was very rough throughout, and the defeat coming as a bitter pill to Ottawa. There is now a likelihood of home and home games between these teams. The line-up:

Referee—Herb. Jordan, Renfrew. Judge of play—Ken Mallen, Ottawa.

JEFF TRAINING

At Present Big Fellow is on a Ten-Day Hunting Trip.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 8.—Jim Jeffries will train for his fight with Jack Johnson at a resort in the mountains near Santa Cruz, where a camp will be established April 1. This announcement was made last night by Sam Berger shortly after his arrival here for a conference with the fighter.

Jeffries will leave here to-morrow for a ten-days' hunting trip in the Tehachipi Mountains. After to-day he will do no more regular training until he goes into camp. Jeffries yesterday did eight miles of road work, running three miles at full speed without apparent effort.

Berger says that Jim Corbett and Frank Gotch will join Jeffries at the Santa Cruz camp June 1st. Until then he will be assisted by Roger Cornell, of San Francisco, and Armstrong and Burns, the wrestler. Until about May he will not do any heavy work. Sporting circles here are interested in the referee question. It is thought that Jeffries favours Charles Eyton, of Los Angeles, if Johnston will accept. Ed. Smith also has been suggested as referee.

REACH'S GUIDE

Annual Harbinger of the Baseball Season Has Arrived.

Reach's Official American League Guide for 1910, published by the A. J. Reach Company, of Philadelphia, and edited by Mr. Francis C. Richter, of "Sporting Life," is out, and is, as usual, first in the field, thus making it the harbinger of the base ball season. It can be said without any qualification that, excellent as all of the editions of the Reach Guide have been in recent years, the 1910 Guide is the best hand book of the kind ever issued by this or any other publisher. The special distinction of the 1910 Guide is, next to the text, quality of paper used and the number and beauty of the engravings furnished, the world's championship series being specially well dowered with splendid action pictures. The American League Guide for 1910 is in all respects a first-class hand book for the National game and a decided credit to the American League and to the publishers, the Reach Company. This is the ninth annual issue of the Reach Guide as the official handbook of the American League and the twenty-eighth consecutive year of its publication as a book of record and reference for the entire baseball world.

sonable prejudices, which often exist against evangelistic services.

The Rev. Mr. Potter reported for the Social and Moral Reform Committee. The Presbytery adopted the following recommendations:

1.—That in communities where there are a number of licenses that efforts be made to reduce them to the minimum.

2.—That the Presbytery undertake to press the signing of the Total Abstinence pledge throughout the bounds of the Presbytery and as far as possible get an enrollment of all pledged members.

3.—That the subject of gambling be discussed publicly, because of its great national character, and that the entire Presbytery be aroused to the terrible hold the awful vice has upon many of the public men of Canada, and that, because of the growing and dangerous tendency in the use of cards for profit or prize, our ministers be enjoined to discourage such use of card playing in Christian homes.

4.—That the work of the Lord's Day Alliance in its fight against the desecration of the Lord's Day be encouraged and supported.

That the Presbytery place on record its high appreciation of the work of Mr. A. W. Beall, M.A., in his very commendable work of urging the claims of personal purity upon the hearts and consciences of the youth of our communities, and that our ministers be asked to encourage this work and assist Mr. Beall in his entrance to the schools within the bounds of the Presbytery.

AUDITORIUM ROLLER RINK

First Roller Skating of the Season To-night.

The Auditorium Roller Rink, George Street, will open up to-night with the Band in attendance. Floor in first class condition. Accommodation and attention all that could be desired.

BIG BONSPIEL AT CURLING RINK

Although the snow was not banked four or five feet high up against the front walls, nor did pedestrians pass in the streets with hands held over their ears to protect them from the weather, everything was as like midwinter inside the curling rink this afternoon when the district bonspiel was begun as it could possibly be under the existing conditions. Past Master of the ancient art of making ice, one Angus McIntosh had a splendid sheet of the slippery stuff and as the curlers gathered before one o'clock satisfaction was general and profound. Seven rinks were waiting for the preliminary games and from the present outlook the bonspiel is going to be a big success. The curlers had not given up hope, in fact they knew it was coming all the time and were prepared for the announcement that the bonspiel was on, although the general public were looking in the old apple trees for a stray robin or bluebird. Indications point to quite a number of visiting rinks and the curlers are enthusiastic over the coming contests. The seven skips who lined up their trusty followers were as follows:

Davidson vs. Brown.
Lang vs. Hall.
Neill vs. Moore.
McIntyre vs. Smith (Keene.)
Buchanan (Hastings) vs. Connal.
Yeates vs. Waddell.
Talbot vs. Kenneally (Keene.)

The games will be played through and will suffice to bring to a most satisfactory close one of the best seasons in the history of the local curlers.

Eczema Must Yield To
THE WONDERFUL, SOOTHING, HEALING INFLUENCE OF
DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

There is one thing you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to do every time, and that is to cure eczema. There is no more severe test to which an ointment can be put, and because Dr. Chase's Ointment triumphed over eczema it has become the standard Ointment.

When another ointment is praised it is said to be as good as Dr. Chase's. And this illustrates the high position held by this preparation.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for eczema and other skin diseases. One son while nursing broke out with running, watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered untold agony. He became weak and frail, would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their poor little ones may be saved from suffering."

Do not be satisfied with the experience of others, but put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test when occasion arises. Try it for chafing and irritation of the skin, for chapped and cracked hands, for chilblains and frost bites, for sores and burns. It is delightfully soothing and healing. 60c. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

GOING WEST

James Kenney, of Fowler's corners, with his five sons, are loading several cars of effects at the C.P.R. station to-day preparatory to leaving for the West to-morrow morning. They have secured 430 acres of choice farm land south of Oxbow, Sask., and are going in for farming on an extensive scale. The family is well known in this vicinity and particularly in the township of Smith. They will be greatly missed in the neighbourhood they are leaving, but they bear the best wishes for future success from their many friends.

BAD STOMACH

Many in Peterborough are Being Thoroughly Purified by Miona, the Guaranteed Cure for Indigestion.

People of Peterborough, who suffer from dyspepsia and other stomach troubles are getting tired of taking preparations containing pepsin, because pepsin simply digests the food artificially. Pepsin relieves, it never cures.

And remember, pepsin only digests animal food; it has no effect on starchy food, such as potatoes, rice, bread, etc.

Mi-o-na cleanses and purifies the stomach and bowels, and tones up and puts energy into the stomach walls, so that they properly mix the food with the natural digestive juices of the stomach.

Mi-o-na tablets quickly arouse the stomach from its inaction, and in a few days it is able to do its work easily and without exertion. There will be no more sour stomach, fermentation of food, dizziness, sick headache, belching of gas ,or foul breath.

Mi-o-na only costs 50 cents a large box, and is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure dyspepsia, sea or car sickness ,vomiting of pregnancy, and stomach sickness resulting from overindulgence of the night before, or money back.

HYOMEI

REMARKABLE INCREASE IN EARNINGS

The Duluth-Superior Traction Company has been showing remarkable increases in earnings during the last few months, the gross earnings for January and February having increased by 13.9 per cent. over the same months last year, while the net for January gained 55.97 per cent. over January, 1909.

It is understood that the Company is publishing a very full report for last year, which will be out of the printers' hands shortly, and which in a most conservative way, will emphasize the value of the Company's franchises. It is claimed the stock will sell much higher in view of the following factors: the large current earnings, the rapid growth of the cities' populations, the immense works of the United States Steel Corporation under way in West Duluth, and a comparatively near increase in dividend to 5 per cent, to which the current rate of earning point. The shares are likely soon to be listed in New York.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"MOLLY MAY."

To make use of the language of one of its characters "Molly May", the Julian Edwards' musical comedy presented at the Grand last night by Grace La Rue and Company, was "tasty, very tasty". The audience was unfortunately not as large as the excellence of the presentation merited, but what it lacked in numbers it made up in enthusiasm and Miss La Rue and her clever support got a warm reception. "Molly May" was voted one of the season's most popular musical offerings. It was bright, amusing, crammed with tuneful music, and funny situations, and while the plot is not strikingly new the author has managed to extract the last drop of merriment and the result is a very pleasing entrtainment.

Miss La Rue made a spontaneous hit in the title role, her dancing, singing and pleasing presence winning her ubouded applause. Sidney Grant, the chief comedian, shared the honours of the evening with her and the audience regretted that this clever funmaker had not more opportunities.

The song hit was an interpolated number, "Has Anybody Seen Kelly" which was sung by Miss La Rue and Mr. Grant, won repeated encores, and the audience could not seem to get enough of this item. "Baby Grand", "I Only Drink for Friendship's Sake" and "Molly May" were other big winners.

The horus sang beautifully and the costumes and scenery were of an unusually high standard.

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE

The possibilities offered for speculation at Entwhistle, Alberta, seem to be favourably looked upon by people of Peterborough, if one can judge from the number of inquiries about the matter that have been made of Mr. S. J. Thomas, who is in the city in the interests of the Pembina Townsite Company. A company with a capital of four million dollars has been formed to work the coal mines there, and the prospects are for a marvellous development. Already $50,000 worth of town sites have been purchased and the lots are in much demand. Mr. Thomas will be at the Oriental hotel to-night and to-morrow or may be seen at A. Brown & Co's real estate office, Water St. He will be pleased to give intended investors any information about Entwhistle that they desire to know.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST TOWN CLERK OF LINDSAY

Mr. J. D. Flavelle of Citizens' League Tells Council That Clerk Allowed Voters Not Properly Qualified to Vote on Local Option By-law.

INVESTIGATON ORDERED

Lindsay, March 10.—The aftermath of the "local option" election in January last threatens to be of the most exciting kind, so far as this town is concerned, for some time.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Town Council a deputation of the Citizens' League, headed by Mr. J. D. Flavelle and Mr. A. D. Kitchner, waited on the Council and in unmistakable terms made grave charges against the Clerk and Treasurer of the town, Mr. Fred Knowlson. The accusation was "that the Clerk had allowed eighteen voters to vote on the income list who had not paid their taxes, and had also tampered with the voters' lists and allowed names on the list that were assessed from $150 to $275, while according to the act no names should be on the list assessed under $300."

Mr. J. D. Flavelle supported the charge by reading a list of names on the voters' list that should not be there. "One would naturally expect that there would at least be some of these voters on both sides in regard to the issues, but such is not the case, as they are all on the same side—the side opposed to local option. It is largely for the purpose of protecting the town, and also the town clerk, that the charges are made. The Clerk had the information as a practical collector and enfranchised men not entitled to vote. It is an exceedingly bad thing to have thirty-five men enfranchised who the Clerk knew were not entitled to vote."

Mayor Begg regretted very much to hear the charges made. The charges could not be overlooked, and he appointed the entire Council to act as a committee to investigate them.

It is but fair to Clerk Knowlson to say that he was entirely unaware of the charges. He thought the attack was unfair, and he denied the charges, claiming that the names went on the list without his knowledge and that but few of the voters were known to him. Mr. Knowlson is a gentleman of high repute in the town and has been Clerk and Treasurer for a very long period, managing the finances and the affairs of the town in a highly creditable manner. His many friends here strongly hope that when the matter is thoroughly sifted—as it certainly will be by the committee—he will be able to extricate himself from the unpleasant charges made against him.

Farmer Fights With Mad Dog

Powerful Collie Made Savage Attack —Rabies in County of Perth.

Stratford, March 10.—A valuable collie dog belonging to a farmer named Robert Rice, living in the vicinity of Fullarton Village, Perth County, was seized with an attack of rabies and gave his owner an awful fight before being killed. The animal, which had been confined over night, showed strange symptoms on being let out in the morning and the farmer followed it to the barn. It was equipped with the regulation metallic muzzle, but tore it off and chewed it to pieces. It then attacked the farmer, who seized a piece of gas pipe and succeeded in reaching the house, although he had to fight every foot of ground, as the dog was very large and powerful. Securing his gun, however, he shot the animal.

is most difficult to describe. To say it is artistic, or exclusive, or select, is vague and amounts to little; particularly when similar claims are made by many others.

Words cost nothing. It is so easy to say our stock is better, cheaper, more artistic and desirable than that of others; but such assertions are not always convincing to one of knowledge and experience.

Therefore we ask that you personally come and see what we have to offer. We shall gladly accept the verdict of your judgment. Upon this basis we ask your patronage, for by this policy we have won recognition from a discriminating and experienced clientele. But again we say, come in and see for yourself. We are supremely confident that you will not be disappointed.

A CASE OF RABIES HAS DEVELOPED AT MILLBROOK

Reginald Given Was Bitten a Week Ago—Examination Shows the Dog Was Diseased.

THE CASE IS SERIOUS

Millbrook, March 9.—Word was received here to-day from Toronto to the effect that an examination of the head of the dog which, Thursday last, bit Reginald Given, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. W. S. Given, proprietor of the Reporter, showed that the dog was suffering from rabies in an advanced stage.

When the boy went home Thursday morning a chum's dog followed him and a fight ensued between his dog and a strange one that had been under Mrs. Given's verandah since some time on Wednesday. In trying to part them Reginald was rather severely bitten on his wrist. No owner could be found for the "tramp" dog, so the Health Officer ordered it shot and its head was sent to Dr. Hodgetts of Toronto. The other dog has been tied up until to-day, when it also was destroyed.

The report from Toronto says it is one of the worst cases that has come under the notice of the Department, and is causing much anxiety, because it is not within the district to which it was supposed the disease was confined. Many dogs in town have had encounters with either of the two dogs that have been dispatched, and fear is expressed that some of them may develop the disease and bite people on the street, as all the dogs in town run at large.

Mr. Given and Reginald leave for Toronto in the morning, where the latter will take the Pasteur treatment.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMEN'S MISSION CIRCLE

Murray Street Baptist Church Organization Held Successful Meeting on Tuesday Afternoon.

REPORTS RECEIVED

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of Murray Street Baptist Church was held Tuesday afternoon. After the opening exercises the President, Mrs. Hunter, read the Scripture lesson.

The Secretary's report followed, showing a present membership of ninety-four, an increase of ten over last year. Some removals had lessened the membership, but, by the special effort of Mrs. Webb, seventeen new names were added.

Special study each month of the Mission fields of to-day is increasing the knowledge and interest in missionary work.

The Treasurer's reports for the year were as follows:

Foreign Missions	$130.47
Home Missions	78.12
North West Indians	20.00
Monthly collections	9.39
Mission Band	77.69

Officers for the year:
President—Mrs. Hunter.
Vice-President—Mrs. Scott.
1st Vice President—Mrs. Wood.
Secretary—Mrs. Dunlop.
Home Mission Treasurer—Miss Aldridge.
Foreign Mission Treasurer — Mrs. Eastwood.
Collector for N. W. Indians—Mrs. Scott.
Collector for Medical Fund—Mrs. Downham.
Collector for Mite Fund — Mrs. Wood.
Collectors for Circle dues:
Mrs. Chalmers, Mrs. Wm. Montgomery, Miss Matthews, Miss Cochrane.

Prayer of thanksgiving was offered by Mrs. Huycke, and a solo rendered by Mrs. Hunt.

Miss M. A. Nichols gave a most interesting synopsis of the women's work in Telugu, dividing it into three parts, viz.:

Religious, Medical and Educational. Then a brief outline of the Home Work, which extends from Belleville to Rainy River District, was given.

Mrs. Fee, who has spent fully fifteen years in China, gave a soul-stirring address on her work among the Chinese. Its importance was made very clear as she pointed out the vast extent of work to be done in that densly-populated land and the discouragement, almost disheartening, in trying to gain the confidence of the Chinese women. "But," said the speaker, "What costs us little is little esteemed, and once the confidence is gained, it is wonderful what capacity for spiritual enlightenment there is in these people."

Words of appreciation were tendered to Mrs. Fee by Mrs. T. F. Matthews and were heartily endorsed by all present.

After the benediction by Rev. J. R. Webb, light refreshments were served by the members of the Circle.

Demand For Pasteur Treatment Is Spreading

Toronto, March 9.—The demands on Ontario's Pasteur treatment are increasing. Up to last night seventeen patients were undergoing treatment at the hands of Dr. C. A. Hodgetts and Dr. J. A. Amyot. Yesterday a boy was brought in from Berlin who had experienced a rather severe bite from a canine believed to have been suffering from rabies.

It is not unlikely that, on the advice of Dr. J. G. Rutherford, the Veterinary-General, the Dominion Government will enlarge the territory now under muzzling regulations. Should this action be determined upon, the Provincial Government will again co-operate in its enforcement.

The extension, if made, will be the result of the fact that already the rabies epidemic has spread beyond the present confines of the regulations. Heads of animals killed as a result of contagion, are forwarded to Ottawa, when an analysis is desired. In cases where the animals have bitten human beings the heads are sent to the Provincial laboratory.

The laboratory officials issued a statement to the Provincial Secretary's Department yesterday of the cases in which the diagnosis had been positive. From February 21 to the end of that month positive cases of rabies were diagnosed from Monkton, Guelph St. Thomas, Toronto, Strathroy, Hamilton and Niagara Falls. During the present month the rabie heads received come from Rodney, Harriston, Dundas, Forest, Aldershot, Millbrook, Hamilton, Highgate, Lobo Township, Burgessville, Guelph, Ingersoll and Waterloo.

The case from Millbrook is the one which has caused the gravest anxiety to the Provincial Department, coupled with the reports from the Dominion Department. It was an advanced case located in Durham county, which is not within the district under regulation at present.

The departments are conferring, and the indications are that in the near future the regulations must be extended to other portions of the Province.

THE VALUE OF TURPENTINE

When all else fails the physician recommends his wealthy patient to take a trip to the turpentine groves as a cure for throat and lung troubles. The turpentine of commerce cannot very well be used but by adding linseed Dr. Chase succeeded in getting up the most effective treatment for throat and lung troubles that was ever discovered. It is known as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

The caretaker will be at the Street Railway Rink every evening this week between 8 and 9 o'clock, when people may get toboggans belonging to them. The owners of all toboggans, left at the rink during the Summer, will be charged 50c storage.

Several Thousand More Went Out To-day.

Special to The Examiner.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 10.—The general strike is spreading. Several thousands of strikers went out to-day as the result of the state federation of labours' action calling for State wide strike. Labour leaders declared this morning that between 140,000 and 150,000 men and women had left their shops and offices. General encouragement was manifest as a result of the action taken at Newcastle which ultimately may bring about a struggle of national scope.

SPECTACLES
Should be Changed

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and then go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether anychange has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity for such be not apparent to them. As a general rule, spectacles for close work require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every 2 years.

EASY MONEY.

Conservative journals and politicians are fond of jibing the Federal Government over the purchase for $5,000 of wharf sites from parties who had only paid $700 for them, an eightfold increase in value. This is nothing to the sale by the Ontario Government of a mine on the Gillies' Limit for $10,500, which was shortly after sold for $330,000, a more than thirtyfold advance. There is something to be explained about this sale. It was by action of which such brief and imperfect advertisement was made that only those who had inside information as to the value of the property could make a safe bid. This was after the limit had been withdrawn from prospecting. The matter was brought up before the public accounts committee, in Toronto, on Tuesday, and the revelation that two tenderers had made a pot of money gives ground for something like suspicion. A twenty-acre lot, described A 23, was purchased by J. J. Young and M. J. O'Brien for $10,500. After spending about $3,500 in developing the existence of ore bodies these gentlemen sold the lot for $330,000, and the new purchasers, in gratitude for the value they had got at that price, named the mine "Wyandoh," an orthographical combination of the initial letters of the surnames of the original lucky purchasers and luckier settlers, Young and O'Brien. Now, there is room for believing that the people of the province have not received their fair share of rake-off in this transaction. As has been pointed out, "the rights and interests of the people have been sacrificed, either through the grossest stupidity in adopting a policy that would prevent ordinary buyers forming any idea of the value of what was being sold, or by schemes and devices suspected by many of the friends as well as opponents of the Government." This thing happening thus early in the administration of this wealthy region by the Whitney Government, suggests the advisability of a little extra vigilance over future administration. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, seems to have thought that everything was condoned when he explained before the Committee that the Government's share in the mine is a ten per cent. royalty. He omitted to take into account, the fact that if the Government had properly prospected the limit and gained an approximate idea of the value of the plots put up to auction, the price of $330,000, instead of $10,500, might have been secured to the provincial coffers and the Government or the people would still have had its ten per cent. royalty—a gain of $319,500 to begin with.

BRITISH OPINION OF CANADA.

For the past month Parliament has echoed with super-heated denunciation of Canada's "tin-pot" navy and super-loyal declarations that the Canadian policy involved in the naval bill did not appeal to the approval of the British people or satisfy the condition of Imperial peril that justified one of the opposition stop-gap proposals—a charity gift of 20 or 25 millions to the Mother Country for naval construction. While the hollowness of these denunciations and declarations of facts have been abundantly exposed and disproved, it may be well to submit further evidence from a source outside the House to show that the Canadian naval policy has the sympathy of the home people. Mr. A. W. Atwater, K.C., by the way a prominent Conservative and a former member of the Conservative government of Quebec, has returned to Montreal after a two months' visit to England where he has had an especially favourable opportunity of getting in touch with popular and official sentiment, and to gauge public opinion upon domestic and imperial relations. In an interview given to the Montreal Gazette, Conservative, Mr. Atwater, referring to English feeling on Canada's naval policy, said:

"What the Englishman admires is a fellow who can stand up for himself, and what I found they admire in Canada is the effort she is making to build up a fleet of her own. They admire and respect the capacity of Canada and any nation or dependency to look after itself. Hitherto there has been a patronizing air about the English with regard to Canada, because they knew that if we got into trouble they would have to look after us, but if Canada gets her own navy and can look after herself that will all change. The sooner we get our own navy the better—it is a necessity that must come, and there is no use delaying it. We must look after ourselves in a naval way just as we do in military matters. There is no doubt that is the feeling amongst the English people, and they regard it as a matter quite outside the domain of party politics, as it should be."

"The general opinion I got during my stay in England," said Mr. Atwater, "was that we should earn the respect of the people of the Mother Country more by showing our ability to defend ourselves than we could by any mere money contribution, unless it was to a very large amount and a permanent contribution. And that would not commend itself to many Canadians, nor could it be advocated by any party here. The opinion of all observers of Imperial affairs was that they would have more respect for any portion of the Empire which prepared to defend itself than for one which proposed to give a more or less—probably less—adequate sum toward the upkeep of the Imperial navy.

Mr. Atwater added with no little emphasis:

"And with this I quite agree," said Mr. Atwater. "As a matter of keeping our own self-respect, as well as the respect of the Mother Country, we should secure our own navy and the sooner we get it in good working order the better. It will take a long time to do this, even with the assistance of England's enormous experience in naval affairs. And it seems to me that Canadians should join in this work irrespective of all party affiliations."

This naval project, is attracting much attention in England, and the people there are struck with the idea of the overseas dominions building ships and manning them with their own crews for Imperial defence. In just the same way the Mother Country is deeply impressed with the manner in which Canada and the other Dominions sent their soldiers to the other Dominions sent their soldiers to fight in South Africa, where a mere money contribution would either have gone unnoticed, or been regarded as a pusillanimous manner of accepting the duty of defending the Empire. Great Britain is very wealthy, and a contribution of even thirty million pounds would be a mere matter of Empire bookkeeping, and would not tend to reduce their taxation. But actual physical and personal participation in the Empire burden fired the British imagination, and excited their admiration. As Hon. Mr. Emmerson pointed out in the House on Thursday afternoon in contrasting the Opposition and Government proposal and policy respectively, Mr. Borden's plan to make a cash contribution was a mere matter of expediency. The money would be lost and unnoticed in the immense naval expenditure of the Mother Country, while the building of a Canadian navy indicated a permanent policy, a dignified act in shouldering a share of the burdens of imperial defence, a tangible evidence of loyalty and not a temporary spirit of generosity, burdensome to the giver and insignificant to the receiver, if indeed the home government would accept the gift under the humiliation involved.

DR. PYNE'S POLICY.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In an interview Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education for Ontario, declares that the county model schools have gone for good. Dr. Pyne says the public do not understand the Government's policy, and hence there is much criticism.

Of course the people in the rural communities do not understand that there is a great dearth of school teachers, and when there were model schools lots of teachers could be had.

The policy of the Government in this regard has had three outstanding effects. It has increased teachers' salaries, a very desirable accomplishment; it has lessened the number of teachers to a famine status, something not so desirable; and it has shut the door of the teaching profession to many a poor boy or girl who cannot afford to pay for a year's tuition in an expensive city normal school.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Victoria Times: All that Mr. Foster has gained by his appeal to the courts is a further circulation of the matter of his notorious connection with the speculative Union Trust Company, which operated largely with trust funds, and a complete vindication of the freedom of the press in its criticism of the actions of men in public life. Mr. Foster in his wrath threatens to appeal for a new trial. But there is very little probability of his carrying the matter to a higher court. He has probably gained all the notoriety and publicity he desires for the present.

HEART TO HEART TALK IS ENDED

American Tariff Delegates Leave For Home After Conference.

Ottawa, March 9th.—The negotiations between the Canadian Government and the representatives of the United States came to a conclusion last night and the delegates from Washington will leave for home to-day.

The only official announcement made as to the result of the negotiations is that the exchange of views and the discussions throughout have been of the most friendly and frank character; and that it is hoped as a result of the better mutual understanding reached as to the respective American and Canadian views on the aspects of the tariff problem under consideration, there will be a mutually satisfactory and peaceful outcome. The proceedings were naturally of a confidential nature and no announcement can be made as to what transpired, pending the report which the American delegates make to the Government at Washington.

It was stated in these columns last week immediately after their arrival that the mission of Messrs. Emery and Pepper was for purposes of investigation and gathering information at first hand as to the feature of Canada's fiscal policy.

They had no plenary powers to promise any tariff concessions in the future by the United States to Canada in return for any which might be made by Canada, and consequently no definite agreement as to mutual concessions, either present or in the future, could be made.

At the same time it can be stated that as a result of the clarifying exchange of opinions the outlook is bright for a continuance of friendly trade relations between Canada and the United States. Indeed it seems probable that the "heart to heart talk" of the past few days between the Canadian and American representatives will open the way to a more satisfactory reciprocity in trade between the two countries than has obtained since the Dingley tariff went into effect in 1897.

Canada suffered considerably by that tariff with respect to access to the American markets. The consequent trade agreement with the motherland and with France, and contemplated agreements with Germany, Italy and Belgium are the result of the raising of the American tariff barrier against Canada.

Now that the United States is at last seeking more favourable terms from Canada, the Government here has expressed willingness to deal with the United States as with all other countries, in the matter of making mutually beneficial agreements on a fair basis of concession for concession.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Peterboro' People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache, and urinary disorders. Peterborough evidence proves this statement.

Mrs. George Hawes of 857 Water St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I suffered for some time with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble and although I had tried many remedies and doctors I found little or no relief. My back was weak and a dull bearing down pain had settled across the small of it and extended into my shoulders, and around my sides. I was weak and languid and the least exertion would tire me out. Dizzy spells were frequent and often I would awake with a severe headache. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at Wm. Madill's Pharmacy and soon found them to benefit me. I continued their use and in a comparatively short time I was as well and strong as ever without a symptom of the painful and long standing disease."

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—MRS. ALVENA SPERLING, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"I dare say," he said in English, and when the old statesman glared at him he said in German, "No doubt you are speaking the truth."

"Of course I speak the truth, but this is a matter for action and not for discussion. That packet was stolen by intention and not by chance, John Armitage!"

There was a slight immaterial sound in the hall, and the old prime minister slipped from German to French without changing countenance as he continued:

"We have enough troubles in Austria without encouraging treason. If Rambaud and his chief, Winkelried, could make a king of Francis, the brokerage—the commission—would be something handsome, and Winkelried and Rambaud are clever men."

"I know of Winkelried. The continental press has given much space to him of late, but Rambaud is a new name."

"He is a skilled hand. He is the most daring scoundrel in Europe."

Count von Stroebel poured a glass of brandy from a silver flask and sipped it slowly.

"I will show you the gentleman's pleasant countenance," said the minister, and he threw open a leather portfolio and drew from it a small photograph, which he extended to Armitage, who glanced at it carelessly and then with sudden interest.

"Rambaud!" he exclaimed.

"That's his name in Vienna. In Paris he is something else. I will furnish you a list of his noms de guerre."

"Thank you. I should like all the information you care to give me. But it may amuse you to know that I have seen the gentleman before."

"That is possible," remarked the old man, who never evinced surprise in any circumstances.

"I expect to see him here within a few days."

Count von Stroebel held up his empty glass and studied it attentively

"Rambaud!" he exclaimed.

while he waited for Armitage to explain why he expected to see Rambaud in Geneva.

"He is interested in a certain young woman. She reached here yesterday, and Rambaud, alias Chauvenet, is quite likely to arrive within a day or so."

"Jules Chauvenet is the correct name. I must inform my men," said the minister.

"You wish to arrest him?"

"You ought to know me better than that, Mr. John Armitage! Of course I shall not arrest him. But I must get that packet. I can't have it peddled all over Europe, and I can't advertise my business by having him arrested here. If I could catch him once in Vienna I should know what to do with him. He and Winkelried got hold of our plans in that Bulgarian affair last year and checkmated me. He carries his wares to the best buyers—Berlin and St. Petersburg. So there's a woman, is there? I've found that there usually is!"

"There's a very charming young American girl, to be more exact."

The old man growled and eyed Armitage sharply, while Armitage studied the photograph.

"I hope you are not meditating a preposterous marriage. Go back where you belong, make a proper marriage and wait"—

"Events!" And John Armitage laughed. "I tell you, sir, that waiting is not my forte. That's what I like about America. They're up and at it over there. The man who waits is lost."

"They're a lot of swine!" rumbled Von Stroebel's heavy bass.

"I still owe allegiance to the Schomburg crown, so don't imagine you are hitting me. But the swine are industrious and energetic. Who knows but that John Armitage might become famous among them—in politics, in finance! But for the deplorable accident of foreign birth he might become president of the United States. As it is, there are thousands of other offices worth getting—why not?"

"I tell you not to be a fool. You are young and fairly clever."

Armitage laughed at the reluctance of the count's praise.

"Thank you, with all my heart."

"Go back where you belong and you will have no regrets. Something may happen—who can tell? Events—events—if a man will watch and wait and study events. But"—he gulped down more of the brandy—"where and how do you live?"

"Where? I own a cattle ranch in Montana, and since the archduke's death I have lived there. He carried about £50,000 to America with him. He took care that I should get what was left when he died, and I am almost afraid to tell you that I have actually augmented my inheritance. Just before I left I bought a place in Virginia to be near Washington when I got tired of the ranch."

"Washington!" snorted the count. "In due course it will be the storm center of the world."

"You read the wrong American newspapers," laughed Armitage.

They were silent for a moment, in which each was busy with his own thoughts. Then the count remarked in as amiable a tone as he ever used:

"Your French is first rate. Do you speak English as well?"

"As readily as German, I think. You may recall that I had an English tutor, and maybe I did not tell you in that interview at Paris that I had spent a year at Harvard university."

"What the devil did you do that for?" growled Von Stroebel.

"From curiosity or ambition, as you like. I was in Cambridge at the law school for a year before the archduke died. That was three years ago. I am twenty-eight, as you may remember. I am detaining you; I have no wish to rake over the past, but I am sorry—I am very sorry—we can't meet on some common ground."

"I ask you to abandon this democratic nonsense and come back and make a man of yourself. You might go far—very far—but this democracy has hold of you like a disease."

"What you ask is impossible. It is just as impossible now as it was when we discussed it in Paris last year. To sit down in Vienna and learn how to keep that leaning tower of an empire from tumbling down like a stack of bricks—it does not appeal to me."

"Don't talk to me like that. It is not amusing."

"No; it is not funny. To see men like you fetching and carrying for a dull king, who would drop through the gallows or go to planting turnips without your brains—it does not appeal to my sense of humor or to my imagination. If I were going to furnish the brains for an empire I should ride in the state carriage myself and not be merely the driver on the box, who keeps the middle of the road and looks out for sharp corners. Here is a plan ready to my hand. Let me find that lost document, appear in Vienna and announce myself Frederick Augustus, the son of the Archduke Karl! I knew both men intimately. You may remember that Frederick and I were born in the same month. I, too, am Frederick Augustus! We passed commonly in America as brothers. Many of the personal effects of Karl and Augustus are in my keeping—by the archduke's own wish. You have spent your life studying human nature, and you know as well as I do that half the world would believe my story if I said I was the emperor's nephew. In the uneasy and unstable condition of your absurd empire I should be hailed as a diversion, and then—events, events!"

Count von Stroebel listened with narrowing eyes, and his lips moved in an effort to find words with which to break in upon this impious declaration. When Armitage ceased speaking, the old man sank back and glared at him.

"Karl did his work well. You are quite mad. You will do well to go back to America before the police discover you."

Armitage rose, and his manner changed abruptly.

"I do not mean to trouble or annoy you. Please pardon me! Let us be friends if we can be nothing more."

"It is too late. The chasm is too deep. I have given my life—my whole life, as you have said—to one service, to upbold one idea. You have spoken of that work with contempt. History, I believe, will reckon it justly."

"Your place is secure. No one can gainsay that," broke in Armitage.

"If you would do something for me—for me—do something for Austria, do something for my country and yours! You have wits. I dare say you have courage. I don't care what that service may be. I don't care where or how you perform it. I am not so near gone as you may think. I know well enough that they are waiting for me to die. But I am in no hurry to afford my enemies that pleasure. But stop this babble of yours about democracy. Do something for Austria—for the empire that I have held here under my hand these difficult years—then take your name again, and you will find that kings can be as just and wise as mobs."

"For the empire—something for the empire?" murmured the young man, wondering.

Count Ferdinand von Stroebel rose.

"You will accept the commission. I am quite sure you will accept. I leave on an early train, and I shall not see you again." As he took Armitage's hand he scrutinized him once more with particular care. There was a lingering caress in his touch as he detained the young man for an instant. Then he sighed heavily.

"Good night! Goodby!" he said abruptly, and waved his caller toward the door.

Had Given Up All Hope of Living.

Heart Trouble Cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Grattan's, N.B., writes:—"In the year 1905, I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a case like mine. I consulted the very best doctors, but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly cross the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak nobody in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.

"One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better, but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say, 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' I took two boxes and three doses out of the third one, and I was perfectly well and have not been sick since then.

"I will never be without them in my home for God knows if it had not been for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I would not be alive now."

Price, 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Fifteen Years for Fritch.

Detroit, Mich., March 10.—Geo. A. Fritch was yesterday sentenced to serve 7 1-2 to 15 years in the state penitentiary at Jackson for manslaughter in causing last August, by an unlawful operation, the death of Maybelle Millman of Ann Arbor.

Judge James Phelan, in making the usual recommendation under the indeterminate sentence law, recommended that Fritch serve fifteen years.

Reducing Number of Stops.

Montreal, March 10.—The Lancaster rules making trains slow up at crossings have been modified. The commissioners and their inspectors have ridden on the train with a view to reducing the number of stops, and trainmen now say that on through trains like the Montreal to Chicago, the schedule can now be lived up to, although on locals there is still a delay of from ten minutes to half an hour.

May Drop Insurance Bill.

Victoria, March 10.—The royal commission on fire insurance find that there is bitter opposition to the proposed insurance bill, and it may be withdrawn. The bill proposes that all insurance companies doing business in the province should put up a $30,000 guarantee, that a inspector be appointed, and that an enquiry be instituted into the cause of every fire Engine Exploded.

Hoxie, Ark., March 10.—While running at the rate of 30 miles an hour, the boiler of a freight engine on the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway exploded one mile east of here Tuesday night, killing the engineer, fireman and brakeman.

Interfered in Dog Fight and Is Bitten.

Kingston, March 10.—While trying to separate three dogs fighting on the barracks square, Sergt. Hart of B Battery was badly bitten about the face and neck by one dog, which was shot and the head sent to Toronto to be examined for rabies.

ALBERTA'S GOVERNMENT

Liberal Chieftain of Prairie Province In Valedictory Address Declares That He Was Betrayed by Members of His Own Party, Who Led Hon. Mr. Cushing Astray—He Refused All Graft.

Edmonton, Alta., March 10.—Premier Rutherford is expected to formally resign the administration of Alberta Government to-day. With him will go the remnant of his Cabinet, Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. P. E. Lessard, Minister without portfolio.

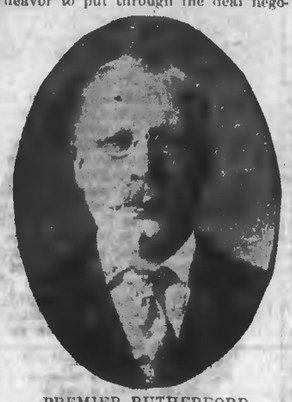
Hon. C. W. Cross, Attorney-General, and Hon. Walter Buchan, Minister without portfolio, resigned yesterday morning, and Premier Rutherford faced the House yesterday afternoon in company with only one Minister, Lessard.

The Premier is already believed to have handed his written resignation to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Already supporters of Cross are getting busy in an effort to make him the leader of the reorganized Liberal party.

Hon. W. H. Cushing, resigned Minister of Public Works, will also be called upon to lead the party, and a fight will be between these two in the election that is expected within a very short time.

The fall of the Rutherford regime has been brought about by the endeavor to put through the deal negotiated for the construction of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, which was planned to open up the homestead land to the north, and to open the way to the great mineral fields of Alberta. The object was laudable enough, but the details were not to the liking of the Liberals in the southern sections of Alberta. An "insurgent" feeling soon developed in the present Legislature, which opened a month or so ago, and the resignation of Hon. Mr. Cushing, Minister of Public Works, three weeks ago, infamed the Opposition to the deal.



PREMIER RUTHERFORD.

Alberta's Premier and members of his Cabinet dreamed of a greater Alberta with railways extending far to the northward, giving depth as well as width to the province. The Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, which is said to be backed mainly by a group of Kansas City bankers, took form and the Government was asked for assistance.

An agreement was framed by which the railway was guaranteed $20,000 a mile. It is on the terms of this agreement that the Minister of Public Works disagreed from the Government. He claimed that the Canadian Northern Railway had undertaken certain extensions on a much more reasonable basis. The Canadian Northern guarantee was on a bond guarantee basis of $13,000 a mile, and he contended that there was no justification for the more extensive guarantee to this new system. He pointed out that the Canadian Northern had a main line eastward and that the construction of the railroad had a greater value to the province than a line which extended northward with no main line connections to the east.

Enemies of the administration and friends of Mr. Cushing have claimed that the road will cost in some sections not more than $8,000 a mile and that the Government is being called upon to pay $20,000, thus affording the promoters of the railway unlimited opportunities for immense personal profit. Cushing charged that the Cabinet had approved the deal before he himself had inspected the plans.

Premier Rutherford, in defending the agreement, and referring to hints at graft, said:

"I know full well that temptations are sometimes placed in the way of public men by unscrupulous individuals. It is for our public men to resist these temptations.

"From what I have observed and learned within the last few days I have almost arrived at the conclusion that there is a nest of traitors in the Liberal camp in Alberta. It is not the largest nest. I don't couple the name of the ex-Minister of Public Works with that nest. That would be ungenerous, but I think that he has been misled—he has been duped. If left to his own calm judgment he would still be an honored and honorable member of my Cabinet."

Such Waste, Madam, Increases Your Cost of Living

The crusts, he would hide under the plate rim, and he would ask for more bread eating only the soft parts.

All of which increased the cost of living, you know.

But when the plate was removed for dessert — ah, "diskivered".

And Mother once, in a reproving voice, gently said:

"Son, some day you'll want those crusts of bread, perhaps".

"Yes", replied Jackie, "that's why I'm saving them now".

Are YOU needlessly increasing your cost of living, Mistress Housewife?

Is Jackie, or Johnnie, or Mabel, or Lena helping to loosen your purse strings?

Are there any crusts under their plate rims—pie crusts, bread crusts, or whatnot?

Then you need FIVE ROSES flour, Madam. In the "wuss" way.

Get FIVE ROSES soon.

Since it will save YOU money by decreasing the waste on your table.

FIVE ROSES gives you more bread for your money, more pies and pastries, and goodies galore; gives you lighter, flakier pie crust and "sich"; more nourishing, substantial breadstuffs.

Cultivates the crust habit, Madam, by eliminating waste

• • • •

Crust, you know, is really the most nourishing part of the loaf.

And when you find the kiddykins "saving" it, it's because there's something the matter with the aforesaid crusty article.

'Tisn't tempting enough, nor crinkly enough, nor tooth-teasing, nor sweet and yielding, nor wholesome.

Color is bad, flavor sickly, texture poor.

That "something the matter", Madam, is just everyday flour of the "stingy quality" variety.

• • • •

That's why we tell all finicky folks—

You wont even find enough for the weekly bread pudding.

• • • •

Don't let the Cost of Living run away with your finances, Mistress Housewife.

You can save money while saving the family health.

Save trouble, time, vexations—and, may be, an extra wrinkle on the yet smooth brow.

You ask: "Will FIVE ROSES do all this for me?"

Assuredly, on our business reputation, Madam.

You will save one full day's troubles by getting FIVE ROSES to-day.

A SOCIAL EVENING

Charlotte Street Men's Brotherhood Had An Enjoyable Time.

The Men's Brotherhood of the Charlotte St. Methodist church had a very enjoyable evening in the Sunday school room Tuesday night when a progressive crokinole tournament was held. The affair prover very amusing and the efforts of the players produced much enthusiasm, especially the work of Rev. Mr. Henderson, who annexed the championship by consistent work. Mr. Reid also showed consistent form, but it was rather of a backward nature, with the result that he won the cellar honours, being rewarded with a rattle. Refreshments were served in Parisian fashion by waiters neatly dressed in white.

The Brotherhood orchestra rendered a few selections in excellent fashion, while Mr. Busch was heard to advantage in mouth organ and mandolin selections.

To Mr. I. D. Moore and Mr. E. Holman, the committee in charge, great credit is due for the success of the evening.

COUGHING BURST

BLOOD VESSEL

Says Danger Avoided and Cures Coughs in 5 Hours.

A writer for the medical press states that coughing is responsible for the bursting of blood vessels quite frequently. A cough or cold means inflammation (fever) and congestion, and these in turn indicate that the body is full of poisons and waste matter. Simple relief, as found in patent cough medicines ,and whiskey, often result in more harm than good; as they cause more congestion. A tonic-laxative cough syrup will work marvels and here follows a prescription which is becoming famous for its prompt relief and thorough cures. It rids the system of the cause, except it be consumption. Don't wait for consumption to graap its victim, but begin this treatment, which cures some in five hours. Mix in a bottle one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times a day. Give children less according to age.

The President of the National Photographers Association of America, has written to Mr. Louis Mendel requesting him to prepare a special exhibit of his photographic work for the annual convention to be held in Milwaukee this coming summer. The samples of Mr. Mendel's work exhibited at the last convention were rewarded with such merited appreciation that this special request has been made.

PRESENTED WITH RING BY THE STRATHCONA MEMBERS

Hugh Burritt, the Centre Player of the City League Champions, Honoured on the Eve of His Departure From the City.

POPULAR WITH PLAYERS

A pleasing event took place at the Examiner office last evening, when the officers and players of the Strathcona City League team gathered to say good-bye to Hugh Burritt, their speedy little centre player, who leaves for Toronto to-morrow morning to accept a position in the Dominion Bank. The youngster who wore the Strathcona colours for the first time this season has become a prime favourite with players and management alike, and the Commissioners greatly regret his departure from the city.

The members of the Club took advantage of the opportunity to show their esteem towards their team-mate, by presenting him with a handsome gold signet ring, and an appreciative address. The presentation was made by Captain Charlie Ray, while Vice President Chas. Curtis read the following address:

Dear Hugh,—The officers and players of the Strathconas have learned with deep regret of your impending departure from the city, which means that the pleasant relations that have existed must be severed, temporarily, at least. Although this has been your first season with us, your unfailing cheerfulness, your anxiety and eagerness to work for the best results for your team, and to play the game as it should be played, have won for you the respect and admiration of your team mates and the officers of the Club, and no one will regret your leaving Peterborough more than those you have helped carry the red and white colours to victory.

We feel that we cannot allow you to say good-bye to us without indicating in some manner our feelings towards you, and as a souvenir of your season with the Strathconas we ask you to accept this ring, trusting that it will bring pleasant memories to you of the hockey season of 1909-10.

We tender it to you with the hope that in life's bigger game, which you are now entering, you will be always camped before the nets of success, waiting for the passes of opportunity, and that you may be able to score as frequently as you have when wearing the colours of the High Commissioners. We hope, too, that the mysteries of the financial system, of which you are about to become a unit will so operate that you will be back with us next season to do your part in making another attempt upon the City League championship.

Wishing you every success,

STRATHCONA HOCKEY CLUB.

Signed)—Chas. E. Curtis, Chas. J. Ray, Leo Derocher, Alan Campbell, Ira D. Moore, Fred B. Denison, Ben C. Dusty, P. A. Weatherstone, Herb. O. McMillan, Bert Parnell, Samuel Thomas, W. J. Metheral, Fred D. Craig.

The affair was a complete surprise to the recipient, but in a brief speech he thanked the players and officers of the Strathconas for their kind gift and for the manner in which they had treated him during the season. He expressed the hope that he would be able to be on hand to play for the Strathconas again next season. Nearly all the players and officers were present.

Cavanville People Said Farewell to Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sargent at Enjoyable Function.

A PRESENTATION

A gathering, in the form of a surprise party, was held on Friday evening at the home of Mr. John M. Sargent, Fairmount, Cavan.

Between fifty and sixty people were present and a very pleasant time was spent. The object of the gathering was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Sargent of the following address, and a beautiful mantle clock, on the eve of their departure from the neighborhood to take up residence in Peterborough.

As the time is drawing near when you are about to leave this section of the community we, your neighbours, have gathered here to-night wishing to acknowledge the debt we owe you on account of your fidelity to the best interests of this neighbourhood.

For a quarter of a century you have been among us and we feel your influence and help has been far greater than any person suspects. By your sterling good qualities and Christian character, you have gained a place in our midst that few have ever held in any community.

You have been closely identified with the church work as well as the secular interests of the neighbourhood and we have learned to appreciate your honest efforts.

We cannot allow this opportunity to pass without expressing to you in some way the regard in which you are held and we ask you to accept this token of our good will.

Our earnest wish is that you may be spared to each other for many years to enjoy the competence you have acquired, not through any chance game of fortune, but by close, diligent, honest labour.

Signed on behalf of the community,

J. H. SANDERSON,
D. W. TULLY.

Presentation Of Marble Clock To Mr. J. Hart By Collegiate Staff

A very pleasing event took place yesterday at noon, when the members of the teaching staff of the Collegiate Institute assembled in the teachers' room, and made a presentation to Mr. John Hart, who has been janitor at the school for the past eight years, and who leaves on Tuesday for Kinistino, Sask. He was presented with a handsome marble clock by Principal Kenner. Mr. Kenner referred to Mr. Hart as always having been a most faithful and painstaking servant. He also spoke in eulogistic terms of Mrs. Hart, who was ever ready to help and assist her husband in his work. The staff joined in extending their best wishes for future success and prosperity.

Mr. Hart made a suitable reply, thanking the teachers for their kind thoughtfulness. He had always endeavoured to do his duty and was glad to know he had been appreciated.

Another presentation was made to Mr. and Mrs. Hart by Dr. R. F. and Miss Morrow, of a beautiful cabinet of pearl handled knives and forks.

Former Local Man Had Close Call In Snowslide

The Toronto Globe of yesterday, in its account of the avalanche at Rogers' Pass, said: "J. Soucie, bridge foreman of Golden, saw the slide coming, ran to the edge, and was whirled three hundred feet in the snow, but was hardly scratched." The above mentioned gentleman is a son of Mrs. Soucie, 236 Perry street, this city, and this was the first intimation she had that he was at the scene of the accident. He has been in the employ of the C. P. R. for over fifteen years and has been in several accidents of a similar nature.

DISCUSS THE DOG MUZZLING BY-LAW

Board of Health Committee to Meet Legal Committee of the Council.

The Board of Health are stickers anyway. The dogs need not be rollicking around the streets with the idea that the muzzling order will never be issued in this city, for the Board has not given up the dog question yet and even at any moment the storm cloud may break. The Council has discussed the problem in a casual manner, but have shown no further inclination to deal with it.

The Board of Health, however, still keep hold of the reins, their latest move being to appoint a committee to confer with the Legal Committee of the Council regarding whatever steps are or are not to be taken.

Dr. F. P. McNulty occupied the chair and the following members were present: Messrs. Jas. Murty, W. J. Johnston, Dr. Burnham, Jas. Edgar and Dr. Young.

Moved by Dr. Burnham, seconded by Dr. Young, that an account for $24 and one from White Bros. for $5.00 for services rendered under the direction of this Board be paid and that the City Treasurer be directed to pay them.—Carried.

Moved by Dr. Burnham and Mr. Johnston that the chairman and Mr. Edgar be a committee to meet the Legal Committee in connection with the by-law regarding dogs.

A PATROL OF THE BRITISH BOY SCOUTS FORMED HERE

Local Youngsters are Taking Part in the Movement—Much Interest Shown.

THE LOCAL MEMBERS

Mostly everyone knows of the Boy Scouts' movement, but perhaps it is not generally known that a patrol of the British Boy Scouts has been organized in Peterborough, and is in a flourishing condition at the present time. The Peterborough patrol is very active, and each Saturday the members can be seen starting out on a tramp to some point in the township adjacent to the city.

The Peterborough patrol is made up of the following boys: Scout Master, F. Austin; Captain, Reg. Stratton; Lieutenant, Herb McClelland; Privates, R. Neill, A. Fortye, A. Austin, S. Mills, G. Macfarlane and Greg. O'Connell.

Lieut.-General Baden-Powell, C.B., has given a great deal of time and study towards the promotion of the Boy Scouts' movement, and he has succeeded in having patrols established throughout the British Dominion The Peterborough patrol is in immediate touch with the headquarters in the Old Country, and each week a report is forwarded to headquarters, where the names of the boys forming the local patrol are on record.

A feature of interest in connection with the Boy Scouts' movement is the proposed visit of a number of Boy Scouts from the Old Country to Canada, this summer. They are being brought out to do scouting and to see the Indians of this country. An effort is being made to have the representatives of the British Boy Scouts from England, visit Peterborough. They can see all the Indians they care to, within a short distance of Peterborough, there being two reserves in this County. The visit of the Scouts from across the waters, could, therefore, be made most interesting at Peterborough.

Lieut.-General Baden-Powell, C.B., to whose efforts the success of the Boy Scouts' Movement is due, has published a most interesting book which all boys should read. It is entitled "Scouting for Boys." Some very interesting stories relative to the duties of Boy Scouts are narrated. Altogether the movement is most commendable and it is to be hoped that the people of Peterborough will assist in the movement and encourage the young Scouts of this city.

Each patrol has a distinctive emblem, the name of the local organization being "Beaver Patrol," and the emblem being the beaver.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation If Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the great French Physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Wm. Madill guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp,, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease stickiness. It is the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of fascinating hair. A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

ROOSEVELT HUNTED BY NEWSPAPERMEN

Eager to Know If He Will Try for Presidency Again.

London, March 10.—A special despatch from Khartoum to the Daily Mail, says:

"Ex-President Roosevelt is now becoming the hunted, instead of the hunter. American newspaper correspondents are lying in wait for him along the river. They have hired steamboats and launches at fabulous charges, and each is anxious to be the first to greet him and ask him if he will stand for the presidency of the United States again.

"It is not known when Mr. Roosevelt will arrive here. An official telegram of inquiry sent Saturday is still unanswered. The ex-President is hunting water buck near Lake No; far from any telegraph station."

"SHAUN RHUE" IN CAPABLE HANDS

Irish Play at Opera House on Night of March 17 Should be Great Success.

A finished and interesting presentation of Shaun Rhue should be given by the amateurs of the T.A.S. dramatic section when this celebrated Irish play is produced at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, March 17th. The members of the cast have been most faithful in their attendance at the rehearsals, and all the details of the play have been worked out very thoroughly under the able direction of Mr. George Lynch. Those who have seen the rehearsals say that the attraction of this season will be the most satisfactory of any given under T.A.S. auspices.

The cast will be:—
Shaun Rhue—Mr. George Lynch.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The mass meeting in the Opera House to-morrow night at 8 o'clock should attract a large gathering as the Y. M. C. A. have been very fortunate in having such strong speakers present on this occasion.

The address of the evening will be delivered by Mr. E. T. Calton, of New York on the subject "The World Without a Foreign Land." To those who heard Mr. Calton last year no further reference is necessary regarding his ability as a strong and convincing speaker. Those who were not so fortunate on his previous visit should not allow this opportunity to pass without making every effort to be present.

The other speakers, Mr. G. S. Phelps and Mr. G. E. Trueman, have both had experience in Y. M. C. A. missionary work in Japan and will be able to present interesting particulars of this great Foreign Work Movement of the Y.M.C.A.

Miss Pringle will be present to render a vocal selection.

RHEUMATISM CURED

ZAM-BUK RUBBED WELL IN IS A SURE REMEDY.

As soon as you feel any deep-seated pain in the joints, back, wrists, or elsewhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers or on the palm of the hand, and rub it well in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation balm" is exceedingly great, and, once having reached the seat of the pain, it removes it speedily. It also ends the stiffness, which is so unpleasant.

Frequent rubbings of the afflicted parts with Zam-Buk will not only drive out all pain, reduce swelling, etc., but will strengthen the skin and tissues ,and enable them to resist cold and damp.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt, of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says: "I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely with rheumatism, and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure. I began applying this balm whenever I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on, or felt the stiffness. The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains, driving them out completely, and I am now quite cured."

This case, and scores of similar cases reported to us, is proof that Zam-Buk's penetrating and healing power is very great. In addition to its use as an embrocation, it is a sure cure for skin diseases, such as eczema, ringworm, ulcers, blood-poisoning, scalp sores, etc., and is the finest known "first aid." For piles, it is a specific. Gives certain ease. All druggists and stores, at 50 cents box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Big Increase In Naval Estimates

British Government Makes Provision for Construction of Five Large Armoured Ships and Cruisers.

London, March 10.—When Lord Rosebery, on Monday, launches his plan for the reformation of the House of Lords, he will present a set of three resolutions, embodying in general terms the course which the Peers propose to follow in modernizing themselves. As Lord Rosebery has been in consultation with a majority of the members of the upper House, there is little question that the resolutions present the general views of the Lords on the subject of reorganization.

The first resolution will affirm the necessity for a strong and efficient second Chamber for the well being of the State. The second will set forth that such a Chamber will be the best obtainable by the reform and reconstitution of the House of Lords. The third will declare that a necessary preliminary to such reform and reconstitution is the acceptance of the principle that the possession of a Peerage in itself should no longer afford the right to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

The navy estimates for 1910, which were issued by the Admirality to-night, provide for an expenditure of $203,018,500, an increase of $27,805,000 over 1909. The increase is almost wholly taken up by shipbuilding armaments authorized by Parliament before dissolution. The new program provides for five large armoured ships, five protected cruisers, twenty destroyers and a considerable number of submarines.

By April 1 there will be under construction seven battleships, three armoured, nine protected and two unarmoured cruisers, 37 destroyers, and nine submarines.

The estimates further provide for an increase of 3,000 men in the personnel of the navy, and the completion during 1911 of two floating docks to accommodate the largest battleships. These will be stationed at Portsmouth and Medway.

Mr. Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, in an explanatory statement, announces the formation of a new naval mobilization department and a permanent Navy War Council, consisting of the First Sea Lord as President, the directors of the Naval Intelligence, and Naval Mobilization Departments and other officials, to deal with all matters relating to preparation for war.

KEEP RECORDS

Patrons of Cheese Factories and Creameries Should Adopt System.

Patrons of cheese factories and creameries need not only to see to it that the raw material is delivered in the best possible condition, but that a large and steady supply is furnished. Can any means be taken to increase the production per cow per acre? The answer to that query implies a knowledge on the part of every dairyman as to just what each cow in his herd can produce. Does any stable nowadays furnish free quarters and good feed to cows that have no intention of giving more and that have no possibility of a profitable yield? Is every dairyman quite certain that each cow in his stable 'pays'. It is an excellent plan to make sure of that vital point, it is the initial step in successful dairying, the foundation for building a profitable herd. The only way to make sure is to keep dairy records, then it is an easy matter to distinguish and dispose of any non-paying guest, and feed each selected cow up to her full capacity of production. Through a continuous check on the yield of each individual cow many herd owners have been enabled to increase the average yield by as much as 1,500 and 1,600 pounds of milk per cow in three years. Forms for recording weights of milk, or feed, will be supplied free on application to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa.

Mason Had Salt Rheum

ON HANDS FOR YEARS — COMPLETELY CURED FIVE YEARS AGO BY

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

There is nothing worse for eczema and salt rheum than cold water. For this reason many people are afflicted in cold weather only.

No class of men suffer more from such ailments than bricklayers and stone masons and this fact makes the accompanying letter particularly interesting.

Mr. John W. Naas, stone mason, of Lunenberg, N.S., writes: "I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years and could get nothing which seemed to be of any real benefit. Five years ago I got a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and three boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and this treatment cured me so that the old trouble never returned. My skin became as soft and smooth as a child's after using Dr. Chase's Ointment and I shall always say a good word for it."

Very many people suffer from skin affections in the cold weather and try one thing after another without obtaining the marked and lasting benefit which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Chilblains and frost bites are quickly relieved and cured by the wonderfully soothing, healing influence of this Ointment. Chapped hands and irritated skin become soft and smooth. Each and every form of itching skin disease is thoroughly cured.

MAJORITY REACHES 55

Mr. Monk's Amendment For a Referendum on the Question Was Overwhelmingly Defeated In the Early Hours This Morning—Six Conservatives Support the Government's Home Navy Plan.

Ottawa, March 10.—The air of the House of Commons Chamber was charged with excitement when shortly after midnight this morning, the first vote on the amendments to the Government's navy bill was called by the Speaker.

F. D. Monk's amendment, which demanded a plebiscite of the people on this great question, which has already been debated in the House for five weeks, was put to the members and was defeated by 175 votes to 18.

The following voted for Monk's amendment: Messrs. Verville (Lib.), Doherty, Broder, Wilcox, Monk, Lewis, Forget, Worthington, White (Renfrew), Lortie, Paquet, Currie (Simcoe), Chisholm (Huron), Herron, Sharpe (Ontario), Nantel, Bloudin and Jameson, 18.

Amongst the Conservatives who voted against Monk's amendment were: Messrs. Borden, Armstrong, Huggart, Sexsmith, Wright, Boyce, Lake, Wilson (Lennox and Addington), Staples, Richards, Hughes, Sproule, Lalor, Owen, Lancaster, Porter, Barnard, Crothers, Smythe, Gordon (Nipissing), Thoburn, Robb, Magrath, Madill, Middleboro, Haggart (Winnipeg), Lennox, Roche, Meighen, Thornton, Edwards, Campbell, Fraser, Russell, Best, Blair, McCarthy, Wallace, Stewart, Taylor (Leeds), Taylor (New Westminster) and Goodeve.

The Government had anticipated that the vote on Mr. Borden's amendment would be taken immediately afterwards, but to the surprise of most of the members, Mr. Thoburn, the Conservative member for North Lanark, rose to his feet, and, in the most matter of fact tone, continued the navy debate. He was questioned by one or two Liberal members as to whether he had already spoken on the question. He replied in the negative.

Prior to the taking of the vote the scene was an interesting one, the galleries were crowded to their utmost capacity, ladies in evening dress predominating.

The Liberals sang "O Canada" in French, and in response the Conservatives, led by C. L. Owen, sang "God Save the King." The Liberals immediately joined in the National Anthem, the whole House standing, and at its conclusion rousing cheers were given by both sides.

When silence had been restored, Dr. Clark of Red Deer called "Three cheers for Sir Wilfrid Laurier." These were heartily given. The Conservatives replied with "Three cheers for Mr. Borden," and there was a contest of lungs with much waving of handkerchiefs.

Mr. Theburn was proceeding to quote a recent speech by King Edward when he was called to order. He concluded his speech at 12.40 p.m., and the Speaker put Mr. Borden's amendment to the House.

Meanwhile the Conservatives sang "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the King."

Six Conservatives from the Province of Quebec voted against Mr. Borden's amendment, which called for a contribution of Dreadnoughts to Great Britain and a reference to the people of the question of a Canadian navy. They were Messrs. Monk, Paquet, Nantel, Blondin, Lortie and Forget. Mr. Clare (Con., South Waterloo), also voted with the Government, as did Mr. Verville.

The Opposition leader's amendment was voted down by 129 to 74, a Government majority of 55, the largest during the present Parliament.

All the English-speaking Conservatives who voted with Mr. Monk, voted with Mr. Borden the second time.

W. B. Northrup, East Hastings, then announced that he had an important amendment to move, and suggested that as the hour was late, the House might adjourn. In this the Premier concurred.

Mr. Northrup, it is learned, will move at the next sitting of the House that the navy bill be given a six months' hoist.

In view of the fact that seven Conservatives voted with the Government, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's majority should have been 63.

It was noticeable when the Conservatives cheered Mr. Borden, that Mr. Monk was the only one of the party who sat silent.

RIGHTS OF PEDESTRIANS

Measure Along Same Lines as That of Last Session Finds Friends on Both Sides of the House—The Man on the Road Has the First Right and Chauffeur Is Liable If He Runs Into Him, Says Premier

Toronto, March 10.—Dare-devil drivers of speed juggernaut motors were the subject of an impressive warning by the Prime Minister of Ontario in the Legislature yesterday afternoon.

The Premier, who spoke with some warmth, declared that the question was one that would have to engage the serious attention of the Government of the day at no distant period. He did not favor a low speed limit. It was not necessary, but he would place the responsibility for accidents on the driver.

The need of drastic measures was emphasized by Sir James in connection with the bill of Valentine Stock (South Perth), which followed the same lines as his measure of last session, was under discussion.

"The reason," said the Premier, "is not that the municipalities own the highways. The municipalities are only trustees of the highways for all the people of the province. They have no right to legislation to keep people off the highways.

"But the pedestrian has the first right to the road. The chauffeur who thinks that, because he gives warning of his approach is entitled to the road, is utterly and entirely wrong. He comes after the pedestrian, and even after the man on the bicycle. It is not the pedestrian who must get out of the way of the automobile, but the automobile that must get out of the road of the pedestrian, even if he is standing still.

"Probably if the ordinary driver of a motor car could get it sunk deep down into his understanding that twice in the last year the driver of a car conveying His Majesty's mail in London was told by a police magistrate that he had no right of way on the highway, he might begin to realize his legal position."

Sir James has been noticing cars on his way to the buildings, and he didn't think one was traveling within the legal rate.

There was no real reason for their doing so, he thought, on streets where there was no traffic. He favored the adoption of the English practice (lately adopted in New York), by which a limit of say 30 miles an hour would be set and then, no matter what the rate was, would make the driver responsible for accidents.

"The way 50 per cent. of the drivers act," said Hon. A. G. MacKay, "would lead you to believe that when that 'honk' goes King Edward VII. is coming."

He thought the provision in Mr. Stock's bill, taking away the chauffeur's license for the second conviction was a good one. There were big men who didn't care anything for the small fry, but who might have a chauffeur whose services they valued and whom they would not like to lose.

He agreed with the Premier that the King's highway was for all of the King's subjects, but it was necessary to do something. He hoped that the reasonable and honest owners would do something to prevent the necessity of too drastic legislation.

The bill was given its second reading, and sent to the municipal committee, to see if any of its provisions might with advantage be incorporated in the legislation on the subject.

Sir James Whitney entered public protest against the inconsistency of members decrying the indiscriminate giving of bonuses and then coming to the Legislature and introducing "all sorts of bills that under ordinary circumstances would not come within speaking distance of the statute."

The occasion of the Prime Minister's declaration was the passage of the second readings of four bills respecting the town of Barrie and the Township of Tay. These were let through, as little loss to the communities involved would result, but the warning stands.

Some discussion ensued on the bill of W. S. Brewster (South Brant) to permit the election of benchers of 20 years' standing as life members of the Law Society. The Premier intimated that he had an open mind on the question and that Government members were at liberty to vote as they pleased. Hon. J. J. Foy thought it was a matter for the sense of the majority of the members of the Bar. On the Premier's suggestion the bill was sent to the legal committee to allow members to communicate with constituents regarding it.

J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) gives notice that he will enquire of the Ministry as follows: What sums of money have been given by the Province of Ontario to colleges or universities in Ontario during each of the years 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909, with the particular amount given to each in each year?

"Bronchitis"

is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather and may be recognized by a tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color coming from the bronchial tubes when coughing, especially the first thing in the morning. Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Bronchitis Cured.

Miss Martha Bourget, Little Pabos, Que., writes: "Last spring I was very poorly, had a bad cough, sick headache, could not sleep, and was tired all the time. I consulted two doctors, and both told me I had bronchitis, and advised me to give up teaching. I tried almost everything but none of the medicines gave me any relief. One of my friends advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I had scarcely taken the first bottle when I began to get better and when I had taken the fourth bottle I felt as well as ever, my cough had left me and I could sleep well."

"Dr. Wood's" is the original Norway Pine Syrup. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark and the price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

One Barrel of Flour Instead of Two

YES, in the old way there was one kind of flour for bread and another for pastry.

Now, OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is an all around flour. It makes not only the very best bread but also the very best cakes, pies, biscuits, rolls, muffins, pop-overs, pancakes, dumplings, anything that you want to make or bake from flour.

"ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" saves money and trouble. Instead of having two barrels of flour in the house you can get along much better with one. And you can be certain that it is always uniform—will always come out right whether for Bread or Pastry.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR makes better bread and better pastry than any other flour because it is better flour—made from the finest grade of wheat in the world, Manitoba Red Fyfe wheat, and milled by the very finest machinery, in mills that are a model of cleanliness.

"ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" costs a trifle more by the barrel than ordinary flour but this trifle extra proves real economy when the loaves are counted. For "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" goes farther than ordinary flour—farther in actual quantity of baked product.

Even if "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" cost a great deal more than ordinary flour it would be well worth it for it is more nourishing.

You can't afford to buy impoverished flour at any price. You can't afford to skimp on health. And you do skimp on health when you buy flour just because it costs less than "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD".

Primary Finals To Begin At Five O'clock To-day

Bonspiel at Curling Rink is Providing Keen Contests With Deep Interest in the Game---Finals Likely to be Between McIntyre of Keene and R. M. Waddell.

The bonspiel at the curling rink attracted a large crowd of members and lovers of the game last night and this morning. A god beginning was made yesterday afternoon and by evening the first round of the primary games was pretty well completed and some of the consolation games were begun. The ice was in fine condition and not a few of the games were of the exciting variety. In the third round of the Primary series "Pete" Lang's good rink went down before Archie Moore's Jack Moore, of Keene, won out from Connal, of Peterborough: Rollie Waddell downed Keene, with M. Kenneally skipping, and this morning Marke, of Bobcaygeon, trimmed a companion rink skipped by Mr. Davis, with a margin of only one point. The latter game was finished about ten o'clock, and stirred up considerable interest right up to the final shot. The rinks were as follows, both being from Bobcaygeon:

Taylor	Boyd
Lithgow	Conway
Bredin	Nicholl
Marke, skip—15	Davis, skip—14

Mr. Marke was scheduled to meet Mr. Waddell this afternoon, and the winner is to play the winner of the Moore-McIntyre game, which was in progress this morning. The primary finals will be reached this evening.

Consolation Games.

In the second round of the Consolation series Charlie Brown and Robt. Neill played this morning, and Buchanan, of Hastings, went down before Dick Davidson. Rev. E. A. Pearson and W. M. Lang had not played their first round game at noon. Hastings did not offer very strong opposition to the Peterborough rink in this morning's game, Davidson winning out by 13 to 7. The rinks were as follows:

Peterborough	Hastings
L. Hall	J. E. Wilcox
W. Taylor	E. W. Fowles
W. J. Thompson	C. R. Fowles
D. Davidson,	J. E. Buchanan
Skip—13	Skip— 7

This Afternoon's Games.

The finals in the primary round were in sight at noon to-day. Jack McIntyre won from Archie Moore just as the dinner bell rang, in what certainly was a red hot game. The Keene rink were two up on the second last end and it was the grand effort of Moore's trusties to overcome the lead that provided the excitement. He was successful in cutting down the lead by one point, but the honours went to Keene by 13 to 12 shots, and Keene stepped into the semi-finals. The rinks were as follows:

Peterborough	Keene
Meredith	R. B. McIntyre
Bowes	J. J. Moore
Medd	Dr. McMillan
Moore, sk. 12	Jack McIntyre, sk. 13

Rollie Waddell's rink waded into Skip Davis of Bobcaygeon, at the drop of the hat at 1.30 this afternoon. Davis defeated Marke this morning and qualified for the semi-finals, but judging from the first few ends this afternoon he will hardly see the finals The Peterborough rink was 12 shots up at the third, and the general opinion at two o'clock was that the Primary finals will be played off by Waddell and McIntyre, of Keene. The game is scheduled for five o'clock and should be a hummer. The rinks lined up as follows in the semi-final contest:

Bobcaygeon	Peterborough
Taylor	W. Adamson
Lithgow	H. Foote
Bredin	Geo. Giroux
Marke, sk.	R. M. Waddell, sk.

Consolation Series.

In the third round of the Consolation series, Brown defeated Neill by a margin of seven shots. The rinks were as follows:

George Hill	John Brightman
Geo. Maitland	R. Cameron
T. Brightman	Sam Ray
C. N. Brown, sk.	R. Neill, sk.

Jim Connal's rink put Kenneally's rink out this morning in a rather close game, the final score being 12 to 10. The rinks were composed as follows:

Peterborough	Keene
R. Denne	Rollie Weir
W. Hall	G. Howson
Jack Fitzgerald	M. Kenneally
Jas. Connal, sk.	R. J. McCamus sk.

Rev. E. A. Pearson's rink of parsons won by default from Morrow, and this afternoon are playing Jas. Connal. Rev. Pearson's rink is composed of Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. Geo. W. Henderson, Rev. Robt. Pogue and Rev. E. A. Pearson who is himself skiping the rink The laymen started off to win, securing a lead of three shots in the first three ends, but the ministers were not perturbed.

Pete Lang's rink is playing Davis, of Bobcaygeon this afternoon, and gained a slight lead by two o'clock. The rinks are composed of

Peterborough	Bobcaygeon
H. Martin	Boyd
H. Evans	Conway
R. Hicks	Nicholls
W. M. Lang, Skip.	Davis, Skip

Moore's rink is placed in the consolation series and the loser of the Marke Waddell series will also be entered and will play off in the fourth round.

Chas. Brown and Dickson Davidson after winning their morning's games, locked horns this afternoon. On the second end Davidson had a lead of four points. The consolation series should provide good curling before the finals are reached. The ice is in fine condition and the rinks still in the game are strong and steady.

Kingston Juniors Win The O. H. A. Championship

Kingston, March 9.—Kingston Frontenacs are the junior champions of the O. H. A., their 5 to 1 victory over Preston here to-night giving them the round and honour by one goal, with the score on the two games 8 to 7. A crowd of more than 1,300 enthusiasts from the city, Belleville, Gananoque, Trenton, Deseronto, Picton and other neighbouring towns, comprised the largest crowd seen in the rink this season and one of the largest since the memorable struggle between the old Wellingtons of Toronto and Queen's some years ago. The finish of the game was a scene of the wildest excitement. Preston came down with a lead of three goals, the score at the Western Ontario town having been 6 to 3. As the score on the round indicates, the teams are evenly matched, much more so than the score in to-night's game would indicate.

Kingstonians, while proud of their little heroes, are also loud in their praises of the ability and sportsmanship of the gallant young "Neversweats," by which name the Preston lads are known in the neighbourhood of their own town as a lot of handy little chaps who were laughed almost to scorn when they intimated their intention of entering the O. H. A. junior series. The fact that they battled their way to the top of the heap to be beaten for the honours by one goal when so many worthy teams have long since been relegated to the down-and-out club, is credit enough for them, and when they arrive in Preston Thursday night at 9.30 o'clock there is one grand reception awaiting them by the townspeople, whose admiration they have commanded.

Brock Street Roller Rink Will Open To-morrow

The Brock Street Rink will open for the roller skating season to-morrow night, when there will be a band concert and other features that will undoubtedly attract a large crowd. The floor is in splendid shape as Mr. A. Jacks of the Parkdale Rink, Toronto, has been working on it with a sand paper machine that will render it as smooth as glass. The manager has also installed a new machine that will keep down the dust and make the conditions much more pleasant for the patrons. Mr. L. E. Pitcher of the Parkdale Rink will be the new floor manager and as he has had much experience in the position he should give every satisfaction.

The caretaker will be at the Street Railway Rink every evening this week between 8 and 9 o'clock, when people may get toboggans belonging to them. The owners of all toboggans, left at the rink during the Summer, will be charged 50c storage. 3d-ttf

After the business of selecting officers, it was decided to enter the team in the Midland League. A friendly game will be arranged if possible on Empire Day with the Toronto Carpet Co. Football Club at Toronto.

Mr. Aston, the ex-captain, who is leaving town, was given a vote of thanks for his services to the club in the past and success wished him in his future.

GOOD HOCKEY GAME

A fast and most exciting game of hockey was played here to-night in the city hockey league. When the star Lakefield Canoe Co. team met and defeated the crack Junior team, who have gone undefeated all season, and were very confident of running over their opponents this evening. All the players of the Canoe Co. team played excellent hockey and therefore it is very hard to pick out the star; S. Hill was by far the star of the Junior team.

Following is the line-up:

Y M. C. A. Baseball Club.

A meeting of the Y.M.C.A. baseball club will be held at the building this evening at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing for the coming season. A full attendance of all those interested is requested.

FIRE DID DAMAGE IN GEORGE ST. FRUIT STORE

At a quarter past one this morning a couple of citizens noticed considerable smoke in Mr. Hooper's confectionery store on George St., north of the Crystal theatre. An alarm was sounded and the brigade responded promptly. Upon investigation it was discovered that the smoke was coming from the cellar of the store adjoining, Mr. P. DeCarlonis' fruit store. An entrance was made through the front door and a couple of chemicals used, but this did not serve the purpose so a line of hose was laid to the cellar and the blaze extinguished. The damage done by the smoke and water was slight.

INFORMATION WANTED

Can Any Reader Answer These Questions From Byersville?

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Pardon me for addressing you, but I would like you to please answer the following questions through the columns of the Examiner:

Do you think that the settlement now called Byersville will be taken into the city limits?

If so, have you any idea when?

I think it would be a great advantage to the city, as there are quite a number of good tax payers in the settlement. It would also be an advantage to the people of Byersville, as they would then be able to secure the city water and sewerage connections. There is quite a number of children in this settlement who would like to attend the city schools. This is a growing settlement. A number of new residences are built every year. I think it would pay the city well to take this into consideration.

2—Do you think the Street Railway Company intend extending the C. G. E. line down Albert street and down the boundary through Byersville, this summer? They promised to build some new lines this summer. If you will answer these questions through the columns of the Daily Examiner you will greatly oblige

"A Resident of Byersville."

BIG AUTOMOBILE DEAL

New York,, March 9.—One of the largest deals ever made in the history of the automobile industry in this country was made public to-day when J. P. Morgan and Co. announced that, in accordance with an agreement with the shareholders of the Sudebaker Bros. Manufacturing Co., the banking firm had purchased all the stock of the Everett-Mets-Flanders Co., of Detroit, that was not already owned by members of the Studebaker firm. It was said that the price paid for the 64 per cent. of the Detroit company's stock bought for the Studemakers was nearly $5,000,000, or practically on the basis of 8 to 1 on the capitalization of $1,000,000.

The litigation between the Studebaker firm and the big Detroit company is to be terminated.

J. P. Morgan and Co., it was stated, acted in the matter merely as brokers for the Studebaker interests in putting the deal through.

Mr. C. N. Banks, of the Banks' Sporting Goods Store, is the agent for the firm.

THOROUGHBRED ANIMALS AND PLANTS.

Their Great Commercial Value.

"There is as much difference as between thoroughbred and ordinary animals." This statement is made by D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, the greatest flower and vegetable breeders in the country, and appears in their 1910 Annual Catalogue, just issued. They argue for the great value and economy of thoroughbred seeds. "Any fundamental natural law which applies to animals applies equally to plnts." A good cow (i.e. a thoroughbred) eats no more than a poor one, but may give twice as much butter fat. "Good blood" makes as much difference with corn as with cows. But thoroughbred plants, like thoroughbred animals, are not produced in one or two generations, for no matter how superior an individual of common origin may be, its progeny are as a rule like the general run of its antecedents. Hence the need for seedsmen like D. M. Ferry & Co. They have experience, the best plant breeding equipment in the United States, and the business acumen to sell only such seeds as have been bred from the choicest stocks for many generations.

D. M. Ferry & Co's. Seed Annual for 1910 may be had free of charge by writing to them at Windsor, Ont. It contains much of interest for those who think.

AN ABLE SERMON AT LENTEN SERVICE

Delivered by Rev. Mr. Montgomery of Port Hope at St. John's Church.

Rev. Mr. Montgomery, of Port Hope, was the special preacher at St. John's church last night. He delivered a very instructive sermon on "Salvation," a word which is he contended, much misinterpreted these days.

We can only learn the true meaning of the word from the Bible, and not from the varied opinions of men. A great many people entertain the idea that Salvation implies being safe from hell and sure of heaven, but there is nothing in the Scriptures to warrant one asserting that he or she is sure of being saved. Satan himself was once an archangel in Paradise, and the companion of God's holy ones, and yet he was cast out of heaven. Adam and Eve were placed in a paradise, where no sin was known, and surely they could say they were perfectly safe; still the tempter came and they fell. Judas Iscariot, a companion of Christ for three years, became a traitor, and Peter also fell in denying his Master. These are examples of the uncertainty of man's condition even under the most advantageous circumstances.

The reverend gentleman pointed out in conclusion that the correct interpretation of the Greek word for "Salvation," as given in the revised version of the Scriptures was "being saved," hence the Church of England held that no one could say with absolute surety that they were saved, although they might be in a state of salvation, which, if continued until the end, would lead by God's grace to safety. He denied the Calvinistic theory that a man or woman could with truth claim to have been saved on a given date, the only and shortest way to heaven and safety was to turn to the right and keep straight on, while life lasts.

MR. COULTON'S LECTURE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Having been asked by those in charge of Mr. Coulton's appearance in the Opera House to-morrow night, to express my opinion of him, having been one of those to hear him when he was here before, I can truly say that I have never heard a man place the subject of his discourse more clearly and suitably before an audience. Mr. Coulton is a New Yorker of experience, and has a natural gift for imparting his most interesting story.

HE DEFIED HIS LEADER

Toronto, March 11.—Quite a tempest in a teapot arose in the Legislature yesterday afternoon when the House was in committee on the Government measure, introduced by Hon. W. J. Hanna, to amend the Assessment Act.

The committee had progressed from clause to clause in due order and were to all appearances ready to report the bill, when Col. Hugh Clark returned to the charge with a resolution to go back and re-open the clause dealing with income exemptions.

The Premier objected. It was irregular, disorderly, and several other things that Sir James had no hesitation in mentioning, to go back again to the beginning. What guarantee was there, he asked, if they did this, that when they got through the bill again, a proposal would not be made to repeat the process? The committee had gone into the matter very thoroughly. What reason was there to go back on account of one clause?

Col. Clark had the temerity to assert that he did not consider the report of a committee a sacred thing on which they should not lay their hands.

The British system of Government and the stability of Parliamentary institutions seemed visibly to shiver and hang in the balance as one listened to the Prime Minister's word and those of his recalcitrant follower.

Col. Clark explained that he thought his action was preferable to the moving of an amendment when the bill came to its third reading.

With a dramatic gesture the gallant colonel, who was by this time, speaking vulgarly, "quite on his ear," dashed his amendment on the floor and announced that he had no intention of asking special privileges or irregularities on his behalf.

British institutions seemed convalescent, so to speak.

"Then will the honorable gentleman introduce his amendment at the third reading," enquired the Premier.

"No, I will not," retorted Col. Clark British institutions had a relapse.

After some persuasion, oil was poured on the troubled waters and the member for Centre Bruce picked his amendment up from the floor and moved it. It was lost.

The clause that furnished the "casus belli" was the one which raised the exemptions on income tax, for house holders in towns and cities from $1,000 to $1,200 and in other municipalities from $700 to $900.

Special recognition of the hard case of railwaymen whose occupation compelled them to be away from home half their time and who had to maintain double establishments was objected to by Hon. A. G. MacKay, who thought it was a matter for the railways to settle by paying better salaries to these men.

The Minister of Public Works brought down a return showing that the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway has constructed and operated thirty miles of railway from Sellwood Junction in Hutton Township in a northerly direction, into the clay belt. Four survey parties are in the field between the completed portion and Port Arthur, on which about seventy persons are engaged.

Another return was brought down by the same Minister showing that the expenses for overseeing and inspecting colonization roads in 1908 were $40,407.18 and $13,978.05 respectively. In 1909 the figures were $33,464.75 and $14,057.13.

Hon. J. S. Duff introduced a bill to carry out the recommendations of the milk commission by permitting cities, towns and incorporated villages to inspect at the source of supply, if it were found necessary so to do.

Mr. Stock's automobile bill was laid over. He stated that it was aimed largely at American tourists, who were the worst offenders on the country [illegible]

NAVY BILL PASSES ITS SECOND READING

Opposition Tries Hard to Hoist the Measure But the Government Had a Majority of 41 on Division, With Many Members Paired---There Was Little Excitement Compared to Vote on Amendment.

Ottawa, March 11.—The navy bill passed the second reading in the Commons last evening after a vote had been taken, the Government majority being 41. The division was: For the bill 119, against 78.

There was no excitement, and compared with the scene which witnessed the defeat of the Monk and Borden amendments early yesterday morning, the proceedings were far from spectacular.

The only feature was the fact that Alphonse Verville voted against the bill.

Three Ministers were absent, Hon. Wm. Paterson is in the West Indies, and Sir Fred. Borden and Hon. L. P. Brodeur are ill. On the Conservative side the most notable absentee was Hon. Geo. E. Foster, who is also an invalid.

Prior to the vote on the bill itself, Northrup's amendment to give the bill a six months' hoist was defeated by 41, exactly the same majority, Mr. Verville also voting with the Opposition.

W. B. Northrup (East Hastings) who began yesterday's debate, moved that the bill be given a six months' hoist. He insisted that it did not lie within the right of the Dominion Parliament to pass the bill in the form proposed by the Government, and that such a bill, if passed, would be ultra vires of the Imperial Parliament.

He based this argument on the proposal in the bill to place the navy under the control of the Governor-in-Council, seeing in this an attempt to override the prorogative of the King.

W. F. Maclean was in the House and made his first speech on the navy question.

"I should have spoken earlier in this debate," said Mr. Maclean, "but as I am only recovering from a somewhat prolonged cold, I have had to defer what I had to say. Moreover, what I have to say may not be acceptable to either side of the House.

"I cannot approve of the amendment which has just been submitted to the House for giving the bill the six months' hoist, nor could I have voted for the amendments that were voted on yesterday, proposing to send this question to the people. I believe absolutely in the responsibility of Parliament and it is up to this Parliament, and to the Government, to make the fullest and amplest provision for the defence of the country."

Among others who spoke were Capt. Tom Wallace (Centre York), Glen Campbell, R. S. Lake, W. D. Staples and W. A. Wright, who all supported the amendment.

Capt. Wallace attacked Mr. Maclean for not supporting Mr. Borden's amendment, and said that he would vote for the six months' hoist, as he believed that the view of his constituents was that the navy, as proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, would be of so little account as to be wholly inadequate.

He did not believe there was any public sentiment throughout the country in favor of a navy.

The insurance bill was given its third reading, and passed in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Power resumed the debate on Sir Richard Scott's bill to prevent intoxicating liquor being sent into any province which has enacted prohibitive legislation. Senator Power said that he thought the bill was unconstitutional. It did not regulate commerce, but forbade commerce, and he thought Parliament had no right to say that any sort of commodity should not be carried into any province.

Senator Power said this bill was a sample of tyrannical legislation promoted occasionally by exceedingly good women, and sometimes men, who made a fetish of some particular virtue. There was no scriptural authority for this bill, nor was the use of wine prohibited by any command of the decalogue or the Bible. This bill showed that these people had a superfluous amount of energy and virtue, which had to be relieved in this way. The measure, he said, could have been framed only by a fanatic.

The situation which has developed in the investigation will be taken up in the Commons to-day on the House going into supply. A keen debate is anticipated.

GIRLS WITH BAD COMPLEXIONS

The skin should really be so soft and transparent that the blood in the vessels beneath can impart to it the pale, rosy tint which is the ideal "bloom of health." Often, however, the skin becomes coarse and rough, and its cells filled with various impurities, which should be thrown off. This results in those "muddy," sallow complexions, spots, blackheads, etc.

Girls who are troubled in this way will find Zam-Buk a perfect skin food. Smear it lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the sallow patches, at night, and notice how quickly your appearance improves. As the rich, refined, herbal essences sink deep into the tissue, the hard, scurfy-like patches are removed. The cuticle is softened. The cells beneath are stimulated to healthy operation. The pores resume their work properly, and a good complexion results. Isn't this better than attempting the impossible task of improving your complexion from the outside?

STANDS ALL ALONE

Marshall and Lessard Send In Their Resignations, But Premier of Alberta Refuses to Say When He Proposes to Step Out—Cushing Has Already Chosen His New Cabinet In Anticipation.

Edmonton, Alta., March 11.—Premier Rutherford didn't carry out the program anticipated for him, and is still on the job, but he is in "splendid isolation." For yesterday his last remaining Ministers, Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, and P. E. Lessard, without portfolio, sent in their resignations.

It is now fully expected that the Premier will end the agony to-day, and that Cushing, the retired Minister of Public Works will be called upon to pick his Cabinet as follows: Cushing, Premier and Public Works; J. R. Boyle (Sturgeon), Attorney-General; Geo. P. Smith (Cameron), Education; Dr. Warnock (Pincher), Agriculture; Riley (Gleicean) and McDougall (Edmonton) without portfolios.

So far as official announcements of retirement, or of the resignations of any of the Cabinet Ministers, Premier Rutherford's lips was sealed in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. When pressed by R. B. Bennett for an explanation or statement, he maintained the attitude of silence that he has always maintained towards the House and press on statements and rumors that have been published.

In the afternoon, however, he did add another statement to his stereotyped sentence. He said that he had received no official communication from the Lieutenant-Governor bearing on the resignations.

Bennett reminded him that the Premier was the adviser of the Lieutenant-Governor, and that his honor did only what the Premier told him to do. Premier Rutherford said nothing.

Bennett interrupted the motion to adjourn, to press the Premier for an explanation. It is time, he said, that the House took stock of the situation. It was the 21st day of the session, and three Cabinet Ministers had disappeared from their seats and there had been no explanation. The situation was unprecedented. It was idle to ignore the fact that the situation was grave and that the Legislature was becoming the laughing stock of Canada.

"The King's Government must be carried on, but this was no Government," he said, "this is simply marking time. Second-hand information is annoying, when constituents telephone us to know what is doing, and we have to tell them nothing. Is it true that the Attorney-General has resigned?"

Premier Rutherford made this response: "I would very much like to gratify the curiosity of the junior member for Calgary. The newspapers have been making comments, but the junior member should not take stock in what the newspapers say. I have to say that I have no communication from the Lieutenant-Governor. That is the only constitutional stand I can take."

Bennett—"When may we expect something? To-morrow?"

The Premier—"I cannot say what his honor intends doing."

Bennett—"Oh, yes, you are his advisor. His honor must do what his first Minister says."

Premier—"I can say no more than I have said."

Bennett—"I will not say what I think now, but I will leave it for another day."

Resolutions both for and against the Government were shelved till next week, as was the case with a great deal of legislation on the order sheet. The session lasted scarcely more than an hour. Stewart of Sedgewick asked that his resolution asking the Government for an explanation of the sale of the railway bonds be left over till Tuesday, as was the Premier's resolution to form a railway board.

To questions as to whether the Government had accepted the offer of Clarke of the waterways, Boyle got an answer from the Premier that the Government were still conferring with the company regarding proposed changes in contract, as asked for in resolution, voted upon last week. To his question as to whether any plans of the railway had been approved by the Government, Mr. Boyle got an answer in the negative.

For Forest Preservation.

Ottawa, March 11.—Senator Edwards presided at the annual business meeting meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association yesterday.

Resolutions were passed favoring the making of a forest reserve of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, fire protection along the lines of the Government railways, preservation of water powers, especially in boundary waters, reservation of forests on the head waters of streams, and favoring the making of permanent forest reserves in areas suited only for forests.

SPECTACLES Should be Changed

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and then go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity for such be not apparent to them. As a general rule, spectacles for close work require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every 2 years.

Chapter II

THE CLAIBORNES OF WASHINGTON.

THE girl with the white plumed hat started and flushed slightly, and her brother glanced over his shoulder toward the restaurant door to see what had attracted her attention.

"'Tis he, the unknown, Dick."

"I must say I like his persistence!" exclaimed the young fellow, turning again to the table. "In America I should call him out and punch his head, but over here"—

"Over here you have better 'manners,'" replied the girl, laughing. "But why trouble yourself? He doesn't even look at us. We are of no importance to him whatever. We probably speak a different language."

"But he travels by the same trains, he stops at the same inns, he sits near us at the theater—he even affects the same pictures in the same galleries! It's growing a trifle monotonous. It's really insufferable. I think I shall have to try my stick on him."

"You flatter yourself, Richard," mocked the girl. "He's fully your height and a trifle broader across the shoulders. The lines about his mouth are almost—yes, I should say, quite—as firm as yours, though he is a younger man. His eyes are nice blue ones, and they are very steady. His hair is"—she paused to reflect and tilted her head slightly, her eyes wandering for an instant to the subject of her comment—"light brown, I should call it. And he is beardless, as all self respecting men should be."

She rested her cheek against her lightly clasped hands and sighed deeply to provoke a continuation of her brother's growling disdain.

"'Tis he, the unknown, Dick."

The young gentleman to whom she had referred had seated himself at a table not far distant, given an order with some particularity and settled himself to the reading of a newspaper which he had drawn from the pocket of his blue serge coat. He was at once absorbed, and the presence of the Claibornes gave him apparently not the slightest concern.

"He has a sense of humor," the girl resumed. "I saw him yesterday"—

"You're always seeing him. You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"Don't interrupt me, please. As I was saying, I saw him laughing over the Fliegende Blatter."

"But that's no sign he has a sense of humor. It rather proves that he hasn't. I'm disappointed in you, Shirley. To think that my own sister should be able to tell the color of a wandering blackguard's eyes!"

He struck a match viciously, and his sister laughed.

"I might add to his portrait. That blue and white scarf is tied beautifully, and his profile would be splendid in a medallion. I believe from his nose he may be English, after all," she added, with a dreamy air assumed to add to her brother's impatience.

"Which doesn't help the matter materially that I can see!" exclaimed the young man. "With a full beard he'd probably look like a Sicilian bandit. If I thought he was really pursuing you in this darkly mysterious way I should certainly give him a piece of my American mind. You might suppose that a girl would be safe traveling with her brother."

"It isn't your fault, Dick," laughed the girl. "You know our parents dear were with us when we first began to notice him—that was in Rome—and now that we are alone he continues to follow our trail just the same. It's really diverting, and if you were a good brother you'd find out all about him, and we might even do stunts together—the three of us, with you as the watchful chaperon. You forget how I have worked for you, Dick. I took great chances in forcing an acquaintance with those frosty English people at Florence just because you were crazy about the scrawny blond who wore the frightful hats. I wash my hands of you hereafter. Your taste in girls is horrible."

He was at once absorbed.

"Your mind has been affected by reading these fake kingdom romances, where a ridiculous prince gives up home and mother and his country to marry the usual beautiful American girl who travels about having silly adventures. I belong to the Know Nothing party—America for Americans and only white men on guard!"

"Yes, Richard, your sentiments are worthy, but they'd have more weight if I hadn't seen you staring your eyes out every time we came within a mile of a penny princess. I haven't forgotten your disgraceful conduct in collecting photographs of that homely daughter of a certain English duke. We'll call the incident closed, little brother."

Shirley.

"Our friend Chauvenet-even," continued Captain Claiborne, "is less persistent, less gloomily present on the horizon. We haven't seen him for a week or two. But he expects to visit Washington this spring. His waistcoats are magnificent. The governor shies every time the fellow unbuttons his coat."

"Mr. Chauvenet is an accomplished man of the world," declared Shirley, with an insincere sparkle in her eyes.

"He lives by his wits, and lives well."

Claiborne dismissed Chauvenet and turned again toward the strange young man, who was still deep in his newspaper.

"He's reading the Neue Freie Presse," remarked Dick, "by which token I argue that he's some sort of a Dutchman. He's probably a traveling agent for a Vienna glass factory or a drummer for a cheap wine house or the agent for a Munich brewery. That would account for his travels. We simply fall in with his commercial itinerary."

"You seem to imply, brother, that my charms are not in themselves sufficient, but a commercial traveler hardly commands that fine repose, that distinction, that air of having been places and seen things and known people"—

"Tush! I have seen American book agents who had all that, even the air of having seen places! Your instincts ought to serve you better, Shirley. It's well that we go on tomorrow. I shall warn mother and the governor that you need watching."

Shirley Claiborne's eyes rested again upon the calm reader of the Neue Freie Presse. The waiter was now placing certain dishes upon the table without apparently interesting the young gentleman in the least. Then the unknown dropped his newspaper and buttered a roll reflectively. His gaze swept the room for the first time, passing over the heads of Miss Claiborne and her brother unseemingly with perhaps too studied an air of indifference.

Captain Richard Claiborne and his sister Shirley had stopped at Geneva to spend a week with a younger brother who was in school there and were to join their father and mother at Liverpool and sail for home at once. The Claibornes were permanent residents of Washington, where Hilton Claiborne, a former ambassador to two of the greatest European courts, was counsel for several of the embassies and a recognized authority in international law. He had been to Rome to report to the Italian government the result of his efforts to collect damages from the United States for the slaughter of Italian laborers in a railroad strike and had proceeded thence to England on other professional business.

Dick Claiborne had been ill and was abroad on leave in an effort to shake off the lingering effects of typhoid fever contracted in the Philippines. He was under orders to report for duty at Fort Myer on the 1st of April, and it was now late March. He and his sister spent the morning at their brother's school and were enjoying a dejeuner at the Monte Rosa. There existed between them a pleasant comradeship that was in no wise affected by divergent tastes and temperaments. Dick had just attained his captaincy and was the youngest man of his rank in the service. He did not know an orchid from a hollyhock, but no man in the army was a better judge of a cavalry horse, and if a Wagner recital bored him to death his spirit rose nevertheless to the bugle, and he drilled his troop until he could play with it and snap it about him like a whip.

Captain Claiborne.

Shirley Claiborne had been out of college a year and afforded a pleasant refutation of the dull theory that advanced education destroys a girl's charm or buoyancy, or whatever it is that is so greatly admired in young womanhood. She gave forth the impression of vitality and strength. She was beautifully fair, with a high color that accentuated her youthfulness. Her brown hair, caught up from her brow in the fashion of the early years of the century, flashed gold in sunlight.

Much of Shirley's girlhood had been spent in the Virginia hills, where Judge Claiborne had long maintained a refuge from the heat of Washington. From childhood she had read the calendar of spring as it is written upon the landscape itself. Her fingers found by instinct the first arbutus. She knew where white violets shone first upon the rough breast of the hillsides, and particular patches of rhododendron had for her the intimate interest of private gardens.

As the Claibornes lingered at their table a short stout man espied them from the door and advanced beamingly.

"Ah, my dear Shirley, and Dick! Can it be possible? I heard only by the merest chance that you were here. But Switzerland is the real meeting place of the world."

The young Americans greeted the newcomer cordially. A waiter placed a chair for him and took his hat. Arthur Singleton was an American, though he had lived abroad so long as to have lost his identity with any particular city or state of his native land. He had been an attache of the American embassy at London for many years. Administrations changed and ambassadors came and went, but Singleton was never molested. It was said that he kept his position on the score of his wide acquaintance, he knew every one, and he was a great peddler of gossip, particularly about people in high station.

The children of Hilton Claiborne were not to be overlooked. He would impress himself upon them, as was his way, for he was sincerely social by instinct and would go far to do a kindness for people he really liked.

"Ah me! You have arrived opportunely, Miss Claiborne. There's mystery in the air—the great Stroebel is here—under this very roof and in a dreadfully bad humor. He is a dangerous man—a very dangerous man, but failing fast. Poor Austria! Count Ferdinand von Stroebel can have no successor. He's only a sort of hold-over from the nineteenth century, and with him and his emperor out of the way—what? For my part I see only dark days ahead." And he concluded with a little sigh that implied crumbling thrones and falling dynasties.

The reader of the Neue Freie Presse, preparing to leave his table, tore from the newspaper an article that seemed to have attracted him, placed it in his cardcase and walked toward the door. The eyes of Arthur Singleton lighted in recognition, and the attache, muttering an apology to the Claibornes, addressed the young gentleman cordially.

"Why, Armitage, of all men!" and he rose, still facing the Claibornes with an air of embracing the young Americans in his greetings. He never liked to lose an auditor, and he would in no circumstances miss a chance to display the wide circumference of his acquaintance.

"Shirley—Miss Claiborne—allow me to present Mr. Armitage." The young army officer and Armitage then shook hands, and the three men stood for a moment, detained, it seemed, by the old attache, who had no engagement for the next hour or two and resented the idea of being left alone.

"One always meets Armitage!" declared Singleton. "He knows our America as well as we do—and very well indeed—for an Englishman."

Armitage bowed gravely.

"You make it necessary for me to disavow any allegiance to the powers that rule Great Britain. I'm really a fair sort of American. I have sometimes told New York people all about Colorado, Montana, New Mexico!"

His voice and manner were those of a gentleman. His color, as Shirley Claiborne now observed, was that of an outdoors man. She was familiar with it in soldiers and sailors and knew that it testified to a vigorous and wholesome life.

"Of course you're not English!" exclaimed Singleton, annoyed as he remembered, or thought he did, that Armitage had on some other occasion made the same protest.

"I'm really getting sensitive about it," said Armitage, more to the Claibornes than to Singleton. "But must we all be from somewhere? Is it so melancholy a plight to be a man without a country?"

The mockery in his tone was belied by the good humor in his face. His eyes caught Shirley's passingly, and she smiled at him. It seemed a natural, a perfectly inevitable thing to do. She liked the kind tolerance with which he suffered the babble of Arthur Singleton, whom some one had called an international bore. The young man's dignity was only an expression of self respect. His appreciation of the exact proprieties resulting from this casual introduction to herself and her brother was perfect. He was already with drawing. A waiter had followed him with his discarded newspaper and Armitage took it and idly dropped it on a chair.

"Have you heard the news, Armitage? The Austrian sphinx is here—in this very house!" whispered Singleton impressively.

"Yes; to be sure, Count von Strocbel is here, but he will probably not remain long. The Alps will soon be safe again. I am glad to have met you." He bowed to the Claibornes inclusively, nodded in response to Singleton's promise to look him up later and left them.

When Shirley and her brother reached their common sitting room, Dick Claiborne knghingly held up the copy of the Neue Freie Presse which Armitage had cast aside at their table.

"Now we shall know!" he declared unfolding the newspaper.

"Know what, Dick?"

"At least what our friend without a country is so interested in."

He opened the paper, from which half a column had been torn, noted the Skin diseases, as a rule, are not dangerous, but are unsightly, irritating and often terribly annoying to the sufferer; they depend mainly on bad blood, from one cause or another, for if the blood is pure and the circulation good no skin disease can exist, except it arise from lack of proper cleanliness or from contagion.

To get rid of skin diseases it is necessary to observe strictly all the laws of health; maintain regular action of the bowels; avoid high living, eating only plain nourishing food. Cleanse and keep the blood pure by taking Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks all the secretions, and makes new rich blood by acting on the entire system.

Mrs. E. M. Myers, East Jeddore, N.S., writes:—"I don't think there is anyone in this Dominion can recommend Burdock Blood Bitters more than I can. Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and enswered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

DAIRY FARMS COMPETITION

As announced recently in Farm and Dairy, the prizes won in the dairy farms' competition held last year throughout Ontario by Farm and Dairy, ably assisted by a committee of well-known dairy farmers, have all been ordered from the firm of P. W. Ellis & Company, of Toronto, and are being engraved.

We expect to be able to announce soon the details for this year's final competition. A meeting of the committee of management will be held at an early date when the arrangements will be completed. Certain of the leading prize winners in each of the four districts will be allowed to compete in the final competition that is to take place this year to decide the best farms in the province. Either three or five prizes will be offered in this year's competition.

GET READY

Our readers are reminded that we purpose holding another competition next year, open again to the whole province. It is likely that the Committee of Management will decide to prevent the leading prize winners last year in each district from competing in next year's general competition, although they may be given a chance to try again in the final competition that will follow, provided that they do not win first place in this year's final competition. Those farmers who did not compete last year will have another opportunity to take part in next year's competition.

It is probable that the province will again be divided into four districts as it was last year. Owing to the success of the competition that has just closed, and to the widespread interest it has created, Farm and Dairy expects that there will be a much larger entry list next year than there was last year.

OTHER PRIZE WINNERS

When we published, early in January, in Farm and Dairy the detailed scores of the eight leading prize winners in each district, we neglected to mention that a number of other farmers in each district had also been successful in winning prizes, although their scores had not been published. As it is only fair to these prize winners that their winnings shall be made known, we now take pleasure in announcing them, only regretting that we neglected to mention their names at that time. The other winners in District No. 1 were: Messrs. Bert Bullard, of Plum Hollow; and Jas. Begg of Gravel Hill; in District No. 2, Messrs. Wellington Boulter of Demorestville; J. K. Moore & Son, of Peterboro, and R. W. Walker of Utica; in District No. 3, L. S. Hall & Son, of Churchville; John Baird of Woburn and G. Forester, of Gormley; in District No. 4, W. C. Good, of Brantford; Mason Bros., of Tyrrell; Fred Howell and F. Ellis of St. George. All win silver cups.

PRIZE ESSAYS

Our readers will remember that one of the rules of the competition provided that the winners in the competition must furnish three essays on any branches of their farm work that might be asked for. These essays are to be published in Farm and Dairy during the coming year. As they will be written by practical farmers who have made a distinct success of their farm work, we feel that the readers of Farm and Dairy will have a treat during the coming months reading these articles. The competitors will be asked, in most cases, to write on those subjects for which their farms scored the highest number of points. For instance, Mr. W. C. Shearer, of Bright, who stood in eighth place in the general competition in District No. 4, owing largely to the fact that his buildings were not as commodious as those of some of the other competitors, led all the other competitors in the province in the number of points he scored for freedom from weeds, his farm scoring 70 out of 75 points offered for this. The judge reported that he could scarcely find a weed on Mr. Shearer's farm. On crops, Mr. Shearer stood in second place, as compared with all the other competitors in the province, while on farm management he tied with Mr. R. H. Harding of Thorndale and Mr. O. D. Bales, of Lansing, for second place, they being beaten by only one point by Mr. G. Laithwaite of Goderich.

Articles by such men as these on such subjects are bound to be of great practical value and interest. Watch for them and tell your neighbors about them. If you have a fine farm or any of your neighbors have good farms, try and get them to enter our next competition. Tell them about it now so that they can be preparing for it.

THEY WERE THANKED

At the recent conventions of the Eastern and Western Dairymen's Associations, and of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' and of the Canadian Holstein-Friesian Cattle Breeders' Associations hearty resolutions were passed by their directors, expressing their appreciation of the benefits derived from the holding of such competitions, and expressing their approval of the generosity of those individuals and firms whose liberal cash contributions made the holding of the present competition possible. As the generosity of these donors cannot be too highly commended we take pleasure in again mentioning their names, viz: Dr. James W. Robertson, whose deep interest in agriculture is known all over the Dominion, and who gave $250; The De Laval Separator Company; and The Empire Cream Separator Company, each of whom gave $200; Mr. E. G. Henderson, of the Canadian Salt Company, Windsor, who gave $200 and who for years had urged the Government to hold competitions of this nature; and The Goold Shapley & Muir Company of Brantford, which gave $25.

Had Weak Kidneys For Two Years.

Doctor Failed to Help. Doan's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Mr. Edmund Assels, New Carlisle, Que., writes:—"I feel it my duty to let you know of the great cure I have obtained by using Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled with ray kidneys for two years. I tried a doctor, but he failed to help me. I read in the B.B.B. Almanac about Doan's Kidney Pills, and began using them, and after the first box began to feel better. I only used four boxes and they completely cured me. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure, and would advise everyone suffering from kidney disease to try them."

Perhaps no other organs work harder than the kidneys to preserve the general health of the body and most people are troubled with some kind of Kidney Complaint, but do not suspect it. It may have been in the system for some time. There may have been backache, swelling of the feet and ankles, disturbances of the urinary organs, such as brick dust deposit in the urine, highly colored, scanty or cloudy urine, bladder pains, frequent or suppressed urination, burning sensation when urinating, etc.

Do not neglect any of these symptoms, for, if neglected they will eventually lead to Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes.

Farmers should eat more oatmeal.

Although the farmer of today is able to buy almost anything he wants to wear or to eat he isn't paying enough attention to food values when it comes to his own table.

He feeds his stock carefully, avoids over-feeding and selects the stock food that he believes will give the best return in strength and general efficiency.

If he has been watching the extensive researches and experiments on the question of the best human food for muscle and brain he will heed the advice from all sides to "eat more Quaker Oats."

Quaker Oats is mentioned because it is recognized in this country and Europe as the best of all oatmeals. Feeding farm hands on Quaker Oats means getting more work out of them than if you feed them on anything else. 61

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Dyspepsia, Gas and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache —this is indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach troubles or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy; though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as many people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

ONTARIO CO-OPERATIVE FRUIT MOVEMENT

From Farm and Dairy.

The Co-operative Fruit Growers of Ontario, the central organization with which are affiliated the leading local associations in the province, has this year made a step in advance in reference to the purchasing and distribution of supplies. Up to this year, the directors have simply obtained prices from a number of the wholesale houses and manufacturers and distributed these so that the local associations could write direct to these firms for their supplies. This year they have arranged with the St. Catharines Cold Storage and Forwarding Co., to purchase all of the supplies and distribute to the local associations. In this way they have been able to get lower prices with a better quality of goods. The central association hopes in time to be able to rent or build its own warehouse and to distribute material from some central point. In the meantime, however, this year's plan is a decided step in advance.

It was also ascertained at the last meeting of the executive that it was possible to obtain a charter under the provincial Act, and the executive were instructed to arrange this matter before the annual meeting in the summer. Some of the executive hope to be able to arrange matters so as to sell the product of a number of the smaller associations this year. This will entail some system of inspection and will necessarily have to be gone into rather cautiously. There is no doubt, however, that in time the plan will be perfected and it will aid materially in the organization of smaller associations which are not generally in a favorable position to dispose of their pack. The secretary of the provincial association is P. W. Hodgetts, Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

PROPAGATING STRAWBERRIES FROM SEED

From Farm and Dairy.

W. T. Macoun, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa

Owing to the comparatively short time from the sowing of the seed until the plants bear fruit, the growing of seedling strawberries is one of the most interesting lines of experimental work in fruit culture. If the seeds are sown immediately after ripening they will germinate in four or five weeks if the soil is kept moist, and the plants from them will fruit the next season, if the conditions for growth the first summer are favorable. These conditions may be obtained by growing the plants in cold frames where they can be protected in late autumn and have a longer season for growth. If seed is not sown the same season as planting, it should be held over until spring, mixed with sand or in envelopes. The seed should be sown quite shallow, not more than a quarter of an inch in depth, in well-prepared soil. When the plants are large enough, they should be pricked out about six inches apart, where they will remain until the spring following the planting of the seed. They should then be set out in the open about three feet apart each way. If the plants are grown on a large scale, it may be more practicable to transplant the seedlings directly from the seed-row to the field. No runners should be allowed to form the year the plants are put out in a cold frame. Before a variety is distributed, it should be fruited at least three years as often the promise of the first season is not borne out the next year. As no two seeds from a cultivated variety are likely to produce strawberries exactly alike, one may have five hundred different varieties from five hundred seedlings of one named sort. As a rule, the proportion of varieties which are as good or better than the best on the market is very small.

Considerable work has been done in growing seedling strawberries at the Central Experimental Farm, but as yet no variety has been produced which was thought worthy of introduction. Of 650 seedlings which fruited in 1889, forty were saved. These have been gradually reduced in number until only six are being tested. Most of these are of very good quality, but lack other characteristics desirable in a commercial berry. In 1897, about 1400 seedlings were raised from some of the best named varieties. These were gradually reduced to 34, among which were some of great promise. In the winter of 1905-6 these were practically all winter-killed. Another lot of seedlings has been raised and set out in the hope of better success, and some very promising varieties have fruited.—Extract from Bulletin No. 62, on "Strawberry Culture."

MORE MONEY FOR AGRICULTURE

From Farm and Dairy.

In the second consignment of supplementary estimates which was passed in the Ontario Legislature last week, the following items were among those for agriculture: Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture secures an additional $350, bringing his salary to $3600. The staff of the Ontario Agricultural College comes in for a further consideration of $800, apportioned $50 amounts to each member of the faculty. Mr. G. C. Creelman, president, gets $100.

The Agricultural and Horticultural Societies who waited upon the Government recently to ask for increased grants aggregating over $30,000, secured $7,000, apportioned $5,000 to Agricultural societies and $2,000 to Horticultural societies. The Ottawa and Toronto Horse Shows get $500 each, while $2,000 is given as a grant to the Central Canada Fair Association towards the erection of a dairy building for the Eastern Winter Fair at Ottawa; $3,000 is provided for a cold storage building at Kingston Dairy School. The Ontario Corn Growers' Association secured an additional $250. For the maintenance of offices and expenses of three additional representatives $1,500 is allotted.

New Governmental immigration offices are to be opened up in Toronto near the Union Station; the estimates make provision for $1,000 for their rental and equipment. A big item in the estimates was $464,356.99, which is to be used for colonization roads. Of this sum, $65,000 goes to new trunk roads, $30,000 to the Sudbury-Soo trunk road, $35,000 for the Elk Lake to Gowganda Road and $30,000 for the Charlton to Elk Lake road.

DRAMA of the BIDE-A-WEE

HOME of Abandoned Fido and Pussy a Theatre of Cheery Comedy and Gripping Tragedy of Animal Life, Which Possess a Deep Human Appeal.

One of the Hospital Patients

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

NEW YORK, Saturday.

THERE are very few persons in New York who do not know—or think they know—just exactly what the Bide-a-Wee Home is. They have all read about it so often in the newspapers that they can tell the inquirer in a flash that it is a place where abandoned animals may find temporary refuge. Thus is the matter dismissed for once and for all. "There you are," they say, "and that's all there is to it."

Those persons are right as far as they go. Bide-a-Wee is the Salvation Army of animaldom. But back of the hurried definition, back of the curtain, there is a stage on which is being acted constantly a drama of as many themes as the drama of its participants' masters.

Bide-a-Wee is the greatest real single theatre in New York city. The comedy and tragedy and farce to be found in it rival in variety the comedy and tragedy and farce of makebelieve Broadway.

"Ah, maybe," you sneer, "but only in the lives of a lot of dogs and cats, and what in the world is the use of making a fuss over what you dare call the drama of their lives?" Indeed, we are treating simply of a "lot of dogs and cats"—abandoned dogs and cats, at that! But dogs and cats or men and women, the drama is there. And if, perchance, it may be not so thunderous as the drama of makebelieve of living, human hearts and souls, it is true drama none the less. Every little slant of theme to be divulged herein stands ready to be verified. Distinctly it is up to the sceptics.

Not long ago those in charge of the home of animal drama received a call at the building in Lexington avenue from a woman whose name figures in distinct type in the social chronicles of the metropolis.

"I am about to go abroad with my husband and little daughter for several months," she said. "We have had a dog, a pet, in our home for the last thirteen years. He is getting old now and we have decided to get rid of him. Our trip abroad, we have decided, will afford precisely the opportunity for which we have been waiting. Of course, we are sorry, in a way, to give the dog up, but really he has become a nuisance. Will you take him off our hands?"

Bide-a-Wee said it would and did. The woman, her husband and little girl left for the Continent. The dog, whining, was dragged away from its home by its master's servant and lodged in the kennels of charity.

For a week the animal drooped, moaning, dog fashion, for the family that had loved it in its youth and had deserted it in age. Another week passed, and then one day a waiter from Martin's went to Bide-a-Wee in search of a pet for his little daughter. He did not have enough funds, he said, to buy a good dog and would the persons in charge give him one that needed a home? He promised to take good care of it.

Walking about in the kennel room the waiter spied the whining, abandoned animal. He went close to the dog and patted it. The dog, thankful for the show of affection in this his day of desolation, licked the waiter's hand. "I'd like this one," said the man. And twenty minutes later the animal was being led by a new master to an adopted home.

All the days passed the waiter's baby daughter came to love the dog, and the dog, forgetting his sadness, came to love his new tiny mistress as he had once loved her little predecessor up in the avenue. They played together all through the day, and when nighttime came the dog would sit by the child's cradle until she had gone to sleep. At times the animal would stick its paw through the bars and, imitating the baby's mother's actions, would pat her once or twice.

In this way four months came and went. In the meantime the avenue family had returned from abroad and the little daughter of the rich began to get homesick for the pet that she had lost—that her parents had given away. She missed him. She would not rest content until she had him back. Her parents tried to convince her that the dog was now too old to hate around their home. But still the child insisted.

Giving in to her wish, the father went down to Bide-a-Wee, told his story and asked for the return of the dog.

The father urged, urged again and offered a large sum if the waiter would return his old pet to him, but to no avail. The rich man as a last resort went to the dog and tried by patting him and calling him by name to get the animal to come to him. But the dog remonstrated and ran off into the room where his new little boss sat playing with her doll. That's how far this one drama has gone up to to-day! And probably the curtain has not fallen on it yet.

"It is too late," was the reply. "We have found him a new home."

The father implored the officials to get the dog back for him, but he was assured that such a thing was impossible as far as they were concerned. He was told, however, that he might go to the waiter's home and try to get his pet back from its new master. That same day he did go to the waiter's house, saw the waiter, saw the dog he had abandoned and begged the man to allow him to have the animal for his child's sake.

"But," answered the waiter, "my own little daughter has got to love the dog so I wouldn't give him up for anything."

A Grateful Patient Well on the Way to Recovery

About three months ago the attention of the managers of Bide-a-Wee was called to the case of two Maltese cats and a pug dog in a home up in the West Seventies. The reader shall know the cats as Kara and Neta respectively, and the pug as Jimmy. They were the pets of an aged woman who, with only a servant, lived in the big house else filled with solitude.

One day the mistress of the animals was taken to her bed. She had been ailing for several months and the wear and tear of illness on her already taxed constitution had begun to make their marks upon her. It had been this woman's custom for two years at least to keep her pets with her constantly for company. She loved them; they loved her. There they lived, the four of them in complete harmony. The pets, each in his ornamental basket, slept in a room off the aged woman's boudoir, and when she became confined to her bed throughout the day they would come to her bedside, jump upon the covers and lick her hands in animal token of their affection for her.

Soon the woman sank in health even more, and then came the day with its attack of paralysis. The ambulance was summoned—the patient for greater care was taken to a private hospital. Her pets knew her go. They clambered about the wheels of the conveyance; the cats jumped up on the stepboard as if determined to stick to their mistress; the pug whined and wheezed and barked when they drove him away. The servant, grasping the cats and kicking the dog ahead of him, managed to get the animals back into the house as the ambulance rumbled away.

Once in the house the cats and the dog rushed up the stairs to their mistress' bedroom. They jumped on the bed, as they had done every day before. She was gone. They rummaged about the house. They couldn't find her. The fact of her going away—probably for good—slowly began to get its work in on them. They had seen her go, but they had not been able to appreciate that her leaving was serious. She had left before and had always come back soon. The next day they went to her room and still found her missing. And the next day, too. Then, evidently for the first time, their animal senses seemed to realize the meaning and seriousness of her absence.

The cats and the dog went to their baskets, curled up and remained there. They refused to move. The cats mewed for their missing mistress. The pug remained sullen. The servant placed food before them. They refused to touch it. He tried to force them to eat, but failed. The animals, broken hearted, were going to starve themselves to death.

The servant, at his wits' end, called Bide-a-Wee. And Bide-a-Wee came and took the cats away to save them. Bide-a-Wee did not take the pug. Repulsing every effort that had been made to get him to take food, he had taken his life through starvation, not caring for it, now that his mistress had gone.

A man walking down Third avenue less than a year ago came across a stray Irish terrier whose wasted flesh told its own story. The dog ran to him, brushed up against his legs and mutely indicated to him the eloquence of his distress. The dog had been abandoned and was starving. The man hailed a passing delivery wagon, gathered the dog in and hurried him down to Bide-a-Wee. "Look out for him for a couple of days," he said. "Here's some money that will keep him that length of time. I'll come back for him and give the poor fellow a home." Three days later the man returned, the dog ran to him with a laughing tail, and the man, lifting him up, answered his happy greeting by taking him away to his home on Long Island. The dog, thankful for all the man had done for him, gave daily demonstrations of his gratitude, and one night a month later saved not only the life of his Third avenue rescuer, but the lives of the latter's family as well when he aroused the household by his barking in the dead of night and thus warned the sleeping inmates of the fire that had already begun eating its way up the stairs.

That comedy, even farce, is intermingled here with tragedy and melodrama is to be chronicled through the story of a setter that was found scratching at the door of the Bide-a-Wee stable, begging for admission. Hearing the sounds outside the door, one of the veterinarians looked to learn the cause of the noises and, on opening the door, found the dog cringing there. He lifted it across the footboard that stretches beneath the entrance and led it back to an inner room. The setter was suffering, as far as the man was able to gauge, from nothing more serious than hunger. At least hunger seemed to be the dog's chief trouble. Calling one of the attendants, the man caused a choice assortment of dog nourishment to be placed in front of the animal, and the way the latter got away with the big meal bespoke wonders.

Going about their duties for a few minutes, the two men left the setter alone, and, on returning soon afterward, were surprised to find him gone. They ran to the door and there discovered the setter trying his best to get away.

At that moment a knock was heard on the outside of the door, the latch was pulled aside and a tall, well dressed man entered. But before the latter had a chance to ask the question that was on his tongue he caught sight of the setter, who had run away into a far corner of the office. "How did that dog get in here?" he demanded. He was told. He was also told of the frequently worked on the sympathies of the neighbors for food, and had now beguiled the Bide-a-Wee attendants in the same manner. It has not been chronicled that the setter mistook Bide-a-Wee for a "dog wagon."

That the "happy ending" is not as insistently ubiquitous in the drama of Bide-a-Wee as it is in the drama of Broadway is to be judged from several examples, of which probably the best for chronicle from a "human interest" standpoint is that referred to by the managers of the institution as "the canine married couple." Relevantly, is not the phrase "human interest" as pertinent in relation to some dogs as it is to certain persons classified by the grace of God as human beings?

The original locale of the real drama to which reference has been made was in Harlem. The theme of the play, speaking in the phraseology of Thespis, was:—Is there such a thing as love between male and female animals? The drama in question argued, and argues, for the affirmative. To get to the heart of the story, an inspector on the staff of Bide-a-Wee had his attention some time ago called to two dogs, a female retriever and a male spaniel, who were to be seen every night in the vicinity of the old Harlem Hospital, at Pleasant avenue and 120th street. These dogs were always together and, to all appearances, were homeless. Oddly enough, however, they were never seen until evening.

The inspector endeavored to catch them on numerous occasions, but they eluded his every effort. With the aid of an assistant the inspector finally located the "home" of the couple, under a huge pile of lumber near the hospital grounds. Desiring to solve the mystery that surrounded the canine couple before effecting their capture, the two men "laid low" and watched the movements of the dogs. One day the female did not come out of her "home." The male did, however, but remained away only an hour. Then he returned with a bone that he dragged into the place where his mate was hiding.

This performance was repeated the next day and the day after as well. The curiosity of the men was aroused now, and, enlisting the services of a couple of laborers, they cleared off the snow and began to remove the lumber under which the dogs were making their home. After several hours' work they finally uncovered the mystery, for there, in among the loose boards at the bottom of the pile, they found the little retriever with fourteen puppies, nine of which had been frozen to death. The male dog was keeping guard over his family. Procuring a huge basket, the men removed the dogs and their puppies to Bide-a-Wee, and the curtain fell on the first act.

A month elapsed between the first and second acts. A man came to the institution at the end of that time in search of a foster mother, and the dog and her puppies were passed over into his care. A short time afterward a woman came and took the male dog with her to her home in New Jersey. Upon being separated the dogs whined their sorrow in a manner breathing the grief of human souls. The persons at the institution hated to separate them, but there was no other way.

Again time passed and the third act began. The man who had taken away the mother wrote to Bide-a-Wee that he was giving the animal every care, that she seemed to like him, but that she gave every indication of missing her mate. The woman who had taken the spaniel similarly wrote that the male dog was constantly grieving for the mate from whom he had been separated. And thus the drama rests to-day. Miles apart, in comfortable homes, the dog is sorrowing for his companion and she for him. Their case has been recorded as the most marvellous example of "animal love" that has come to the attention of Bide-a-Wee.

Although a future fourth act to this drama is conjectural, a promise that there may be a possibility for the reunion of the canine couple may rest in the fact that the master of the mother is a bachelor and the mistress of the spaniel an unmarried woman. To be sure, the present writer is alone responsible for the hazarded opinion of the "fourth act," but it cannot be denied that the suggestion is a legitimate and valid one, even if the future shows that the last act is never to be written.

The limits imposed by space prevent a complete account of the many other comedies and tragedies of Bide-a-Wee. By way of fragmentary synopsis, however, there may be recorded the story of a ten-year-old Maltese cat that after the death of its mistress was taken to the institution, where it died a few days later of a broken heart, not hypothetically but actually; the story of a dog and his mate separated and reunited a year later in an accidental way at the "farm" of Bide-a-Wee in New Jersey, and the story of a dog turned adrift by its master on being struck with paralysis and, upon being subsequently cured at the institution, being given into the keeping of a stranger despite the efforts of his originally cruel but now thoroughly repentant master to reclaim him.

There is good dramatic stuff, too, in the story of a dog that was sent to Bide-a-Wee by its Montclair (N. J.) mistress, who had tired of it. The dog, evidently determined to make his mistress take him back, jumped out of a second story window at the home, effected his escape and made his way to the ferry. The dog was found there by a man, who returned him to the home. Again he made his escape in his effort to get back to his mistress, but again he was returned by another man. Oddly enough, Bide-a-Wee finally found a home for the persistent dog in the very town where he had originally lived. But although his new home was near that of the woman who had been hard hearted enough to turn him loose on the world, the dog, with a pride almost human, to this day has never ventured near his first mistress or her house. His new masters say that the dog goes around with a she-will-regret-it-some-day air and is happy. The writer has half a dozen friends who give no indication of having the sense this dog has in matters of the same nature.

HOME-WORK IN SCHOOLS

From Farm and Dairy.

BY A SCHOOL MA'AM

I know very little about farm work except through the children in my school. I should like to speak about Home work, its use and abuse in Public Schools.

To make homework of any use I would have it of an entirely different nature from what the children have been doing in school all day.

At night let the girls be taught sewing. That is an accomplishment no girl should be without, and knitting, crochetting and all kinds of fancy work would be of much more lasting value to most girls than any problems of School work that could be set them by any teacher.

Another thing that should not be neglected is music. If the girls and boys too, had time for the necessary practising, it would soon be a source of joy to them and a pleasure to all the family.

Give the boy a box of tools and teach him to make little things that would be used about the house or barn. Sleighs and little wagons have long been dear to the Loyish heart, and would they not be much more highly prized if made by the boys themselves? It is in youth that habits of industry are formed and if children can only be taught to keep themselves employed, half the work of looking after them is accomplished.

SCHOOL LIBRARY

All country schools now have libraries. The children are supposed to read books of history, travel, fiction, etc., to supplement their readers. There is little or no time in school for this. Why not encourage the children to bring home good books, and instead of sitting down to lessons, read aloud? The benefit to the children themselves would be very great and lasting. In olden times when light was scarce, one sat by the candle and read and the others worked as they listened. One old New England farmer when asked what he did in the winter evening, said: "Sometimes we set and talk and sometimes we just set." That is not a good way to bring up young people. It is the idle hands and idle minds that are in mischief.

It is those children, who read well, who are the best pupils at school. Their eyes have been accustomed to know words at once and no matter what subject is given them to study, they can grasp the meaning quickly and think things out for themselves.

I do not encourage the reading of cheap novels or useless books that are very apt to make boys and girls discontented with their homes and lives and which in that way often does harm. Good books never injure. Children are troublesome only when they are idle and a love of reading—whether out of the newspaper, the farm journal or the library will turn many a restless boy and girl into a quiet happy worker.

The only reason "Homework" is abused when it is given by most teachers at all, is that most parents demand it. Of course some teachers believe in it and give plenty of it, but if the parents were only willing, I think there would be much less than there is. Unless Mary and Johnnie are kept busy from tea-time till they go to bed, with "readin', ritin', and 'rithmetic," their parents think they surely can't be doing anything at school, and express their opinion quite plainly. Personally, I do not believe in "Home-work" at all in the Public School.

When children have studied with scarcely a break from 9 till 4 and in most cases walk a mile or more to and from school, their minds and bodies should be given complete rest—and with children "a change is as good as a rest."

After sitting still all day indoors they need exercise and fresh air—plenty of it. There is usually plenty of work that could be done by both boys and girls out of doors. Interest them in gardens of their own or chickens. Any work or amusement that keeps their minds stimulated and sends them back to school next day fresh, full of life, and ready for the day's work.

HER BABY HAD ECZEMA

Mrs. F. Clark, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to help her. Hearing of some remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment had made we began using it and with the third application the sore began to heal. The cure was thorough and complete and we give all credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment."

MILK VS. BEEF

From Farm and Dairy.

Not long since, an admirer and advocate of the beef animal was inclined to doubt the statement of a Farm and Dairy representative, that in comparison beef and milk would stand two to one in favor of the dairy cow as a producer of human food, reckoning solids only. Our representative wishing to be well within the average and speaking off hand put the ratio two to one. In reality it is higher. Elsewhere in this issue is published the record of one cow owned by the dairy department of the University of Missouri. Her record many times doubles that of the best record possible for any steer. In one year, this cow produced more human food in milk than is contained in the complete carcasses of four steers weighing 1,250 lbs. each.

In the light of such facts, is it any wonder that dairying is becoming more and more popular and that as the price of land advances dairying is resorted to more and more.

A WISE RECOMMENDATION

From Farm and Dairy.

The Canadian Commission of Conservation, which has Hon. Clifford Sifton as its Chairman, and Dr. Jas. W. Robertson as one of its officers, is taking its work seriously, and since its start has made an excellent impression. Recently the following resolution was adopted by the Commission:

"That in future no unconditional "titles to water powers should be given, but that every grant or lease "of powers should be subject among "others to the following conditions:

"1st. Development within a specified time.

"2nd. Public control of rates.

"3rd. A rental with the power to refuse same at a later period."

In harmony with the foregoing resolution the Commission has taken a strong stand against the proposition to dam the St. Lawrence River at the Long Sault, or to any similar proposition involving the construction of a dam across the St. Lawrence.

We are in great need of an organized body such as the Conservation Commission to protect the rights of the people. Practically all of the great fortunes that have been made during the past century in both Canada and the United States have been acquired through securing the control of monopolies in one form or another, thereby enabling a few men to squeeze the public for their benefit. A favorite form of monopoly has been the control of water powers. If the Conservation Commission can succeed in preserving the rights of the public to their water powers it will save hundreds of millions of dollars to the people of Canada. As farmers, we should back up every public movement of this kind to our utmost. The resultant benefits will flow back to us, directly and indirectly, through many channels.

NOT TO BE TOLERATED

Miss Laura Rose, Dairy School, Guelph

From Farm and Dairy.

In Farm and Dairy, Feb. 17th, this statement, by a creameryman of Victoria Co., Ont., stood out prominently, "I would rather have dirty cooled cream than clean, uncooled cream in creamery work." As one read the lines the sensation produced was like getting a hard knock backward when you thought you were making fairly good progress toward better conditions.

There should be no preference given whatever to dirty cream, whether it be cooled or uncooled. Surely after all that has been taught, written and legislated for, in regard to raising the standard of our dairy products by producing cleaner milk, such a statement comes as a shock.

Cleanliness is always first, then comes the cooling. They go hand in hand and cannot be separated and ing and prices are low. They are quoted comparisons between cleanliness and coolness should not be made. Dirty milk is such a serious thing, no concession should be given it on any ground. We know the need and value of quick and thorough cooling, but cleanliness comes before, afterwards and at all times.

CULTIVATE CHEERFULNESS

Cheerfulness will attract more customers, sell more goods, do more business with less wear and tear than almost any other quality. Optimism is the greatest business-getter, biggest trader, the greatest achiever in the world. Pessimism has never done anything but tear down and destroy what optimism has built up.

In the business office, as in society, everywhere, the favorite is always the cheerful person. Good-natured, cheerful people do not waste their vital energy as rapidly as the grumbler or the too sober, too sad people. They work with much less friction.

Good cheer is a great lubricant; it oils all of life's machinery. Shakespeare says:

"A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile—a."

There is no other life habit which can give such a prolific return in happiness and satisfaction as that of being cheerful under all circumstances. If the resolution to cultivate cheerfulness is strongly made at the very outset, it will not be difficult to form the cheerful habit, and it will be the best protection against suffering and disappointment.—"Success."

LONDON, March 10.—Liverpool and London cables quote live cattle (American) higher, at 12¾c to 14½c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef firmer, at 10¾c to 11½c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, March 10.—The railways reported 102 carloads of live stock as the receipts for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 1217 cattle, 3609 hogs, 301 sheep and lambs, 125 calves and 2 horses.

Exporters

We did not hear of any cattle being offered or sold for export purposes on this market, but 5 car loads of the best cattle picked from amongst the best loads of butchers sold here on Tuesday and Wednesday, were sent up to the Union Market on Wednesday, when the exporters were selling at high figures. Bulls of export weights sold at $4.75 to $5.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought 280 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Company at the following quotations: Steers and heifers, $4.90 to $5.25; cows, $3.50 to $5; bulls, at $3 to $5.25.

There were a few sales of prime picked lots quoted at $5.90 to $6, but as will be seen by sales given below, they were few in number, not more than a dozen out of 1200 cattle on sale.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports little being done in stockers and feeders. Mr. Murby bought 70 mixed feeders, stockers and butchers, 700 to 900 lbs., at $3.60 to $4.90 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a good supply of milkers and springers. There was a moderate demand, but prices were reported to be about $5 to $8 per head lower than a week ago. Prices ranged from $35 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The supply of veal calves was not large and prices were firm at $3 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs

Receipts for the two days were about 300, which sold at higher quotations. Sheep, ewes sold at $5 to $5.60, and a few selects at $6; rams and culls, $4 to $5 per cwt.; lambs, $7.50 to $8.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts from all sources for the two days were reported by the railways to be 7809. Prices have advanced steadily all week, closing firm at $9.50 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $8.75, f.o.b., cars at country points.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Jos. Mesci was hanged yesterday at Prince Albert, Sask., for the murder of his employer, and the latter's wife and mother-in-law.

It is said on good authority at Regina that Hon. W. R. Motherwell will be appointed to the Railway Commission in a short time.

Philander Knox, jr., son of the Secretary of State, has been cut off with an allowance of about $100 a month, for marrying May Boler.

The first session of the twelfth Parliament of British Columbia was prorogued yesterday afternoon. At the morning several bills were killed.

The strike of papermakers and sulphite workers at Corinth, N.Y., has now spread to five mills of the International Paper Co. Four hundred men walked out yesterday afternoon at the Fort Edward mills, making 1,500 and odd men out in all.

North Bay Citizens Indignant.

North Bay, March 11—Arrangements made for the presentation of the Royal Albert medal to Thomas Reynolds, for heroism at the Spanish River wreck, are far from satisfactory to his friends, and North Bay citizens generally.

It was thought at first that the presentation would take place on the floor of the House of Commons, but Massey Hall, Toronto, was suggested as being a more suitable building, with more central location. No objection was taken to this move particularly, although many thought that his home town should have had the honor, next to Ottawa. Now it turns out that the event is to be made the drawing card for a 50-cent entertainment, held by a Toronto society, and the copy of the plan of reserved seats has been received in North Bay, in solicitation of orders for tickets.

North Bay citizens are indignant that the event should be used as an advertising medium, and they hope that when Mr. Reynolds is made acquainted with the facts that he will refuse to be a party to it. North Bay could handle the event without any trouble, and without charging any admission fee.

Preparing For Peary.

London, March 11.—Commander Robert E. Peary, it was announced here yesterday, is bringing proofs of his polar achievement with him and will make them public at a meeting which he is to address at Albert Hall under the auspices of the Royal Geographical Society.

Already, two months ahead of the date of his lecture, the applications for seats are said to twice fill the great hall. The members of the royal family are expected to be present at both the lecture and the banquet preceding it.

"I can see no reason," said Sir Ernest Shackleton, yesterday, "why Commander Peary, who had dogs with him, should not have done what he has claimed. The dogs, of course, must have done the pulling, the men could not. On my journey from the ship I covered on five successive days 20, 18, 22, 26 and 29 miles."

Bernhardt Coming.

New York, March 11.—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt will come to this country next November to act in a repertory of eleven plays. She will open in Chicago and will play in New York during the three weeks previous to Christmas. After her New York engagement Mme. Bernhardt will begin a tour of the country which will take her to every large city in the east, south and west.

Mme. Bernhardt said in Paris the other day that she was to play only at the most beautiful theatres in America. She did not relish a repetition of her 1906 trip, when she was forced to play in tents, halls and auditoriums unsuited to dramatic presentations. Mme. Bernhardt will bring with her a large company from her theatre in Paris.

Gaspe as Winter Port.

Campbellton, N.B., March 11.—It is announced here that a company, composed of capitalists, of which it is believed the Canadian Northern are not the least prominent, may be formed to continue railroad lines to Gaspe, Quebec, with the idea of making that port the winter port of Canada.

It is claimed the harbor at Gaspe is free of ice practically all the time, and that the water is deep enough in all parts to allow the largest ocean steamships to come direct to any wharves which may be built, without the necessity of dredging a yard of mud.

Postoffice Burglary.

Greenwood, March 11.—The store belonging to M. Gleeson here was entered by thieves early yesterday morning, and the postoffice till robbed and several articles taken. Luckily the postmaster had left only about $3 in the till. The burglars gained entrance through a back window, and took out a panel from the inner door. The theft of goods was not large as only several small articles such as tobacco, etc., were missed.

ICE JAM BREAKS.

Damage by Flood Near Chatham Will Be Heavy.

Chatham, March 11.—At 2.45 yesterday afternoon, the ice blockade at Prairie Siding broke of its own accord, and the mass of ice commenced a rapid journey down the river to the lake.

This means that the farmers, who have been marooned for over one hundred hours, will now be able to get into communication with the outside world.

The damage done by the flood is beyond present calculations. The water has been rushing over the plains for over three days and three nights. The fall wheat is most likely all flooded out of the ground, and it is quite probable that pools of stagnant water will stand on the lowlands till long after the spring work is over. Besides this, the damage to stock must be immense. Cattle, horses, pigs and fowl had to be placed on straw stacks for safety, and in some cases animals have died of exposure.

The flood this year was not as great in depth as that of six years ago, but it was of longer duration, and, therefore, more destructive.

Congregation Endorses Him.

Corunna, Mich., March 12.—A. B. Leonard, superintendent of this Methodist district, on Wednesday requested Rev. David Hicks to resign the pastorate of the Corunna Methodist church, and ordered him to vacate the parsonage at once. This action followed a trip by Mr. Leonard to Gesto, Ont., where he investigated Mr. Hicks' affairs. He failed to find the receipt for $210 missionary money which Mr. Hicks declares he forwarded to Montreal before he left the Gesto charge.

Yesterday, however, the congregation showed their faith in him by presenting him with a purse containing $150, and the request for his resignation was withdrawn. The local congregation sympathize with Hicks because they believe that he is honest and would square his accounts in Gesto if given a chance. He has six children, the oldest six years old and the youngest two.

Couldn't Travel Through U. S.

Montreal, March 11.—The might of the British Jack Tar has been shown in an incident not heard of to-day.

Sixteen men of H. M. S. Egeria, which is to become a training ship for the Canadian navy, passed through here yesterday, en route from the Pacific coast, to Halifax. It had been intended that they should travel through on the C.P.R. to Portland, but the U. S. authorities took advantage of the law forbidding the passage of armed foreigners through their country, and although the sailors were not armed, it was held that sixteen was too large a number of men in the British service to travel together. The men left here over the I.C.R.

Private Betting Won't Be Illegal.

Ottawa, March 11.—It is hardly likely that Miller's anti-betting bill will be made a Government measure, and it is impossible to forecast its fate in the House.

Five members of the committee are in favor of the bill, and two members, F. D. Monk and J. B. McColl, suggest as an amendment that betting be allowed during the progress of a meet.

Before recommending the bill to the House it was finally agreed to get the opinion of the Justice Department as to the phraseology of the bill in order to make certain that private betting is not declared illegal.

Municipal Bakery for London?

London, Ont., March 11.—A movement is on foot here to ask the Government for an investigation into the bread question.

Instances have been reported where dealers are sending wagons long distances into the country, and selling farmers two loaves more for a dollar than city patrons are getting. There is also considerable talk of establishing a municipal bakery.

Falling Wall Kills Two.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 11.—With a low rumbling sound a 50-foot brick wall left standing in the ruins of the fire which early Tuesday morning partially destroyed the bolt and nut manufacturing plant of M. Lang & Sons, collapsed yesterday, burying twenty workmen, mostly foreigners, who were razing the ruins, killing two and injuring ten more.

Sir Edward Doesn't Know.

London, March 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Commons yesterday, Sir E. Grey, replying to Donald McMaster, M.P., said after communication through Hon. James Bryce with the United States, another expert had been delegated in conjunction with the United States consul-general at Ottawa to discuss tariff relations with the Dominion Government. Sir Edward Grey had not heard the results of what had passed.

20,000 STRIKERS CLASH WITH PHILADELPHIA POLICE IN THE CITY'S LEADING THOROUGHFARE

Main Street Transformed Into Battleground Where Fierce Engagement Lasted Two Hours Yesterday—The Mob Trampled, Kicked, Cuffed and Whirled Into Side Streets.

NO GUN WAS FIRED

Philadelphia, March 10.—The police fought and whipped 20,000 strikers and their sympathizers in the heart of the city this afternoon. Broad Street, from the Philadelphia National League Park to the City Hall, was a battleground for two hours.

The great thoroughfare was choked with men and women who struggled to break down the police barricades and surround the City Hall. Hundreds of them were pounded to the street stones, trampled by men and horses, kicked and cuffed, and whirled headlong to side streets. It is impossible to say how many were hurt. The police troubled to make few arrests, but after the mob was split and broken and its parts were driven helter-skelter into the side streets, you saw scores of men—now and then a woman—whose heads had been cut open by savage blows of the club, who were nursing an arm paralyzed by the smashing impact of a policeman's mace.

Truck Load of Millinery.

Broad Street was a curious spectacle after the battle had roared itself away and none were left but the files of policemen on guard. For squares the asphalt was littered with hats — men's hats and women's—head coverings that had been crushed and swept away in the driving rushes of the policemen. A truck load of damaged millinery might have been gathered up. There were shoes that had been torn off by their owners and thrown at the police, and many of them were women's.

The unions had obtained, as they said, permission from President Horace Fogel ,of the baseball club, to use the park. Their final word last night was that the meeting would be held despite Clay or anybody else. It was a straight-out defiance to the city authorities — an invitation to trouble. They were busy all night recruiting forces. They depended on 2,000 brawny mechanics who had struck at the Baldwin Locomotive Works to lead the march to the iCty Hall. Clay ordered John Taylor, superintendent of polic e,to take as many men as necessary and prevent the strikers from assembling in the baseball park, or anywhere elsc..

Not a Shot Fired.

Throughout all the clubbing not a shot was fired by the strikers or their friends. Occasionally the police shot over the heads of the crowd as a warning. Block by block the mob was split apart and the sections beaten. Every side street was used as an avenue of escape by persons who had felt the weight of clubs.

When Broad and Green Streets was reached there must have been 5,000 persons left in the labour column. Some of these were badly battered and bruised, but they stuck stubbornly to the march. Taylor had drawn an imaginary line across Broad Street at that point, and the instructions to the police were to let nobody pass it. Here was the last of the encounters. It was also the worst.

Details from stations nearby were rushed to the scene on horse and in automobiles. Fifty mounted policemen galloped up Broad Street from the City Hall. And right in front of the Central High School the final movement of the police, which was successful in destroying the integrity of the crowd, took place. It was simply an onslaught. There was no attempt by the men and women to fight back. The High school pupils watched the ugly sight from the windows of their building.

Policeman Hit by Brick.

One policeman was struck by a brick and knocked from an automobile as it swung into Broad Street from Green Street. The police saw this, and made their charge more determined. For two minutes it was a wild scene.

Clubs rose and fell with sickening regularity. Women were hit as well as men. Clothes were torn, women lost their headgear, pistol shots were fired into the air, and the reports of these served to increase the wild desire of the crowd to get away.

When it was over only scattered hundreds remained upon the street. the rest had fled, as had those before them, into the side streets. Once detached from the main body, the police kept them moving.

As the hands of the City Hall clock pointed to 2 o'clock Superintendent Taylor entered an automobile and was driven back to the City Hall. The trouble was over.

New Zealand Steamship Company Starts Line to Link Antipodes With Canada.

Ships Will Bring Australian Produce to Canada and Carry Our Manufactured Goods to Antipodes.

It has just been announced by the Canadian Government that a new direct service between Canadian Atlantic ports, and Australia and New Zealand will be put on this summer. This service is to be put on by the New Zealand Shipping Company, which is one of the big steamship companies of the world. It is expected that this new line will result in a large accretion of trade between Eastern Canada and the Antipodes, the boats bringing frozen meat, wool tallow, hides and other Australasian products to Canada, and taking back manufactured products, such as agricultural implements, flour, carriages, buggies, boots and shoes, sewing machines, and other Canadian manufactured articles, which have for long past been in strong demand in Australia.

The new service will be inaugurated with the sailing of the S. S. "Rakaia," from Montreal on May 15th, and monthly sailings thereafter.

The New Zealand Shipping Company, which is inaugurating this new venture, is one of the strong shipping companies of the world. It was inaugurated in New Zealand in 1873, with several sailing vessels, but speedily grew, until, with the advent of steam vessels, it took on a new phase, and became a concern with world-wide affiliations. At present its headquarters are at London, England, and the company owns 17 first-class modern steamships, operating all over the world.

In its origin the company was formed by a number of New Zealand farmers, who felt the necessity for foreign outlet for their trade, but its success speedily caused it to outgrow this limited start.

The service will be operated by five steamships, Montreal being the summer port and West St. John the winter port. The names of the vessels are as follows: "Rakaia," "Whakatane," "Waimate," "Papanui" and "Wakanui."

The vessels to be engaged in the service will be comparatively speedy and of large carrying capacity. This service is of more than ordinary importance to the Manufacturers in Canada, particularly those in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, for the reason that it will enable them to lay their commodities down in the Australasian markets with regularity, and permit them to compete on an equal footing with their friends south of the boundary. It is the intention of the New Zealand Shipping Company to give the Canadian manufacturer every facility and concession which the American manufacturer now enjoys and which Canadians have felt for some time past they were not obtaining through the port of New York, owing to certain discrimination. A matter worthy of note is that although New Zealand granted to the Canadians a preferential tariff some years ago the same has been of little benefit as it is claimed by Canadian manufacturers that the Steamship Lines operating out of New York immediately advanced freight rates against the Canadians, so as to practically offset the advantage in the duty in order to place the American manufacturer on an equal footing with the Canadian. The New Zealand Shipping Company and Canadian Government in establishing this service feel confident of the full and undivided support of the Canadian Shipping Public. There is undoubtedly sufficient traffic to warrant the success of the Line.

These vessels are approximately 9,000 tons burden each, and are all equipped with the most modern cold storage facilities for the carriage of frozen meats from the Antipodes.

This service will undoubtedly promote a more friendly feeling between Australia, New Zealand and Canada, and also increase the interchange of commodities between these great links of the Empire.

SURPRISED BY POLICE

Young Men Were Making Merry at the Carters' Shelter Last Night When the Police Walked In—Had a Keg of Beer and a Fiddler.

WERE FINED IN COURT

Four young men, with the aid of a ten-gallon keg of beer and an old "fiddler," proceeded to make merry at the carters' shelter on Water St. last evening, but they had but got nicely started when in walked three policemen and thus brought the merry making to a sudden stop. The four participants in the fun were dancing and singing to the strains of music from an old-time fiddle," played by one Thomas Collins, of Kinmount, who is an adept at the "fiddling" game. One of the number got away, but the remaining members were all lodgers at the police station for the night. During the long hours of incarceration the fiddler enlivened things by frequent spasms from his violin. They appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the police court this morning. The old man was discharged, but the remaining merry-makers were each fined two dollars and costs, amounting to $5.75, payable forthwith. Three pleaded guilty. When the police made their entrance, the candle that lighted the place was quickly extinguished and all rushed for the door. Only one got away. Keg and fiddle were both brought to the police station and were produced in court this morning.

P. Francis, carter, in the witness box, said that the carters' shelter was in a dirty condition this morning. Broken bottles were strewn over the floor and the telephone book was gone.

P. C. Meagher said that last night he was called into the City Hotel and told that a keg of beer had been stolen. P. C's. Newhall, Meharry and witness went to the carters' shelter and found the prisoners and a keg. They had been dancing and Collins had a "fiddle." The officers brought them to the police station.

Thomas Collins said that his home was at Kinmount. The young men invited him over to play the "fiddle."

"Will we send the keg up to the gaol?" the Chief asked.

"Probably they would work better if they could refresh themselves once in a while," his Worship replied.

HONEYED WHISKEY AND THE PURE STUFF

Woman In Lakefield Was Found Intoxicated—Where Did She Get It?

An intoxicated woman in Lakefield is somewhat above the limit. One would almost expect to find a snow ball on Civic Holiday as to find a Lakefield woman "under the weather" and for that reason the occurrence has aroused the authorities with the result that information has been laid against one of the business men of the village who it is alleged supplied the inebriant. It occurred one Saturday during the past month and as the woman was kept in the Lakefield gaol, wherever that is, from Saturday to Monday there was some talk as to where she got it. Inspector Stewart and Inspector Williams, of Havelock, investigated the case. The former asserts that a man who shared the stuff with the woman told him that there was honey in the first lot, but the second bottle she procured was straight '87. The business man denied the woman's story in every particular. The case is scheduled to be presented to Magistrate Edmison in a short time.

PITCHED BATTLE

5,000 Rioters and Band of Strike-Breakers Clash at Trenton, N.J., Early To-day and Four Men Fatally Injured—Many Shots Were Fired.

POLICE CALLED OUT

Special Wire to The Examiner.

Trenton, N. J., March 11. — In a pitched battle between 5,000 rioters and a band of strike breakers, 15 men were injured, four fatally early today. As sixty non-union men brought from New York, guarded by police, walked into a waiting car and attempted to run it the mob attacked them with revolvers and missiles. While the manifestants fired fusilades the fugitives hid under the seats and the car rushed through the mob to the quarters arranged for the strike breakers. A few of the newcomers answered the fire of the crowd, firing blindly without daring to raise their heads to view. The police reserved from all over the city were called out and attacked the mob, which finally dispersed.

STILL ON THE JOB

Rutherford Has Not Yet Resigned But is Expected To Do So.

Special to The Examiner.

Edmonton, March 11.—Rutherford still retains premiership, but it is expected by many that with the two remaining ministers, Marshall and Lessard he will resign to-day and Cushing will be called upon to form cabinet. It is reported that Senator Talbot has been wired to return from Ottawa by those opposed to Cushing and asked to assume Liberal leadership. It is also reported that Chief Justice Sifton may be asked to assume premiership.

NORWOOD FAMILY GONE TO THE WEST

Norwood Register.

At the morning service in the Methodist Church last Sunday very kind reference was made by the pastor to the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McNeeley and family and Mrs. Fred. Lennox and her son. All have been life-long residents of this community and occupy a warm place in the hearts of the people, whose prayers and best wishes accompany them to their new homes in the great West. Miss Mary Hendren, who possesses a sweet soprano voice, has for several years rendered valuable service in the choir. The hope was expressed that in their new home they would find avenues through which they could assist in the moral and spiritual uplift of the masses, who are now flocking to that part of our Dominion.

WAS MADE A PRIEST

Rev. D. A. Casey, of Newport, County Tipperary, Ireland, Ordained This Morning at St. Peter's Cathedral by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

One of the most impressive and beautiful ceremonies of the Catholic church took place in St. Peter's Cathedral this morning when Rev. D. A. Casey, of Newport Co., Tipperary, Ireland, was raised to the priesthood by His Lordship, Right Reverend Bishop O'Connor. The church was filled to overflowing by a large congregation, many of whom are already personally acquainted with Father Casey since his arrival in Peterborough. Many friends came from beyond the city limits, including Father Casey's brother, Mr. Thomas J. Casey, of Montreal, the Hon. Senator Coffey, proprietor "Catholic Record," London, Mr. Burns, "Catholic Record," London, and Mr. J. Coffey, Westmount, Montreal.

His Lordship Bishop O'Connor was assisted by Rev. Father W. J. McColl, rector St. Peter's Cathedral, and Rev. Father Phelan, Lakefield. Father V. G. McFadden, Douro, was Master of Ceremonies. The other clergy present included Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Lindsay, Rev. Father Galvin, Galway, Rev. Father W. P. Meagher and Rev. Father Toner, of the Cathedral, Rev. Father O'Leary.

After the ceremony Father Casey imparted his blessing to the congregation individually. His brother, Senator Coffey and Mr. Burns, receiving the first blessing.

Rev. Father D. A. Casey made his philosophical and theological course in All Hallow's College, Dublin, Ireland. He arrived in Peterborough from Ireland last October and then proceeded to St. Michael's College, Toronto, where he completed his studies. On Saturday he received sub-deaconship from the hands of Bishop O'Connor.

Many congratulatory messages were received by the many present this morning, including cablegrams from his brother, Rev. D. P. Casey, P.S.M., of Buenos Ayres, his parents in Ireland, and the members of the Newport, Tipperary T.A.S. Many others came from friends in Canada and the States.

Father Casey will say his first mass in St. Peter's Cathedral to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock, and his first solemn high mass in St. Peter's on Sunday.

Father Casey will be attached to the staff of St. Peter's Cathedral, and as he is already favourably known to Peterborians we have no doubt he will be most popular with all classes. Father Casey dallies in literature considerably and is already well known as a contributor to the "Catholic Record," "Benziger's Magazine," etc., besides most of the Irish journals.

A Classy Bill at the Gem.

(Rochester Post.-

The first nighters at the Gem enjoyed an A No. 1 bill last night from its final drop. The picture plays were instructive as well as entertaining and were never before shown in the city. The orchestral numbers rendered last evening were the latest hits from the Whitmark house, featuring the new Whitmark melody. The first vaudeville number, the McCann children, was cancelled after the first performance. Sampsel and Reily are vocalists, balladists and duettists of rare ability. Sampsel's phenomenal yodling was one of the features, while Miss Reily has a very sweet high soprano voice of range and flexibility. Her last number is "Bonnie Sweet Bessie." The closing number is a conversational duet, Carrie Marry Harry." A half dozen curtain calls followed this number. Their stage presence and costumes are elegant, and the act is one of the finest dressed ever seen on a local stage "The Musical Waiters" had a task before them, as Wilcox and Gilmore put on a similar act last week. The Waiters' act in a 1910 novelty, and differs greatly from the ordinary. Special mention should be made of the different selections played by the artists with dishes, forks, spoons, eatables, etc., while the artists are partaking of a lunch. Miss Walters plays a medley on the buttons of her partner's uniform to the delight of the audience. The closing number is a great hit. Miss Walters plays her own accompaniment on the piano while she dances the latest buck.

The above artists will be at the Royal Theatre to-night (Friday) and Saturday.

TO-NIGHT'S MASS MEETING WILL BE A SUCCESS

There promises to be a large attendance at the meeting in the Grand Opera House this evening when Mr. E. T. Coulton of New York will speak on "The world without a Foreign Land." Mr. Coulton is associated with Mr. John R. Mott in the Foreign Department of the Young Men's Christian Association work of North America, and having made a visit to most of the world's foreign lands, and made a careful and complete study of his subject, is eminently fitted to deal with it. Those who heard Mr. Coulton in Peterborough about a year ago testify as to his ability to present in a strong and pleasing way his subject matter.

Mr. Coulton will have associated with him to-night Messrs. G. E. Truman and G. S. Phelps, who have both been in Japan and will relate some of their experiences.

Miss Pringle, soloist in Charlotte Street Methodist church, will contribute to the programme of the evening.

The meeting is under the auspices of the Foreign Work Committee of the local Association, and Alderman Turner, chairman of that committee, will preside.

No person who is interested in conditions and current events, in foreign lands, can afford to miss to-night's meeting, which is open to everybody. No admission charge.

FARMER FOUND DEAD ON A LONELY ROAD

Omemee, March 10.—Mr. Arnold Toole was found dead this morning on the road near his farm house. He had been to Mount Pleasant yesterday afternoon, and is supposed to have tried to break the road to his place on the highway, which had been drifted for some time. His horses were found a few rods away, both dead, having perished from exhaustion and exposure. Coroner Blanchard, of Lindsay, was notified. After viewing the remains and hearing a few statements he decided an inquest was unnecessary. Mr. Toole was a good musician and will be greatly missed.

It appears that the deceased, Arnold Toole, who is about 49 years of age, lived in the village of Omemee with his mother, one brother and two sisters. He and his brother are both unmarried and in the summer time they ran a farm a short distance south of the village, or across the pond.

Tuesday morning he left for Mount Pleasant with a load of grain to the grist mill, and on his way home the same afternoon he called at the home of Mr. Isaac McGee, a well known farmer. He remained at Mr. McGee's about half an hour and was last seen passing Balfour's corner about two miles from Omemee, shortly after four o'clock.

Did Not Return.

When he did not return that evening his brother went out in search of him. He first went across the pond to the farm, thinking that the brother may have stopped there all night and he was attending to the stock there before returning to Omemee. However, he soon discovered that his brother had not reached the farm, and becoming alarmed he proceeded to search and make enquiries. After searching for some time he found the lifeless body of his brother in a fence corner on a side road, a road very seldom used during the winter, owing to it being as a rule badly blocked. About twenty rods on farther he saw the two horses and on examining them found that one, the younger was dead, while the other was so badly cut and bruised that it had to be shot.

The dead man's brother immediately summoned aid and Dr. Blanchard, coroner, of Lindsay, was made aware of the sad case. When he arrived, and after examining the body and ascertaining the facts of the case, he decided that it would be unnecessary to hold any inquest. He ascribed the death as being due to exposure.

Took a Short Cut.

It appears that during the winter this road is very seldom used and that the road on the ice is always in first-class condition. However, to get to the Toole farm the badly blocked road was shorter by about two miles than the one on the ice. The deceased evidently took the highway road in order to get to the farm sooner. After driving a short distance it was noticed, according to the footsteps, that Toole got off the sleigh and proceeded to walk. The team got off the road entirely and it is assumed that Toole fell down exhausted in the fence corner and perished from exposure.

Fought For Liberty.

The team continued through the snow for twenty rods and landed in the fence corner, where they were penned in by the fence and the deep snow. A teritic struggle for liberty must have ensued. The younger of the two horses was crushed against the fence and sank into the deep snow, while the other animal evidently plunged about trying to free itself from the harness and from the deep snow. When found the younger animal was dead and horribly cut and bruised. The others one was still living but had to be shot owing to the many nasty wounds it had received.

The deceased was a son of the late David Toole, was well known in Omemee and was popular in musical circles. He is survived by his mother, one brother, Mr. Ira Toole, fishery inspector, and two sisters, Carrie and Hettie.

WELL KNOWN CAVAN MAN HONOURED BY FRIENDS

Mr. S. E. Ferguson, of Cavan, who has been appointed Deputy Jailor, of Durham and Northumberland, at Cobourg, was given a hearty farewell banquet by his friends of Millbrook, and Cavan, in the Oddfellows' Hall, Millbrook, on Friday night last.

Mr. Ferguson is one of the best known residents of Cavan, having been for some years Reeve and later Warden of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland.

At the banquet which was tendered Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Robert Vance of Ida, presided, and over one hundred friends of the guest of the evening were present, including Lieut.-Col. H. A. Ward, ex-M.P., Port Hope, Reeve John C. Kells, Millbrook, Reeve T. A. Kelly, Cavan, W. H. Lough, G. E. Burnham, Chas. McNeil, ex-Warden, R. J. Doak, J. N. McGill, J. Arthur Vance, T. B. Collins, W. S. Given, J. J. Fair, H. R. Armstrong and J. H. Gardiner.

Mr. Ferguson was presented with a splendid solid leather club bag, a case of pipes and a solid gold signet ring.

Mr. Ferguson made a feeling reply, stating that it almost overcame him to attempt to voice his appreciation of the kindness of his friends. While he would for a time at least be living in Cobourg his heart and thoughts would never be absent form the old scenes and warm friends in Cavan. He would wear the ring always, ever remembering that it represented the pure gold, and never ending circle of good fellowship manifested by the donors.

Gin Pills Guard Both

Think of being stricken down by illness at a lonely ranch—or all alone, in the great north woods! Many times, this has happened to those hardy pioneers who "blazed the trail" to new fields.

Mr. James is one of these brave men who is making a name and a fortune for himself in the far West. Unfortunately, Mr. James overtaxed his strength and for a time, it looked as if he would have to give up his claims and his work.

Mouse, B. C.

"I have much pleasure in testifying to what Gin Pills have done for me. I divide the year about equally, working on the ranch and on various logging claims, being consequently entirely dependent on bodily fitness for a living. At times, I have suffered like many others in this country from Backache and Weak Kidneys, sometimes to the extent of being laid off for weeks altogether.

Having tried many remedies, I have pleasure in stating that your Gin Pills are the only remedy from which I have received any permanent benefit. I had been using Gin Pills only a short time when the pain and trouble left me and have not returned since.

I take care to always have Gin Pills by me, though my present condition does not require medicine.

I have recommended Gin Pills to other men with similar results."

J. EDWARD JAMES

Gin Pills have proved a friend in need to thousands of those suffering from Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Lame Back and Rheumatism, and the Constipation and Biliousness that usually accompany these diseases.

THE NAVAL DEBATE.

The debate in the Dominion Parliament on the bill to provide a Canadian navy, which has, for the past five weeks, like a wounded sea serpent, dragged its slow length along, is nearing a finish. The beginning of the end came last Wednesday night, when the first division was called; and the curtain began to descend with red-fire effects. In the chamber the dropping fire of oratory was proceeding from the last of eighty-two speakers, who had addressed themselves, more or less relevantly to the question, in the Parliamentary restaurant, which had been converted into a saloon, for the occasion, the last of the mid-week receptions and informal dances given by the wives of Cabinet Ministers, was going forward. There was music and the gay hum of revelling by night; the lamps shone on fair women, in gorgeous attire, and brave men in evening dress. Among the latter were many members and grouped in the adjoining refreshment rooms were many more. A little before twelve o'clock the thrilling tintinnabulation of the division bells pealed through the corridors. And then and there were hurrying—not to and fro—but in the direction of the chamber and the galleries, which were thronged with ladies in brilliant attire, presenting the look of a parterre of brilliant flowers. Below the chamber was a stirring and almost festive scene. While the whips were rounding up the sheep and the goats, the French members with rich, ringing voices led in the strains of Lavallee's "O Canada." When Sir Wilfrid Laurier entered the chamber and took his seat there was a thunderous salvo of applause. The first vote was on the sub-amendment of Mr. Monk, the Conservative leader in Quebec, and this was defeated by a majority of 157;—18 for and 175 against. At this stage Mr. C. L. Owen, of Campbellford, started "God Save the King," in which the whole House joined in a tremendous burst of loyal fervour, and at its conclusion Hon. J. R. Stratton called for three cheers for the King, which vibrated the vitreous roof of the chamber, and, on the call of Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, Alberta, who will be in Peterborough on Saturday, three rousing cheers were given for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, followed by cheers for Mr. Borden by the majority of the Opposition. Then followed the division on Mr. Borden's amendment, which was negatived by a vote of 129 to 74, a majority of 55. It was expected that the division on the main motive would carry the Naval Bill to the committee stage, but Mr. Northrup of East Hastings, rose to move the six months' hoist, and, as the hour was late, suggested an adjournment. Sir Wilfrid remarking that he did not wish to limit discussion, moved the adjournment of the debate, and again everybody sung "God Save the King."

The outstanding feature developed by the divisions emphasized the solidity of the Government supporters as to its naval policy, and further emphasized the divided counsels of the Conservative party. We had the sub-amendment of one leader of the Conservatives, Mr. Monk, and the amendment, supported by eighteen members of the Opposition, of which seven were from the Province of Quebec. We had seven Conservatives voting with the Government, as against the amendment of their leader, Mr. Borden, while there was not a break in the Government ranks, though Hon. Mr. Emmerson, in his speech that afternoon, while asserting himself as strongly opposed to both Conservative policies, as reflected in the two amendments, and while supporting the principle of the Naval Bill, criticized it as coming at an inopportune time, as our whole financial strength was needed for national development. Mr. Northrup, in a speech this (Thursday) afternoon, leading up to his six months' hoist motion, rung another change on the multiplying policies of the Conservative party. He made an entirely new tack by claiming that the Naval Bill was ultra vires of the Canadian parliament.

Mr. W. F. Maclean, South York, who was not in the House on Wednesday night, made a strong speech in favour of the Government's naval policy. His crisp, logical, well-reasoned speech coming in the wake of the waning trickle of eloquence that marked the dreary close of the debate, suggested the opening lines of Richard III., "Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this sun of York." It was a speech with a motive and logical sequence in brilliant contrast with the latter hours of frayed eloquence and dog-eared quotations. It was patriotic as well as loyal. He was opposed to both amendments; was opposed to the idea of submitting the matter to the vote of the people. He believed in the responsibility of parliament, which in all British history had in practice been responsible for national defence. Sea power was the foundation of national greatness, and Canada's duty was to make a beginning with a navy to be built in Canada and manned by Canadian sailors, to be trained in the British navy," and, thank God, we have the best material in the world for sailors." That was our duty instead of fine-spun constitutional speculations. Nothing would appeal to German caution so much as a clear-cut determination on the part of Canada and the other Dominions to join in naval construction in the interests of self and imperial defence. From the front row of the Opposition benches came one of the most logical speeches that has been delivered in support of the Liberal Government's naval bill. This is striking tribute to the compelling soundness of the Government's policy as expressed in its bill and sits in strong contrast to the Opposition policy, the thing of shreds and patches, the diversified and discordant expedients engendered in the following of Mr. Borden by his unsteady and vacillating grasp of the tiller.

Man's Misery Promptly Banished

(From "Man's Maladies.")

A certain sort of misery which causes a man to become abject in manner, timid, suspicious and jealous without real warrant, can be readily banished by a systematic nerve treatment which can be followed out in the privacy of home and restoration of a normal or natural condition speedily ensues.

A man feels and knows when he is not getting out of life all that it holds, and this knowledge makes the misery which occurs with such symptoms as unsteady gait, weak voice, downcast eyes, cold extremities, loss of flesh, loss of self control, lack of self esteem, pains in the back and back part of head, shooting pains, heart palpitation, nervousness, sleeplessness, hollow eyes, sunken cheeks, colourless lips, dizziness and trembling.

The requirement to overcome these dreadful symptoms is a restoration of power and strength to the nervous system, which has been poorly nourished or abused by thoughtless eating, drinking or social duties, perhaps superinduced by overwork. Keen, strong, sensitive nerves, which carry every sensation or emotion to the brain centres of consciousness can and should be the possession of every living individual. Let this prescription be used and the results will surely reward the efforts. Obtain of any good druggist, three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound, in a six ounce bottle. Add one ounce of compound fluid balmwort, shake and let stand for two hours, then add one ounce of tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom), and one ounce of compound essence cardiol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring. The three last named ingredients are specially prepared and powerful concentrations, much used in various prescriptions, but contain no opiates to harm the system.

EXCITING SCENES FEATURE DEBATE ON NAVAL BILL

Members Sing "God Save the King" and Give Three Cheers for His Majesty During the Early Morning Session---One of the Most Stirring Incidents in the History of the House.

Ottawa, March 10.—The famous navy debate almost came to a famous end last night, but it did not. Nevertheless, the scene was one of the most turbulent and exciting in the history of divisions.

With the galleries full of the women who had just come down stairs from the dance on the third floor, after the singing of God Save the King, Rule Britannia, and the Maple Leaf Forever, the long-suffering navy bill, on which seventy-seven men have talked for seventy-seven days, was expected to pass its second reading. Amid all these fine circumstances it bid fair to die decently, and be translated into the immortality either of a good deed or a bad one in the history of this Government.

Monk Got 18 Votes.

But the scene was despoiled. They voted on the amendment to Mr. Borden's amendment as proposed by Mr. F. D. Monk, of Jacques-Cartier. That was a proposition by which the Government would do nothing without referring the whole matter to plebiscite. That was defeated by a vote of eighteen to one hundred and seventy-five.

Then Mr. R. L. Borden's amendment, by which it was proposed to give England the cash for $20,000,000 worth of Dreadnoughts, was voted upon and defeated by 129 to 74.

The galleries waited breathlessly to see what the final step would be, how the votes would go when the actual Government bill under amendment was proposed. But at the last moment Mr. W. B. Northrup, Conservative, of East Hastings, rose, and stated, that he had an amendment to offer to the bill, but that he did not wish to keep the House late to hear the discussion.

The Six Months' Hoist.

"If you can do your amendment justice to-night," said Sir Wilfrid, "we would be willing to remain, but if you think the discussion would have to be carried on until to-morrow we had better adjourn until to-morrow."

"Very well," replied the member, The House was adjourned, and to-morrow will hear Mr. Northrup propose that the bill be given a six months' hoist. In Parliamentary language a six months' means to kill the bill.

That then is the last resource of Conservatives. Monk could not have the bill rejected in favour of a referendum. Borden's scheme for a cash contribution is rejected, of course. The House will now have a further excuse for more oratorical iniquities talking over this new amendment, the issue of which is not for a moment in doubt.

The Bill Will Carry.

The bill will carry. Nobody in the House imagines anything else unless the Tories were to try some blockade practice, and that is not to be expected. Meanwhile, however, the discussion will go on. That done, the bill will receive its second reading, and go into the committee of the whole to be discussed clause by clause. In this latter process, however, there are involved very few opportunities for speeches and little chance of defeat for the bill.

The debate should have been ended to-night. Everybody expected so. Upstairs on the third floor of the building the Cabinet Ministers' wives were giving the regular reception. It was the last of the season, and all the pretty ladies in all their pretty gowns were up there with the most of the members. Occasional fragments of the dance music flitted down to the ground floor where the House was sitting patiently listening to the ebullitions of the last of the speakers.

Whips Raided the Dance.

The ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. H. R. Emmerson, had made a speech in the afternoon. He was followed by Mr. Lancaster and Mr Currie, of Simcoe, and so on until supper time. After supper very few of the members appeared in the House. They were up on the third floor in their dress clothes. As they danced the few faithful ones, and the speaker, sat it out in the House proper out of decency towards the expiring debate. The press gallery was empty. In the press rooms bridge games were in progress. No person cared anything more about the House until the vote was called.

Just at five minutes before midnight the division bells all through the corridors set up their tinkling. The whips of both parties, who had been missing all evening, suddenly appeared, hurrying from place to place gathering their men for the vote. They raided the dance. Partners were taken from partners. Groups were broken up as though it was the last reaper himself. Down in the House the sleepy ones cheered as each whip pushed in his flock, and the deserted women poured into the galleries.

Sang National Anthem.

Suddenly someone in the Conservative benches raised an exuberant voice in "God Save the King."

The Liberals, quick to remember the capital that was made out of the singing of that song on Feb. 6th, when the second reading of the bill was moved and the debate proper was precipitated, seizing the air and in magnificent volume, every throat straining, they outsang the Opposition. The galleries stood and joined in. The pale evening dresses, offset by the dress suits of the male birds in the floor of the House, filled the sombre chamber with new enthusiasm. The division bells outside were clamouring.

Stratton's Three Cheers.

The whips were still hurrying their men into the chamber when J. R. Stratton, of Peterborough, leaped to his feet at the conclusion of the singing.

"Three cheers for the King," he yelled.

The whole House echoed, and again there was a rustle of silk in the gallery as the onlookers resumed their seats.

"Three cheers for Sir Wilfrid Laurier," called Dr. Michael Clarke, of Red Deer, from the Liberal annex on the Conservative side of the House.

The Liberals responded uproariously.

The Leaders Acclaimed.

"Three cheers for R. L. Borden," demanded an unknown voice in the Conservative ranks, and for a third time cheers.

The vote was taken. Monk's amendment to the amendment was lost by 175 to 18. All the Conservative French members voted for it. Verville, the Labour-Liberal member, voted with them. Chisholm and Lewis, who proposed alternatives in the place of either Mr. Borden's or the Government's schemes, voted the same way.

The galleries waited then to hear the canvass of the amendment proper. But Thoburn, of Lanark, laboriously got to his feet and claimed the floor. At first the House made its displeasure known by being noisy, but it forebore and listened in patient agony while the member went through a ten-minute speech.

"Vanity," whispered some members, noting the crowded galleries.

Rule Britannia Next.

The members melted away after that, but in a moment the whips were out after them again. This time the waiting House sang "Rule Britannia." That done there was a pause, during which somebody tried to start "Yip I Addy," but it died young. Sam. Sharpe threw a paper wad at one man and hit another. In half a minute half the House was throwing paper wads.

A voice started the "Maple Leaf Forever," and the House sang two verses, relapsing into silence and cries of "vote," "vote."

While still the whips were bringing in the men for the second division, Dubeau (Liberal) raised a clear tenor voice and sang a solo "O Canada. Mon Pays, Mes Amours," in French, and finally the vote was taken.

Six Voted With Government.

Of course the amendment was defeated. But the odd part of it was to see Monk and six others voting with the Government against Dr. Borden's amendment. The six others were men who had voted for Monk's resolution. The sixth was Clare, of South Wellington. The Clerk of the House made a grave bow to the throne and read out the result of the poll, 129 nays and 72 yeas.

"I declare the amendment lost," announced Speaker Marcil.

Dr. Clark's Solo.

Northrup then rose to propose the six months' hoist, but Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, was evidently bent on keeping the floor from him. He started "God Save the King," but the Liberals were getting sleepy, for nobody joined in. There stood the Western doctor singing for all his voice was worth.

"Sit down!" "Sit down!" bawled the Conservatives, and, having the advantage of sitting on the same side of the House as he, they rained papers and all sorts of light missles at him. Dr. Clark was about to sit down when somebody called out, "You can't sing to-night, doctor," whereupon the doctor rose to his feet again, took a long breath, and waded throug the National Anthem once more amid mingled cheers and cries of "order."

Mr. Northrup finally stated that he would move the adjournment of the debate so that he may present his amendment to-morrow. Sir Wilfrid agreed and the debate goes over until this afternoon. The discussion will not be long. The vote on the bill will be taken at the conclusion of the division on this new amendment.

Bonspiel Closed With Hard Fought Contests

Waddell's Rink Won Primary Series and Consolation Went to Jas. Connal's Rink---Games Brought Out Skilful Curling and Concluding Victories Were Well Earned---The Prize Winners.

PRIMARY WINNERS.

W. Adamson, lead.
Harry Foote, second.
Geo. H. Giroux, vice-skip.
R. M. Waddell, skip.

CONSOLATION WINNERS.

Rollie Denne, lead.
W. Hall, second.
J. E. A. Fitzgerald, vice-skip.
Jas. Connal, skip.

The above is the honour roll established at the rink yesterday, as a result of the bonspiel finals, primary and consolation and both rinks should feel satisfied that their victories were well earned for in each case it was a hard fight all the way up to the play off, and at the last ditch a stubborn contest contributed an exciting finale to what has proved a most interesting string of games. In either case the result was in doubt right up to the last end, and even then a stone might have made a difference. The hands of the clock were pointing to fifteen minutes to one this morning, when the consolation final was decided, and Jim Connal's rink won out from Archie Moore's by the narrow margin of 9 to 7. They were two leg-weary quartettes, both of them, as they plied their well-worn brooms in the last few ends. Four games during the day was about enough for any lover of the game and the effects were beginning to be manifest in that last clash. Rollie Denne, S. T. Medd, E. L. Bowes and several of the other members of the consolation rinks began to look winded, but they always were strong in a pinch with the broom. When it came to actual curling the last game was marked by many skilful shots, with both Skip Moore and Skip Connal doing grand work with splendid assistance from their mates. But to get to the primary finals.

Good Curling.

Jack McIntyre and Rollie Waddell were the opposing skips in the primary finals. Each team had shown up well in their journey towards the finals and as was fully expected the play off was well worth witnessing.

Just one point to the good on the last end was the way the score board read, but as Skip Waddell said, "One's as good as a million." Thirteen shots to twelve suggests Spartan endeavours and that is exactly the character of the game from the first to the last shot. A large crowd followed the final all the way and were repaid for their interest. Keene went ahead on the first end with two up. Waddell came right back and made it a tie on the second end, went ahead by two on the third and made it five to two on the fourth. Keene came right back and slowly evened up and took a substantial lead. McIntyre was one of the most popular skips at the bonspiel and it pleased a few to see him stride ahead. But they were up against a classy rink and from Billy Adamson down to Skip Waddell they put up a brand of the roarin' game that would be hard to beat. The rinks were composed as follows:

Peterborough	Keene
W. Adamson	R. B. McIntyre.
Harry Foote	J. J. Moore
George Giroux	Dr. McWilliams
R. M. Waddell,	Jack McIntyre
Skip—13	Skip—12

Keene put up a good fight and made many friends. Skip McIntyre showed himself a good general and 'Doc' McWilliams was a strong and reliable right bower. But that Peterborough rink is a pretty good hand to draw to. Adamson played well as lead and Harry Foote, George Giroux and Rollie Waddell are as strong a trio as will be found playing together at the rink. To qualify for the finals Waddell played Marke, of Bobcaygeon, yesterday afternoon, winning out by 23 to 8. Marke was then entered in the Consolation series and pitted against Moore.

Consolation Games.

In the third round Connal defeated Rev. E. A. Pearson by 20 to 4. Lang put out Davis of Bobcaygeon by 12 to 10.

In the next round Dick Davidson killed C. N. Brown's aspirations for a place in the finals; Connal laid "Pete" Lang away on one of the shelves, and Marke of Bobcaygeon was given a pass out ticket by Moore. In the semi-finals Moore and Davidson had as merry a go as was seen throughout the entire bonspiel. The twelfth end found them tied, each with ten shots. In the rubber Moore won out by a single point, and went into the finals with Connal.

The rinks were as follows:

Third Round.

Rev. J. R. Webb	R. Denne
Rev. G. W. Henderson	W. Hall
Rev. Robt. Pogue	H. Foote
Rev. E. A. Pearson	Jas. Connal
Skip—4	Skip—20
Peterborough	Bobcaygeon
H. Martin	Boyd
H. Evans	Conway
R. Hicks	Nicholls
W. M. Lang	Davis
Skip—12	Skip—10

Fourth Round

L. Hall	G. Hill
W. Taylor	G. Maitland
W. J. Thompson	T. Brightman
D. Davidson	C. N. Brown
Skip—19	Skip—6
R. Denne	H. Martin
W. Hall	H. Evans
Jack Fitzgerald	R. Hicks
Jas. Connal	W. M. Lang
Skip—16	Skip—6
Peterborough	Bobcaygeon
Meredith	Taylor
E. L. Bowes	Lithgow
S. T. Medd	Bredin
A. Moore	Marke
Skip—16	Skip—5

In the semi-finals Davidson's rink was defeated by Moore, by the score of 11-10. The concluding game, Moore vs. Connal has already been referred to.

Such werethe results. There have undoubtedly been what may be rightly called more successful bonspiels than that which has just been closed. They had more rinks entered thanks to favourable weather conditions. The weather man nearly killed this year's spiel entirely and it would not have been held at all but that Angus McIntosh was waiting for a turn to colder and took every advantage of the change. The bonspiel was therefore arranged on exceedingly short notice. However, the curlers should be gratified that they were enabled to share the fun of the past two days. The ice was good, the games were well played and members of rinks that went out early in the fight remained last night for the final end in the consolation series.

The Prizes.

The winners of the final games carry away with them remembrances of the bonspiel that are of real value. Every member of R. Waddell's rink receives a handsome cabinet of Rogers 1837 knives and forks with pearl handles. Jack McIntyre's Keene rink won four cut glass bowls. The prize in the consolation series won by Connal's rink were four valuable travelling bags; Archie Moore's rink received brass kettles with spirit lamp heater; and Dick Davidson's rink won third prize, a Gillette safety razor to each man. After some discussion among the members who were present after last games it was decided that the winners present should carry home their spoils as it was suggested that some one might break into the rink and take possession of them. A meeting of the curlers will be held in a short time to wind up the season.

A LITTLE SPILLED WATER LOST THE CHAMPIONSHIP

In these days of discussion and dope on heavyweight fighters, including countless comparisons and reviews of former fights, one of the most historic battles is that one in which Jeffries knocked out Corbett in the 23-round of their scheduled 25-round fight at Coney Island in 1900. In connection with this arguments and contentions pro and con have been advanced whether Jeffries' win was a lucky one or whether he deliberately but surely forced his clever opponent into a corner and despatched him at his leisure as part of a pre-arranged line of attack. Some writers who saw the fight have gone so far as to say that Jeffries outboxed Gentleman Jim on that occasion.

Jimmy McGraw, a brother of the famous John J., of New York Giants, is an enthusistic fight fan, and he declares that if the fight had gone the limit Corbett would have won on a decision.

"A half glass of water carelessly spilled in a corner of the ring gave the fight to Jeffries," said Jimmy yesterday. "I did not see it, but my brother and Wilbur Robinson, the old Baltimore catcher, were both in Corbett's corner, and I have often heard them tell of it. The moving pictures of the fight showed them quite plainly with Corbett's seconds, for Gentleman Jim was always a great favourite with the Baltimore team.

"Now, according to Robby, Corbett, when the twenty-third round started, was as fresh as a daisy and danced in with a smile on his face, good, apparently, for twenty-three more rounds. While his seconds were attending him in the corner a little water—not much—was spilled on the canvas. In the course of the round, according to both Robby and my brother, Corbett found himself in his own corner, with Jeffries coming in. The crowd saw where the boilermaker had a chance to end it, and they yelled to Jeff to go in and get him. Corbett only smiled, and, just as Jeff came lumbering at him, he attempted to dart to one side. He had plenty of room to get out, but just as he attempted to glide out of the way and back to the safety of the centre of the ring, his foot was resting on the wet spot. Instead of his bounding to one side and away, his toes slipped and before he could regain his footing Mr. Jeffries had ended it all.

"Both John and Robby to this day fervently swear that if it had not been for that little water on the floor Corbett would have got the decision. They ought to know, as they were but a few feet from Corbett's foot when it happened.

I have read a lot about that fight dug up from newspaper files of late, but I have never heard of the water episode being published."

SOME SIDE-LIGHTS ON THE EARLY DAYS OF FIGHTING GAME

The fighting game was immortalized by Homer and mythology had its champions. Pollux and his twin, Castor, the result of the intrigue between Jupiter and Leda, mother of Helen of Troy, fought their way to a seat on Mt. Olympus. The signs of Gemini in the zodiac represent the twin scrappers. Possibly they were the original of "Mike" and "Jack" (Twin) of Boston.

Amycus, king of the Bebryces, son of Neptune and Melia, was a "tough nut." He met comers until the Argonauts reached his port and his challenge was accepted by Pollux. Amycus was a crook, for he tried to cross Pollux, who killed him.

Eryx was another demigod pug. He was the son of Venus and Butes, a scrapping descendant of Amycus, and was noted as a shifty boy with a quick kick. Eryx also agreed to put away all comers in a hurry, which is proof that "Yours truly, John L. Sullivan," was not so original after all. Unfortunately for posterity, Eryx met up with a young buck called Hercules, who never inserted a weighing in paragraph in the articles of agreement, or drew the colour line. Hercules won with a punch. Eryx was buried with harps playing.

Having introduced two pugs from heaven (by Jupiter) and one from the sea (by Neptune), the next champion is a cross between earth and sea. He was a son of Terra, by Neptune, and whenever he kissed his mother he renewed his strength. Hercules put him out by grabbing him around the waist and holding him off the ground until he cashed in. This proves wrestling had not been abolished in Olympian bouts, so perhaps the London prize ring rules were copied from them.

Of the Homeric boxers, Epeus and Eurualus were champs. Epeus was king of Epei and the son of Endymion. His father was the affinity of the goddess of chastity, Diana, so his pedigree shows class. Epeus and Eurualus fought at the funeral of Patroclus and the former won. Homer refers to the battle:

"Officious with the cincture girds him round,
And to his wrists the gloves of death are bound."

So we may take it that the fight game on the Olympus meant dirge music for the vanquished. This fight the first reported, carries the game back to 1184 B. C., in the last year of the siege of Troy.

The game now shifts to Sicily and Italy, with Virgil as chronicler. Aeneas, with Dares, Cloanthus, Gyges, Gyas, Entellus, Eryx and Anteus, opened a school of boxers.

Entellus was sparring partner for Eryx, and defeated Dares at the funeral games of Anchises, father of Eneas, in Sicily. Entellus had quit the game, but came back when:

"Acestes, fired with just disdain to see
A plain usurper with a victory,
Reproached Entellus thus, who sat beside
Once, but in vain, a champion of renown
So tamely can you bear the ravished crown,
The prize in triumph borne before your sight.'"

I imagine Acestes must have been the Jim Coffroth of his day, for in such manner, although with different words, the owner of the open-air arena sicked Jeffries on to Johnson, when the latter had cleaned up the field of eligibles.

The point, however, is that Entellus came back and chased Dares off the lot.

Aeneas was a mixer as long as he lived. He met Dioned in the Trojan war, and even tried out Achilles. Later he fought in Sicily, Africa and Italy.

When boxing originated, men met without protection against the cestus.

The man with the punch was it. Later a headpiece, designed to protect the temporal bones and arteries was worn. It resembled somewhat the headguard of the broadswordsman.

There was no boxing in the middle ages. The lower orders fought with quarterstaff and sandbag, and the upper classes with mace, broadsword and lance.

St. Bernard, far-sighted, saw the remedy for the abuse of deadly weapons, and established a boxing school as a safety valve for the pugnacious Italiansin 1100. The pugilists were sung by the poets and recorded in manuscript.

Roman and Greek considered boxing necessary to the young man's education as a means of strengthening the body, doing away with fear, and infusing manly courage.

Punishment, rather than self-defence was the object of the ancients, and the man with the kick stood first with the people. It was a sort of "Gentlemen of the guards, fire first," proposition with the people.

Note.—In the next article Tip Wright will tell about the birth of modern boxers and introduce the champions of England.

NO. 8 STILL WIN

Infantrymen Defeated the 24th Field Battery Last Night.

Company No. 8 and the 24th Field Battery clashed in the Indoor Baseball League at the armouries last night, and the result was an 8 to 6 victory for the Infantrymen, after about as interesting a game as has been seen in the League so far. The fielding on both sides was fast and accurate, but the hitting of the winners proved too much for the gunners. The umpires, Messrs. Kenner on the bases and Staunton at the plate, gave every satisfaction.

The teams were as follows:

No. 8 Company—Poole, 3b; Clarke, 2b; Laing, p.; Meyers, ss., O'Brien, lb.; Gibbs, r.f., MacPherson, c.; Belleghem, l.f.

24th Field Battery—Guerin, c.; Mahoney, 1b.; Dunford, l.f.; Fitzpatrick, 3b.; Pilling, r.f.; Gilbert, p.; Biggs s.s., p.; Frith, 2b; F. Guerin, s.s.

The caretaker will be at the Street Railway Rink every evening this week between 8 and 9 o'clock, when people may get toboggans belonging to them. The owners of all toboggans, left at the rink during the Summer, will be charged 50c storage. 3d-ttf

Y. M. C. A. BASEBALL.

Last night a number of Y. M. C. A. baseball enthusiasts met and informally discussed matters in this connection for the coming season. It was decided to hold another meeting on Monday next at 8 o'clock, when organization will be taken up.

Baseball News For The "Fans"

ST. PAUL WANTS GURNEY.

St. Paul has sent in a notice of claim on Pitcher Stewart A. Gurney, the young Detroiter signed by Toronto. "We've got the bulge on them, however," said President McCaffery. "His signed contract is in our hands, and as he had a perfect right to make one, that looks like the end of the case."

"Everything running right," was his final word."

BUFFALO GETS SPEER.

Buffalo now has nine pitchers on the 1910 staff. That should go a long way toward landing the silk. The last man to be secured is George Speer, a very promising left-hand twister, last season with Detroit, of the American League, and originally with Wichita, of the Western League, one of the Class A organization. Although Speer did not do much playing with Detroit, he was highly recommended by Manager Hughey Jennings. Speer twirled a half dozen full games for Detroit in 1909, winning four and losing two. This shows that the young man has some class, and will undoubtedly be a fixture on the Buffalo Club.

FIRST BASE PROPOSITION.

Manager Billy Smith, of the Bisons, is having a rather hard time in getting a man to cover first base. So far this season he has signed two men, and in each case something has cropped up which put him in bad. He first signed up Jimmy Robertson, who played in the Southern League last season. All winter Jimmy was ill and is now far from being in physical condition. When Smith heard of his condition he signed a first sacker of the name of Johnson. The latter did not like the terms offered to him, and, furthermore, declared that he would not play in Buffalo. The Bison manager has now landed Eddie Sabrie, who played with Mobille and Nashville. In 131 games he had a fielding average of .989, while his batting average was .190. The Bisons have been ordered to report at Macon, Ga., on March 20, and will return to Buffalo to play an exhibition game with the Saint Bonaventure team on April 16.

P. T. POWERS' FATHER ILL.

David Powers, father of Patrick T. Powers, president of the Eastern Baseball League, is seriously ill at his residence in South Trenton, where he has been an invalid for two years. He is 88 years old.

SAVIDGE WITH HUSTLERS.

Ralph Savidge, who last season pitched for Montreal, and was sold to Detroit at the close of the season, has been purchased from Detroit by the Rochester Exhibition Company. The deal has been hanging fire for several days, pending Detroit's securing the necessary major league waivers to return Savidge to a minor league. Manager Ganzel said that he has been in communication with Savidge recently, and he is satisfied to come to Rochester.

PITCHER BILLS SIGNS CONTRACT

Manager W. J. Clymer, of the Wilkesbarre team, of the New York State League, has received the contract of Joseph Bills, who is especially pleased by the fact that instead of using him as a pitcher exclusively, Clymer will play him in right field, owing to his great hitting ability. A contract has also been received from Pitcher John J. McClothkey, who is now at Cripple Creek, and who was bought from the Baltimore team with Bills.

SMITH'S FRIENDS MAKE PRESENTATION.

When Manager Billy Smith of the Bisons, leaves Atlanta for Buffalo to start his first season in the Eastern League, he will take with him a dollar bill that has been given the most unique treatment. A number of friends of Billy met a few evenings ago, and as they were all dyed-in-the-wool friends of the former Atlanta manager and also the most ardent of fans, their conversation soon turned to base ball. Then one of them proposed that they give him something unique to take back East. All sorts of things were discussed and none approved until one of the crowd suggested that every man present write his name across the face of a crisp dollar bill. The man who made the proposition furnished the money, and all hands were soon busy with the job of writing. Before the work had been finished the bill was covered with signatures.

Leary, lot 3, con. 12, Douro, north of the golf grounds on Thursday, March 17th, with Mr. John Haggart as auctioneer. FELL ON ROCKS

LETTER FROM QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

Special to The Examiner.

Queen's University, Mar. 11.—The air of high seriousness permeating throug and around the College halls rendered most noticeable by the approach of the April exams. suffered a serious inroad this morning when the news flew around that Queen's had put it all over McGill last night at Ottawa. 8 to 2 tells the tale. Queen's started to bombard the McGill nets the first half and never for a moment let up till the white flag was lifted for the seventh time behind McGill's goal tender. Oh, no reflections on the net guardian by any means. The only trouble was that McGill was completely smothered and did not wake up to the fact, till the end of the first half saw the tally, Queen's 7, McGill 0. The second half indicated closer play so far as the score shows, for Queen's scored only one goal more while McGill shot in their only two in the latter half.

What accounts for the victory? Well, every Queen's man was right on the job from the start, and every player showed real championship quality. We've got the Intercollegiate cup safe now; the Allan cup next, to retain that Queen's will likely have to play the Cliffsides and probably St. Michaels. Here's to the Amateur Hockey Championship of the world for Queen's, a second season.

Queen's graduates and students are pleased to learn that the American Medical Association has, after a thorough inspection, placed Queen's in Class A of its list of medical schools of the continent, along with McGill, Toronto and Manitoba medical colleges. The other medical schools in Canada were placed in class B and C. In the United States, 68 were classed A, 37 were classed B, and 34 were classed C. This report shows that our medical department stands equal with the best on the continent, and maintains Queen's enviable reputation for all round efficiency.

The students are pleased to learn that Prof. Dupuis, our noted Professor of Mathematics is somewhat improving from his late illness.

Sunday services in Convocation Hall are now over for the term, till the Baccalaureate sermon on April 24th.

A commission of the Presbyterian Church is to meet in Kingston, April 26th, to consider the relations of Queen's to the church.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM BYERSVILLE

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir — In answer to A Resident of Byersville: First, before the City Council takes in the Byersville section I would advise the purchase of a few electric fans from the C. G. E. to cool the air. Then, as regards the children attending the city schools we are well represented with a good staff of school trustees, who study well the interests of both children and parents. As for the sewer and city water, the water has already arrived and we are blessed with plenty of good spring water, and our new council has promised us side walks. They may not be granolithic, but cinders are good enough.

Second—As regards the street railway extending their line through Byersville, I would refer a resident to Mr. Larmonth. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

A RESIDENT OF BYERSVILLE.

Byersville, March 10.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Charlie Grapewin paid his fourth visit to Peterborough, and in a new vehicle demonstrated that he is the same old funny Charlie that Peterborough theatregoers have been talking about ever since his appearance here some years in "Up to You, John Henry." The new play is a roaring farce entitled "Above the Limit." and in the matter of slangy talk from Mr. Grapewin certainly justifies the title. It gives the comedian a host of opportunities to get rid of some red hot United States of the latest type and anyone who has seen his work knows, he rose fully to the chances offered him. He is shown as a boxing instructor rough, untutored but with a heart of gold, who through falling in love with a girl whose station is out of even telescope range above his, resolves to make a change for the better and does so, coming back after five years' absence an educated and cultured gentleman.

The part fits Mr. Grapewin like a glove and his quaint language and actions, his irresistibly funny grin and facial expression kept last night's big audience convulsed with laughter. With his every appearance on the stage there was a roar from the audience and his work at all times was clever. He was well supported by a capable cast, the most notable of whom was the favourite Anna Chance who has been associated with Mr. Grapewin's stage career for a number of years. The farce is superbly mounted and is a very pleasant means of whiling away an evening.

Colds Affect The Kidneys

MOST PAINFUL AILMENTS FOLLOW — THEIR HEALTH AND ACTIVITY RESTORED BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

When you catch cold there is nothing better to do than to take a dose of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills at bedtime.

Colds often settle on the kidneys and are followed by the most painful and fatal results. By quickening the action of the kidneys at this time you enable them to carry off the lurking poisons and prevent serious disease.

Keep the back warm, avoid sitting with the back in a draft and regulate the kidneys by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. These rules are worth following, particularly at this season of the year.

Mr. W. Ferguson, blacksmith, Trenton, Ont., states: "In my work I am bending over a great deal, and this, together with the constant strain on all parts of the body, and the sudden change of temperature when going and from the forge, brought on kidney disease and backache. At times I would suffer so that I would have to quit work to ease my back, and felt so miserable most of the time I did not enjoy life very much.

"At last I decided that I would have to get relief in some way, and having heard of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a successful cure for backache and kidney disease, I began using them. To my surprise and pleasure they helped me at once, and a few boxes entirely removed my troubles."

Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills one pill a dose, 25c. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THEIR RIDE IN AN AUTO

A Short Story.

Obeying my not altogether courteous summons, "Come in!" which I uttered in response to a brisk knocking at my studio door late one stormy night, a young man, clad in motoring attire, entered, and came forward to where I still remained seated before my easel. His bearing was easy and graceful, and with an unmistakable air of culture and refinement he introduced himself.

My name is McGork—Langford McGork. I am motoring throug this part of the country for the first time and having heard that the scenery from here on to the city is especially fine, I am desirous of making the balance of the trip by daylight. I saw the light in your window and stopped to request shelter for the night." Then, as if detecting a reluctance on my part to have him, he added quickly: "I shall endeavour to put you to as little inconvenience as possible, Mister ——"

"Paulson—Paulson is my name." I said, "and I do not see how I can possibly—"

"Now, now, Mr. Paulson," he pleaded, "all I want is a place to tumble down on—for I am dead tired!"

"But my only servant goes home at night," I argued. "I fear I can offer you very little in the way of refreshment."

"Refreshment—that reminds me," he said cheerfully, "I have a large basket in my car, and if I remember correctly, a bottle or two. Before this fine old fireplace we two could have a cozy enough evening of it—if you say the word!" He paused and looked at me inquiringly. I nodded a dubious assent, and he hurried out, with me close on his heels, to bring in his personal effects—and the basket—regarding which latter my interest was already aroused to no slight extent.

As we were finishing the repast, he chanced to look up at the canvas upon which I had been musing when he came to my door—a young girl I had painted as The Lady in Brown. The picture now lacked a few finishing touches. I saw him give a slight start. At last he spoke, decisively. "My friend, I must have that picture!" He drew a roll of bills from his pocket and began peeling them off, one at a time. "You must sell me that picture."

"Mr. McGork," I said sententiously, "there are some things money cannot buy. I never sell a painting I have made of a personal friend."

"When did she sit for you?" he continued eagerly. "Where is she now?"

Before I could attempt to answer him the clatter of a horse's hoofs sounded without. The next moment the horseman came to a sudden stop before my door. I stepped forward to open it. As I did so, a messenger dismounted from a steed and handed me a letter, with the words: "For Mr. Paulson, he rode off into the night.

I turned back to my guest and closed the door. "You must pardon me a moment," I said, a strange dread coming over me; "this seems to be a matter requiring immediate attention." I tore open the envelope. As I read I began to clutch the paper convulsively; it was from an artist friend of mine in the city—Fernandez Bretillac. The contents were most alarming—horrifying. For a moment I sat dumbfounded, the letter still clutched in my nerveless fingers; "Mr. McGork, we are going to start at once for the city!"

He looked at me amased.

"You mean—you are going!"

"We both are going; you are going to take me—in your car!"

"My dear friend, this is a matter of life or death. We have no time to waste—I will explain as we ride along."

"Ride along?"

"Yes, to the city!" I answered in desperation. "A moment ago you said you wanted that Venus canvas. Well, take it. It is yours!"

He darted for the car as though shot out of a catapult.

"Jump in!" he shouted hoarsely. "I'll get you there or blow the car and the two of us—into kingdom come!"

For a time we sped on in silence. Then, as I gradually became accustomed to the plunging flight of the car, I lessened my hold on the seat, got out the letter from poor Bretillac and began reading the epistle to my companion—that he might better understand the urgent need of such desperate haste:

"My dear Paulson—This is the end; at the stroke of 12 I shall lock the door of my studio, close the windows and crevices—turn on the gas—and pass into oblivion. Stella and my wife are spending the night at her mother's; it is for their sake I send for you. I know you cannot reach me before the end—but I want you to be here as soon after as possible—to see to things—and break the news to them. For this accept my grateful thanks—and good-by—forever.

"FERNANDEZ."

"Bughouse!" observed McGork, laconically.

"Well, yes," I responded, "at very rare intervals he has been subject to hallucinations—but only of short duration. I am hoping that even before midnight his mad mania shall have left him entirely. He has brought this on by overwork."

"Mr. Paulson," he spoke up at length. "I have kept my curiosity and eagerness tolerably well under control—don't you think you should tell me now about the girl on the canvas? How, when, where am I to see her?"

"Oh, the girl?" I replied. "Why, you see, that is Bretillac's stepdaughter—and I cannot, for the life of me, understand what they mean by going off and leaving Fernandez——"

He did not reply, but he did something to that speed lever that caused the car to quit touching the earth entirely—and just naturally take to flying!

"Mr. McGork—are you indeed so anxious to see Miss Estella Moore?" "Anxious!" he ejaculated impetuously. "For two years I have searched everywhere for that woman without finding the slightest trace! For two whole years I have thought of her constantly by day—dreamed of her by night!"

"Humph!"

"I met her on the steamer returning from Europe. She was with her mother—part of the time. Before we were two days out I was madly infatuated with her, and she—I believe—reciprocated my affection. Then, two hours before we landed in New York we had a quarrel, a foolish lovers' quarrel. She said that it would, perhaps, be best to forget everything—and never see each other again. I agreed with her fully and have spent the last two years thinking of her and trying to find her!"

We did not reach the studio of Fernandez Bretillac by 12 o'clock. Just at the city limits we underwent a number of exasperating delays. It was nearer 12.30 before we finally reached his apartments, and with fear and dread made our way up the winding stairs to his studio.

We found the door locked—the key removed from the inside and the keyhole stopped up. We broke in the door. Reclining peacefully upon a low couch was the form of Fernandez Bretillac—he had carried out the attempt of his poor, deranged mind! He was still breathing feebly. I threw open the windows, then 'phoned for a physician and sent a cab for Estella and her mother. Before any of them arrived Bretillac had returned to consciousness.

I did not witness the meeting of McGork and Estella Moore. I was busy at the moment assisting Mrs. Bretillac in caring for her husband. When I did get a chance to glance in their direction, they were standing close together. Both looked radiantly happy, which, after all, was only natural—seeing that we had succeeded so well in saving Fernandes.

Bretillac and his wife now attempted to thank me. Estella joined in prettily with: "We have so much to thank you for."

"My friends," I remarked serenely, "don't attempt to thank me. Thank the factors that have united in making motor cars so fast."—Will Gage, in Pittsburg Sun.

DIED FROM INJURIES RECEIVED BY TREE FALLING ON HIM IN WOODS

Lovell M. Richard Passed Away at Nicholls Hospital Last Evening—Was Struck on the Head and Right Leg Was Badly Broken.

RESIDED AT BEWDLEY

As a result of injuries received by being struck by a falling tree, on Wednesday afternoon last, Lovell M. Richard of Bewdley, passed away at Nicholls' Hospital here last evening at seven o'clock. The late Mr. Richard was working in the woods on the farm of Mr. Wilbur Sackville, in company with him, chopping trees. The deceased was caught unexpectedly by a falling tree. He was struck over the right eye and his right leg was badly broken four inches above the knee. He was brought to the city and taken to the hospital, where Dr. Young of this city, attended him. Upon examination it was found that he was suffering from a compound fracture of the leg. The limb was set and it was thought that he was progressing favourably, until towards evening yesterday he grew worse and gradually sank until the end came. His death is attributed to a clot of blood which formed as a consequence of the injury to his head.

The late Mr. Richard was 40 years of age, and was a well-known and highly respected resident of Bewdley. He leaves a wife and one son, four brothers and two sisters, to mourn his loss. The brothers are Messrs. Thomas of Michigan, Jack, in the Northwest Mounted Police, Stewart, of Cobourg, and Frank, of Bewdley. The sisters are Mrs. Hawkin, of Keene, and Mrs. Benson, of Bewdley.

The remains were taken to Port Hope at noon to-day, and will be then conveyed to his home and the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to Bewdley cemetery.

An exceedingly sad feature of the occurrence is the fact that only four weeks ago a son of the deceased passed away.

SMITH RESIDENT PRESENTED WITH PURSE OF GOLD BY FRIENDS

On Monday evening the friends of Mr. J. Kinnie gathered at his residence in Smith Township and presented him with a purse of gold. Mr. T. McIvor made the presentation and Mr. George McAgue read the following address:

Dear Mr. Kinnie,—It is with feelings of regret that we are gathered here this evening to say farewell to yourself and family on the eve of your departure for the great West. Although, comparatively speaking, a stranger in our midst, yet you have endeared yourself among us by your many acts of neighbourly kindness, and sociability, and we shall miss your cheerful greeting and hearty hand-clasp. We feel, however, that our loss will be your gain, and that the same qualities that attracted us will draw many friends around you in your new home. As a further token of our friendship we ask you to accept this purse of gold and with it our best wishes for the future prosperity and happiness of yourself and family. (Signed)

S. BAILEY,
T. McIVOR.

Supper was served at nine o'clock after which a sociable evening was spent in dancing and singing.

Mr. Kinnie left last night for his new home in Carlisle, Sask.

Lightning Hit House But Fire Was Slow In Getting Under Way

It is possible that some of the villagers have not yet forgotten a certain flash of lightning, followed by a deafening crash of thunder that were genuine reminders of last Sunday night's storm. More than one person started for the cyclone cellar when that report burst over the city and seemed to find its way into the innermost rooms of the house. A Douro farmer's house was struck by a stray prong of that lightning fork and the Lakefield News refers to the fire in the following:

A disastrous fire occurred in Douro, on Sunday night last, when the residence of Mr. Edward Dunford, who resides about a mile and a half from the village, was destroyed by fire. Between eight and nine o'clock the house was struck by lightning, a bad storm being in progress at that time. The family were sitting around the table at the time and the shock extinguished the lamp, Mr. Dunford went outside but could find no trace of fire. About half an hour later the house was discovered to be on fire in the wall near where the lightning rod entered the ground. Mr. Dunford immediately removed his family to safety, and then endeavcoured to extinguish the fire, but without success as the blaze was in a very difficult place to reach. A number of neighbours soon arrived on the scene and the furniture on the first floor was removed. The house, together with the contents of the rooms upstairs was completely destroyed. The loss will be partly covered by insurance. The Grove fire brigade rendered valuable assistance in saving the barn and a quantity of wood. The alarm was sent into the village, and the local fire brigade went out with one of the hand pumps but their services were not required.

The caretaker will be at the Street Railway Rink every evening this week between 8 and 9 o'clock, when people may get toboggans belonging to them. The owners of all toboggans, left at the rink during the Summer, will be charged 50c storage. 3d-tlf

REFORMED BY LOVE

A Short Story.

Graydon, clever pickpocket, gentlemanly lifter of valuable articles, with a reputation well worth not having, saw that something was wrong, and he stepped out from the shadow of the doorway where he had been smoking a cigarette in comfort and in peace. A tall, jeering fellow had stopped a slim, frightened girl by placing himself in her path, and she had barely dodged his attempt to grasp her when Graydon touched him on the shoulder.

"Better run along," he suggested, in his gentlemanly, easy way.

The other turned with a quick snarl "Ain't I got a right to speak to a girl if I want to? Say, she's a frien' o' mine. You butt along—"

"Is he a friend of yours?" Graydon turned to the girl.

"My, no," a frightened, sweet voice answered him, in a gasp.

"Better run along," Graydon reiterated, quietly.

The other looked Graydon's slim build over with a sarcastic smile. "Betta run along!" he repeated. "What do you think I am, a puppy?"

A quick trip and a blow and the big fellow measured his length in the gutter, but came back hard, only to meet the same fate. The girl shrank into the corner, a little, slim, fearful bit of humanity, and a crowd rapidly collected. But Graydon knew his business. In a few minutes the other was worsted so that he growled that he was read to quit, and the muttered word from one of the bystanders that it was Jim Graydon he was fooling with seemed to quiet his ardour. But his curses were grim and vengeful, as he saw Graydon, taking the girl's arm, guide her through the crowd.

When farther down the street he released her arm and offered to see her to her place. After a moment of hesitation she accepted and they went on. Then, for the first time, Graydon saw closely the face of the girl whom he had rescued from the "masher," and the face interested him as none ever had in the long course of his wanderings. He had seen and knew every type of the city face, but in hers a touch of something he did not know in the many others of his acquaintance—the little tinge that the face receives from a soul that does not know the darker side of life, or, if it knows, feels that the better side is far greater than the worse.

His skilful questions brought out the information that she had recently come to the city for work from a city farther south and this was her first experience away from friends who had made it a point to look out for her.

When he said good-bye as she had mounted the steps into the tenement his quick eyes had caught a full picture of her round girlish face, the big gray eyes with their frank belief; and when the door closed he stood for a moment feeling the new sensation that he met someone whom he would want to see again.

His thoughts ran to her more than was good for him, and the result was that the next afternoon he was on hand when the greater dry goods store where she worked was closed. But he here received the first inkling that there were others who thought her as attractive as he did, for he saw a tall fellow leave the store with her, showing her many of those little attentions which bespeak a man's frame of mind. Graydon managed to get a close view of his rival, and saw a chap no different from the ordinary, but looking a little shrewd and clever with the cleverness that comes from knowledge of city life and its ways. He knew that such a knowledge used rightly would count with the little gray girl.

That she was pleased with the tall fellow's attention he could easily see, and the thought sobered him. "Jimmy, stop and think," he muttered to himself. The result of his thought showed in the little glint that flickered in his eyes. He had been afraid to own up to himself that he had come to think of her as he had of no other girl in his shifty life, and the knowledge set him to thinking, started the grim determination in him that had carried him through many tight places, and the next time he managed to secure the place at her side as she left the store, leaving a tall chap looking after them in open-mouthed astonishment that turned a second later into something of the same look that Jimmy had worn.

The next time he scored again, for the battle was on. That time the tall chap Waldon by name tried to stir up a little argument, but Graydon's cool, experienced eyes with the little mocking light in them held the other to a moment's pause, and in that pause Graydon conquered, for she went with him.

And the skill which he possessed went into the effort he made to please her, to win from her frank gray eyes a look of a little more than mere ordinary friendship and liking. And he was successful. As proof of it he asked for nothing more than her quaint and hesitating invitation to attend a dance which the girls were to give the following week.

Graydon made good use of his time in the intervening days, taking her to places of amusement where he knew he would not be watched too closely, using all the means he knew to make her doubly his own. Waldon saw what was going on, but he was playing a poor hand against the crack thief. She told him in her confiding way of the looks that Waldon had given her, but she had taken good pains that he should not get a chance to speak with her, though he had tried a number of times.

The night of the dance came. After grooming himself until the dark handsomeness was made as evident as possible, he went to her boarding place. When she came in the room ready to go with him he caught the swift, pleased glance she gave him. He, in turn, in a swift look realized that she had never looked prettier with her childish beauty than to-night. All the way to the hall she was happy, and as she went to the wardrobe he whispered: "I shall be proud of you to-night"

The dance started and went on and he was enjoying himself as he never could have believed possible after all his years of shift and change in the city life. One thing bothered him and that was a man whom he caught looking sharply at him a number of times. Then on top of that Waldon came up for a dance, and, because she had been a little unkind toward him, the little girl in gray accepted him as a partner.

Graydon waited in a corner of the room and watched them begin, she giving him a little reassuring smile. As they danced on he saw Waldon talking with her earnestly, and she was looking at him sharply, and once she seemed to be begging him to stop. The next time she came around she did not look at Graydon, and she looked pale. She soon stopped in front of him, and, looking into her wide eyes, he caught a look that told him the story. She asked to see him outside.

In the quiet of the farthest corridor she turned to him and looked at him a moment, all the turmoil in his heart evident in her eyes. "Jimmy, he told me you were a-a-a-common street thief—" she waited, watching.

He knew it was coming, but he waited without a word.

"He said you had been arrested and in jail," and the horror of the thought widened her eyes. "A common thief, a pickpocket." With a sudden rush she went to him and threw two slender, beseeching arms across his shoulders. "Jimmy, you aren't—you aren't, are you?" she begged.

He moistened his lips with his tongue. Inside the music was swinging into the coda of the dance, a gay two-step; a bit of silvery laughter rang softly down to them over the music. He looked into her eyes, straight and squarely. "That's just what I am," he said, quietly.

Her arms dropped from his shoulders and she drew away from him with a little gasp of—he knew not what.

For a moment she looked at him, then swiftly and sharply she spoke: "You and I are through; Mr. Waldon will see me home to-night, Goodbye."

She was gone.

Graydon drew his cigarette case from his pocket, and slowly lit one. Slipping on his coat, he went out into the cold street and stood for a moment on the corner. The cigarette smouldered and died. "God! but I love her!" he muttered and went on.

A few months later came the panic that put many of the great concerns out of business, and the dry goods store that furnished employment for hundreds closed its doors. Among the girls discharged was the little girl in grey. Then commenced the search for work — the hopeless search that in hard times drains the nervous energy and saps the life. She hurried to another city, and then, failing there, came back, looking a little more slight, tired and weary. Then from a friend came news of a place where there was a chance and a short time found her waiting outside the door of an office with many others. At last she entered. At the desk was a man busy writing. He turned, and her cry of astonishment, mingled with his quick cry of joy; but as he stepped toward her he stayed himself. His eyes were grave and serious; his face the face of a man who had fought a hard fight and won.

"Little girl, you didn't expect to find Jimmy Graydon here, did you? After that night I made up my mind to turn a new leaf, if I could, and I did; then to come back to you, and see if you would give me a new opportunity.

"I got my chance. With my knowledge of city life and city ways, and what I have learned from my—my—past life, I have climbed until—I am in a good position. After the failure of your firm, I tried to see you, but you had gone, and so swiftly that I could not find you." He paused and fingered the papers on his desk. Then he looked up with the straight frank look of a man whose conscience is clear. She was trembling a little bit as she listened and watched him turn from the desk to her. "I have done my best," he said, quietly and tenderly. "Won't you help me to keep on?"

He stood very close to her; across her face a hint of tears, of joy, or many things; then with a little rush, trembling a little, she hid her face on his shoulder, while his arm went around her in a firm, reassuring way.

She lifted her face to his for a moment; and then said, smiling a little mistily: "But I came for a position?"

"You have one, my little grey sweetheart—for life."

STATEMENT OF A TRAVELLER

Is Sure Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured His Diabetes.

Geo. H. Watterworth, of Rodney, Feels Like a Boy Again After Suffering From the Most Deadly of Kidney Diseases.

Rodney, Ont. March 11.—(Special.)—Mr. Geo. H Watterworth, a well-known travelling salesman, whose home is in this place, makes an unqualified statement that he was cured of Diabetes by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. Watterworth said when asked regarding his cure, "Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Diabetes. I took thirty-seven boxes in all but to-day I am restored to good health.

"I was also troubled with Rheumatism and Headache, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I was always tired and nervous. But Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me and now I feel just like I did when I was a boy."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Diabetes because it is a Kidney Disease and there is no form of Kidney disease Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. Mr. Watterworth's other ailments were caused by diseased Kidneys failing to strain impurities out of the blood, and Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them by curing the sick Kidneys.

THE CRISIS

A Short Story.

Winston Gale had the misfortune to be the husband of a neurotic wife, but, like a sensible man, he carried his cross with an exemplary and cheerful patience. His business was that of an insurance manager in one of the big city offices, and he travelled daily from his home at Rackerton, in Essex, to Liverpool street. The Gales had no children, which was a great disappointment to Gale himself, though his wife did not care for them. It was a subject never mentioned between them.

One day in September, the eleventh anniversary of their marriage, Gale returned from the city carrying with him a letter which had surprised him by the morning post at his office, and which had been exercising his thoughts all day. In the pocket of his overcoat he had a small package neatly done up by a jeweller's assistant on Ludgate Hill, and containing a small memento of the day for his wife. He looked out as the train slowed down at the long picturesque line of Rackerton Station, half hoping that Ella might be there. She had been very sweet that morning, and had come to the gate to wave him good-bye. In the old days (already the first years of Gale's married life reckoned in his mind as the old days) she had always come to meet him. She had slackened off these little wifely attentions gradually, until they had almost ceased. Gale was really a very lonely man, but his temper and disposition being sound, healthy and sunny, he had not suffered it to sour him. He set out with a long stride across the pleasant field paths to Beggar's Orchard. Chance visitors to the Gales were always charmed with the old house and surprised to find Mrs. Gale so lukewarm over her delectable possession. She was in the garden when her husband reached the further gate in the orchard, and she came forward to meet him with the languid, slow step of one who finds things a burden. She was a pretty woman, of the slender, willowy type, a little too thin for actual beauty, and the undoubted sweetness of her face was marred by the lines which discontent had written there. She smiled in the same languid fashion as she held open the gate for Gale to pass through, and when he stooped down to kiss her she scarcely responded.

He fumbled in his pocket and brought out the jeweller's packet, which she immediately opened.

"It's very pretty, Winston, but you must have forgotten that I have already a ruby pendant."

"I'm sorry; the only thing I remembered was that the ruby was your birth stone, and I congratulated myself on that. Well, never mind, you can go to Benson's and change it. I've got something else to talk to you about. How many bedrooms have we in the house?"

She looked at him in sheer surprise.

"Bedrooms! why, there are heaps, but not all furnished, of course."

"How many beds can we muster, all told?"

"Five, not counting our own."

"Oh, there's enough then. I've had a letter from my cousin, Honor Carslake. You've heard me speak of her; she married Julian Carslake, who had a small Government post at Malta. Carslake has died, and left her and her four children almost penniless. She is on her way to England. They must come here, Ella."

"Here!" Her eyes filled with a blank dismay. "They can't—a woman and her four children, and possibly a nurse! You must be dreaming! Why, the racket and the trouble of it would kill me in a week."

Gale bit his lip.

"Look here, Ella, you're just imagining things," he said, schooling his voice to its habitual gentleness. "You're not so ill as all that, you know. Bradley has told me over and over again it's occupation you want, and that there isn't an unsound organ in your body. I simply can't turn my back on Honor. We were brought up together. Good old Honor, she's the best pal ever a man had. I felt jolly sorry, I can tell you, when Carslake married her and took her away."

Something in his tone turned the milk of human kindness to gall in Ella Gale's heart.

"You should have married her yourself, then. I'm sure I wish you had—a paragon like her would have suited you much better."

Again Gale bit his lip, and for once lost his habit of self-control.

"She's got to come, Ella, so there's no use saying any more about it. I'm going down to Southampton the day after tomorrow to meet her."

Mrs. Gale said no more, neither that night nor any other time. She was quite pleasant to Gale next day, and he, manlike, was only too pleased to let things drift.

"The seven train, as usual, Ella," he said on the Friday morning as he bade her good-bye. "If it is to be earlier or later I'll wire, of course, and I've ordered the omnibus from the 'Dragon.' Travellers from abroad are bound to have a lot of luggage."

She neither denied nor affirmed, and Gale departed airily, hoping and expecting everything would be all right. There was a very honest glow at his heart at the prospect of seeing his cousin Honor again, though he had never been in the least in love with her. Perhaps, also, at the back of his mind there lurked the hope that her strong, brave, womanly companionship would be good for his wife. He did a morning's work at his office blithely, took the noon train for Southampton, and in due course arrived at Rackerton Station with the household of Honor in his train. It was certainly a formidable array; eleven trunks and bundles, and four children, with cherubic faces, prepared to fall down and worship the new uncle they had never seen. And Honor herself, making a very sweet picture in her deep mourning, her fine eyes full of a haunting pathos, which made her widowhood a very real thing. The omnibus was there, and various porters, anxious to serve the master of Beggar's Orchard, who was such a steady and good friend to them all. Honor looked round a little wistfully.

"Ella hasn't come, Winston; I hoped she would."

"She isn't strong, you know, and she'll have been busy all day getting ready for you. You'll see her soon now," answered Gale reassuringly, and yet, somehow, his spirits seemed to fall. He remembered, as the omnibus rumbled across the Common, that Ella had really said very, very little about the arrival of the visitors, and had not even mentioned what hour she would have dinner ready. It was grey dark when they stopped short at the low doorway of the old house, where already Bertha, the neat parlour maid, stood waiting to receive them. An appetizing odour of things cooking also helped to reassure Gale; but there was no sign of Ella at the door, nor in the hall beyond.

"Your mistress, Bertha?" said he quickly, and before he turned to help Honor to alight.

"Mrs. Gale went out this afternoon; she didn't say where she was going or when she would be back; took two big trunks. Me an' cook thought it rather strange. But dinner's almost ready, sir, and the rooms waiting. Oh, what darlings!" she added, darting forward to pick up Babs, the smallest of the bunch, a small, fat, podgy bundle of white wraps toddling unsteady towards the door. Gale helped the children out and spoke a hurried word to Honor.

"I'm sorry Ella is not here, Honor. Bertha says she has gone away. Try not to mind. Let us get the children and everything right in, and after dinner I will explain."

Honor made no fuss. It was not her way. She had a pleasant word for the enraptured Bertha, who was busily undoing Babs from her mummy-like wraps, and she stepped without any reluctance into the warm, pretty hall. She realized that this was not the moment for questioning or fuss, that she must wait, as Winston said, till things could be explained. But Gale found it extremely difficult. It was about nine o'clock when Honor came down, after having put the children in their beds and unpacked certain necessary things.

"Everything is lovely upstairs, Winston. What could Ella mean? She has made every preparation, has thought of us in every way. Didn't she want us to come?"

Gale set a chair for her, filled up his pipe, and in the intervals of his long draws tried to explain. It was not easy, but Honor had the divine gift of intuition.

"Of course, we can't stop, dear," she said, firmly and quietly. "It would not be right, in the circumstances. Perhaps you could find some inexpensive lodgings for us in the village."

"I'll be hanged if I will," he retorted, quite savagely. "Ella can go away, and stop away as long as she likes. This is your home in the meantime."

"It is another woman's first," she answered softly. "If I could only find out where she was I would go to her and try to reach her heart."

They talked far into the night, and parted with a shadow between them. Gale was bitterly disappointed, and through the long hours of an almost sleepless night pondered on this strange action of his wife, and hardened his heart against her. Next morning, from London, he wired to one or two addresses where he might be likely to hear some tidings of his wife, but every reply was in the negative, and surprise was generally expressed. When he returned at night there was no word of Ella at home, and Honor had spent a quiet, rather anxious day.

"I have not unpacked anything, dear," she said quietly, "and tomorrow we shall move down to the 'Dragon,' I have been there and made arrangements. It's delightfully quaint and cheap, and we'll stop there till Ella comes back and invites us to Beggar's Orchard herself."

Gale set his lips in a long, thin line, which Honor remembered of yore, and she felt sorry for the wife when she should come back.

A week passed away. It was lovely September weather, long, warm, golden days and cool, exquisite nights. The children were in the seventh heaven of delight over their new surroundings, and spent the most of their time at Beggar's Orchard, where the servants openly worshipped and waited on them. Honor herself seldom went there, and though Winston came to see her every night, she refused to discuss the strange affair with him. She saw that he was getting gradually anxious about his wife, though still hardly disposed towards her.

One afternoon, when she had walked up to Beggar's Orchard to bring the children back to tea, Bertha met her with a telegram addressed to Mrs. Carslake. Honor opened it hurriedly, not expecting an urgent message from any quarter of the globe.

"It's from Mrs. Gale, Bertha. She is ill at Southend. I must go to her at once. Can you tell me anything about the trains?"

"Most of them go to Southend, ma'am," replied Bertha, with a bewildered air; but already Mrs. Carslake had gone, leaving the children in her care, as a matter of course.

Honor arrived at Southend about half past five and drove at once to the address given in the telegram, a small, quiet hotel, chiefly frequented by ladies.

"So glad to see you, Mrs. Carslake," the proprietor said, at once relieved and impressed by Honor's dignified appearance. "Mrs. Gale is rather low, and we are greatly troubled about her; she seems to have something on her mind."

"Take me to her at once," said Honor, and braced herself for what she felt would be an ordeal. But when she saw the poor, white face, with the burning spot on either cheek, all her diffidence disappeared, and she simply knelt down by the bed and put her arms round it.

"You poor, silly child!" she said, and Ella had never been spoken to in such a tone since her mother died. "What was it all about? Was it me of the children, or what were you afraid of?"

"I thought that Winston liked you better than me," came back the feeble reply. "And I thought I couldn't bear to see it. But now I think I shall die, and I've sent for you to say that I don't mind if you do marry Winston. Only ask him to come here and forgive me first."

In spite of the ache of her heart Honor Carslake laughed loud, and the spontaneous mirth and heartiness of that sound did more to reassure Ella Gale than anything else she could have done.

"Is that all?" asked Honor, her bright, clear eyes looking fearlessly into those bent so appealingly on her face. "Then we're going to bury the hatchet. Have you had a doctor; where is he to be seen, and how soon do you think you will be able to travel home?"

"Winston won't want me there now," said Ella, jealously.

"We shan't ask him, dear. I happen to know that he is very tired of being alone with servants."

"But he has you?"

"No, he hasn't; we are at the 'Dragon,' and, between ourselves, I don't like it, so if you will kindly get up and go back with me and take us in for a week or two I shall be most grateful. In October we go for the winter to my husband's people. It is all arranged. But I do want you to see my chicks; they are always asking after their Auntie Ella."

Next day, when Winston Gale came down from town, he found a new state of affairs at Beggar's Orchard, the whole family from the 'Dragon' re-established, and Ella, a trifle trembling and ashamed, waiting for him at the gate. Like a sensible man, he took things as he found them, and it was the beginning of a new era of happiness for him and his.—British Weekly.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

date, rang the bell and ordered a copy of the same issue. When it was brought he opened it, found the place, laughed loudly and passed the sheet over to his sister.

"Oh, Shirley, Shirley! This is almost too much!" he cried, watching her as her eyes swept the article. She turned away to escape his noise and after a glance threw down the paper in disgust. The article dealt in detail with Austro-Hungarian finances and fairly bristled with figures and sage conclusions based upon them.

"Isn't that the worst!" exclaimed Shirley, smiling ruefully.

"He's certainly a romantic figure ready to your hand. Probably a bank clerk who makes European finance his recreation."

"He isn't an Englishman, at any rate. He repudiated the idea with scorn."

"Well, your Mr. Armitage didn't seem so awfully excited at meeting Singleton, but he seemed rather satisfied with your appearance, to put it mildly. I wonder if he had arranged with Singleton to pass by in that purely incidental way, just for the privilege of making your acquaintance!"

"Don't be foolish, Dick. It's unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. But if you should see Mr. Singleton again"—

"Yes—not if I see him first!" ejaculated Claiborne.

"Well, you might ask him who Mr. Armitage is. It would be amusing—and satisfying—to know."

Later in the day the old attache fell upon Claiborne in the smoking room and stopped to discuss a report that a change was impending in the American state department. Changes at Washington did not trouble Singleton, who was sure of his tenure. He said as much, and after some further talk Claiborne remarked:

"Your friend Armitage seems a good sort."

"Oh, yes: a capital talker and thoroughly well posted in affairs."

"Yes; he seemed interesting. Do you happen to know where he lives—when he's at home?"

"Lord bless you, boy, I don't know anything about Armitage!" spluttered Singleton, with the emphasis so thrown as to imply that of course in any other branch of human knowledge he would be found abundantly qualified to answer questions.

"But you introduced us to him—my sister and me. I assumed"—

"My dear Claiborne, I'm always introducing people! It's my business to introduce people. Armitage is all right He's always around everywhere. I've dined with him in Paris, and I've rarely seen a man order a better dinner."

Chapter III

DARK TIDINGS.

THE second day thereafter Shirley Claiborne went into a jeweler's on the Grand Quai to purchase a trinket that had caught her eye while she waited for Dick, who had gone off in their carriage to the postoffice to send some telegrams. It was a small shop and the time early afternoon, when few people were about. A man who had preceded her was looking at watches and seemed deeply absorbed in this occupation. She heard his inquiries as to quality and price and knew that it was Armitage's voice before she recognized his tall figure. She made her purchase quickly and was about to leave the shop when he turned toward her, and she bowed.

"Good afternoon, Miss Claiborne. These are very tempting bazaars, aren't they? If the abominable tariff laws of America did not give us pause"—

He bent above her, hat in hand, smiling. He had concluded the purchase of a watch, which the shopkeeper was now wrapping in a box.

"I have just purchased a little remembrance for my ranch foreman out in Montana, and before I can place it in his hands it must be examined and appraised and all the pleasure of the gift destroyed by the custom officers in New York. I hope you are a good smuggler, Miss Claiborne."

"I'd like to be. Women are supposed to have a knack at the business, but my father is so patriotic that he makes me declare everything."

"Patriotism will carry one far, but I object both to being taxed and to the alternative of corrupting the gentlemen who lie in wait at the receipt of customs."

"Of course the answer is that Americans should buy at home," replied Shirley. She received her change, and Armitage placed his small package in his pocket.

"My brother expected to meet me here. He ran off with our carriage," Shirley explained.

"These last errands are always trying. There are innumerable things one would like to come back for from midocean, tariff or no tariff."

"There's the wireless," said Shirley. "In time we shall be able to commit our afterthoughts to it. But lost views can hardly be managed that way. After I get home I shall think of scores of things I should like to see again that photographs don't give."

Armitage had been the subject of so much jesting between Dick and herself that it seemed strange to be talking to him. His face brightened pleasantly when he spoke. His eyes were grayer than she had mockingly described them for her brother's benefit the day before. His manner was gravely courteous, and she did not at all believe that he had followed her about.

Armitage was aware that a jeweler's shop was hardly the place for extended conversation with a young woman whom he scarcely knew, but he lingered in the joy of hearing this American girl's voice, and what she said interested him immensely. He had seen her first in Paris a few months before at an exhibition of battle paintings. He had come upon her standing quite alone before "High Tide at Gettysburg," the picture of the year, and he had noted the quick mounting of color to her cheeks as the splendid movement of the painting—its ardor and fire—took hold of her. He saw her again in Florence, and it was from there that he had deliberately followed the Claibornes.

His own plans were now quite unsettled by his interview with Von Stroebel. He fully expected Chauvenet in Geneva. The man had apparently been on cordial terms with the Claibornes, and as he had seemed to be master of his own time it was wholly possible that he would appear before the Claibornes left Geneva. It was now the second day after Von Stroebel's departure, and Armitage began to feel uneasy.

He stood with Shirley quite near the shop door. The carriage drove up, and Dick Caliborne came up to them at once and bowed to Armitage.

"There is great news. Count Ferdinand von Stroebel was murdered in his railway carriage between here and Vienna. They found him dead at Innsbruck this morning."

"Is it possible! Are you quite sure he was murdered?"

It was Armitage who asked the question. He spoke in a tone quite matter of fact and colorless, so that Shirley looked at him in surprise, but she saw that he was very grave, and then instantly some hidden feeling flashed in his eyes.

"I hope you are a good smuggler, Miss Claiborne."

"There is no doubt of it. It was an atrocious crime. The count was an old man and feeble when we saw him the other day. He wasn't fair game for an assassin," said Claiborne.

"No; he deserved a better fate," remarked Armitage.

"He was a grand old man," said Shirley as they left the shop and walked toward the carriage. "Father admired him greatly. It is terrible to think of his being murdered."

"Yes; he was a wise and useful man," observed Armitage, still grave. "He was one of the great men of his time."

His tone was not that of one who discusses casually a bit of news of the hour, and Captain Claiborne paused a moment at the carriage door, curious as to what Armitage might say further.

"And now we shall see"— began the young American.

"We shall see Johann Wilhelm die of old age within a few years at most, and then Charles Louis, his son, will be the emperor-king in his place, and if he should go hence without heirs his cousin Francis would rule in the house of his father, and Francis is corrupt and worthless and quite necessary to the plans of destiny for the divine order of kings."

John Armitage stood beside the carriage quite erect, his hat and stick and gloves in his right hand, his left thrust lightly into the side pocket of his coat.

"A queer devil," observed Claiborne as they drove away. "A solemn customer and not cheerful enough to make a good drummer. By what singular chance did he find you in that shop?"

"I found him, dearest brother, if I must make the humiliating disclosure."

"I shouldn't have believed it! I hardly thought you would carry it so far."

"And while he may be a salesman of imitation cut glass he has expensive tastes."

"Lord help us, he hasn't been buying you a watch?"

"No; he was lavishing himself on a watch for the foreman of his ranch in Montana."

"Humph! You're chaffing."

"Not in the least. He paid—I couldn't help being a witness to the transaction—he actually paid 500 francs for a watch to give to the foreman of his ranch—his ranch, mind you, in Montana, U. S. A. He spoke of it incidentally, as though he were always buying watches for cowboys. Now, where does that leave us?"

"I'm afraid it rather does for my theory. I'll look him up when I get home. Montana isn't a good hiding place any more. But it was odd the way he acted about old Stroebel's death. You don't suppose he knew him, do you?"

"It's possible. Poor Count von Stroebel! Many hearts are lighter now that he's done for."

"Yes, and there will be something doing in Austria now that he's out of the way."

Four days passed, in which they devoted themselves to their young brother. The papers were filled with accounts of Count von Stroebel's death and speculations as to its effect on the future of Austria and the peace of Europe. The Claibornes saw nothing of Armitage. Dick asked for him in the hotel and found that he had gone, but would return in a few days.

It was on the morning of the fourth day that Armitage appeared suddenly at the hotel as Dick and his sister waited for a carriage to carry them to their train. He had just returned, and they met by the narrowest margin. He walked with them to the door of the Monte Rosa.

"We are running for the King Edward and hope for a day in London before we sail. Perhaps we shall see you one of these days in America," said Claiborne, with some malice, it must be confessed, for his sister's benefit.

"That is possible. I am very fond of Washington," responded Armitage carelessly.

"Of course you will look us up," persisted Dick. "I shall be at Fort Myer for awhile, and it will always be a pleasure"—

Claiborne turned for a last word with the porter about their baggage, and Armitage stood talking to Shirley, who had already entered the carriage.

"Oh, is there any news of Count von Stroebel's assassin?" she asked, noting the newspaper that Armitage held in his hand.

"Nothing. It's a very mysterious and puzzling affair."

"It's horrible to think such a thing possible. He was a wonderful old man. But very likely they will find the murderer."

"Yes; undoubtedly."

"The secret police will scour Europe in pursuit of the assassin," she observed.

"Yes," replied Armitage gravely.

"The truth will be known before we sail, no doubt," said Shirley. "The assassin may be here in Geneva by this time."

"That is quite likely," said John Armitage, with unbroken gravity. "In fact, I rather expect him here or I should be leaving today myself."

He bowed and made way for the impatient Claiborne, who gave his hand to Armitage hastily and jumped into the carriage.

"Your imitation cut glass drummer has nearly caused us to miss our train. Thank the Lord, we've seen the last of that fellow!"

Shirley said nothing, but gazed out of the window with a wondering look in her eyes. And on the way to Liverpool she thought often of Armitage's last words. "I rather expect him here or I should be leaving today myself," he had said.

She was not sure whether, if it had not been for those words, she would have thought of him again at all. She remembered him as he stood framed in the carriage door—his gravity, his fine ease, the impression he gave of great physical strength and of resources of character and courage.

And so Shirley Claiborne left Geneva, not knowing the curious web that fate had woven for her nor how those last words spoken by Armitage at the carriage door were to link her to strange adventures at the very threshold of her American home.

HEALTHY CHILDREN

Psychine Made Her A Robust Child

It is not necessary for us to speak any words of our own, for the facts given below are strong enough to convince the most skeptical as to PSYCHINE'S power to restore health. Mr. John Sykes, of Victoria Harbor, says: "When Nellie was about 4 years of age, she had wasted away so much that she looked like a little skeleton. The doctor treated her for 2 or 3 months, but the child got worse, and the doctor said he could do nothing more. We called in another doctor who told us everything had been done and that the child could not get better. We decided to take the little thing to a Montreal doctor, who said her lungs were filled with pus and that she would have to undergo an operation if we would save her life. The next day he came down from Montreal and operated upon her, but the operation was a failure, as he was unable to get any pus from the lungs.

"We were disappointed, and fully thought little Nellie was not going to get better, but it was cruel to let her suffer so. At this time we heard what a wonderful medicine PSYCHINE was for the lungs. We had been reading some of the advertisements in the papers of people who had been cured through PSYCHINE. We thought it would suit our little girl, and so decided to give it a trial. This we did, and after Nellie had taken the first bottle we saw an improvement. Gradually the little girl began to fill out, and by the time we had used 8 or 9 bottles, she was quite well. That was two years ago, and she is as well and robust to-day as the other children are.

"We have a great deal to be thankful for. We firmly believe little Nellie would never have lived if we had not heard of PSYCHINE. We shall be pleased to answer enquiries at any time."

Chapter IV

JOHN ARMITAGE A PRISONER.

THE man whom John Armitage expected arrived at the Hotel Monte Rosa a few hours after the Claibornes' departure.

While he waited Mr. Armitage employed his time to advantage. He carefully scrutinized his wardrobe, and after a process of elimination and substitution he packed his raiment in two trunks and was ready to leave the inn at ten minutes' notice. Between trains, when not engaged in watching the incoming travelers, he smoked a pipe over various packets of papers and letters, and these he burned with considerable care. All the French and German newspaper accounts of the murder of Count von Stroebel he read carefully, and even more particularly he studied the condition of affairs in Vienna consequent upon the great statesman's death. Secret agents from Vienna and detectives from Paris had visited Geneva in their study of this astounding crime and had made much fuss and asked many questions, but Mr. John Armitage paid no heed to them. He had held the last conversation of length that any one had enjoyed with Count Ferdinand von Stroebel, but the fact of this interview was known to no one unless to one or two hotel servants, and these held a very high opinion of Mr. Armitage's character, based on his generosity in the matter of gold coin, and there could of course be no possible relationship between so shocking a tragedy and a chance acquaintance between two travelers. Mr. Armitage knew nothing that he cared to impart to detectives and a great deal that he had no intention of imparting to any one. He accumulates a remarkable assortment of time tables and advertisements of transatlantic sailings against sudden need and even engaged passage on three steamers sailing from English and French ports within the week.

He expected that the person for whom he waited would go direct to the Hotel Monte Rosa for the reason that Shirley Claiborne had been there and Armitage was not mistaken. When this person learned that the Claibornes had left he would doubt less hurry after them. This is the conclusion that was reached by Mr Armitage, who at times was singularly happy in his speculations as to the mental processes of other people Sometimes, however, he made mistakes, as will appear.

The gentleman for whom John Armitage had been waiting arrived alone and was received as a distinguished guest by the landlord.

"Caught Cold."

Had a Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes: "In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so that I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" so be sure and get the genuine when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

NA-DRU-CO

NA-DRU-CO

When you see this Trade Mark on any Medicinal or Toilet Preparation you purchase, it is an assurance to you that every ingredient entering into that preparation is of the highest quality that money can procure. What is even more important, it is an assurance that these ingredients have been compounded, according to the best formulæ known, by expert chemists of long experience, in the employ of one of the largest wholesale drug firms in the world, the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada.

As you have probably noticed, "NA-DRU-CO" is made up of the first parts of the words "National Drug Company". It is pronounced "NA-DROO-KO", with the accent on the second syllable.

Being aware of the extensive use in Canada of simple household remedies and toilet preparations, we felt certain that Canadians would welcome a line of these goods, sold under a distinctive trade mark, that they could be sure were not only of the highest standard and guaranteed purity, but were compounded by expert chemists, from formulæ that had been well tried out.

What The Laws Say

For the protection of the public the law of each Province in Canada states that only thoroughly qualified men are allowed to dispense prescriptions—these men being physicians or graduates of recognized Colleges of Pharmacy. Therefore if a doctor gives you a prescription the laws of Canada require that it be dispensed by a duly qualified druggist and not by a man ignorant of the action of drugs.

The logical conclusion is that as the laws are made by the representatives of the people, the people want protection, and should welcome the opportunity of being able to procure in any part of Canada medicinal and toilet preparations compounded by expert chemists and guaranteed by a firm of our standing.

When you see the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark you have this opportunity and the guarantee for which you are looking.

Source Of The NA-DRU-CO Formulae

The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, acquired the businesses and maintains the honorable traditions of 21 of the principal Wholesale Drug Houses in Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver.

All of these firms had long and successful careers, some of them for fifty to one hundred years, and during their existence they had accumulated a splendid lot of formulæ which all became the property of the "National". After giving these formulæ careful study and practical tests for several years we have now brought out, based on them, the NA-DRU-CO line of about 125 medicinal and toilet preparations. All the ingredients in these preparations are the best and purest that money can buy, and they are compounded by a staff of expert chemists, each of whom ranks high in his profession.

We have such implicit confidence in NA-DRU-CO Preparations that we offer them with

A Four-Fold Guarantee

The First Guarantee

is the firm behind the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, is one of the largest wholesale drug firms in the world, having a Paid-up Capital of over Five Million Dollars. We have wholesale branches in the principal distributing centres of Canada so that you can at all times satisfy yourself that there is such a firm. We are the largest buyers of drugs and do the greater part of the wholesale drug business in Canada. We employ a staff of about nine hundred people and distribute in salaries, dividends and other expenses over One Million Dollars annually. We carry a stock distributed among our Branches of about Two Million Dollars, and in addition we own real estate and buildings which are to-day worth about Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and other large assets. All this stands as a guarantee behind each package bearing the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

The Second Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is the NA-DRU-CO trademark itself.

If we put this Trade Mark on one article only and proceeded to advertise it, plain common sense would tell us that we must make that article good or we would lose out—for people will not keep on buying unreliable goods.

Multiply that necessity for quality by over one hundred and you have our position. On the quality of each NA-DRU-CO article is staked not only our investment in that article and our hope of trade in it, but our investment and our hope of trade in the whole NA-DRU-CO line.

We know that the quality of the first NA-DRU-CO preparation you buy will practically decide whether you become a regular user of NA-DRU-CO articles or not—and for that trial you may select any one of the 125 preparations. We welcome this because each article is fit to uphold the reputation of all.

The Third Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is the fact that NA-DRU-CO preparations are never, at any time or in any place, sold at cut prices.

NA-DRU-CO preparations are so much better than the preparations whose prices are cut that discerning people prefer to pay full prices for the NA-DRU-CO goods, because they have the guarantee that every NA-DRU-CO article is compounded by expert chemists from the very best ingredients.

The Fourth Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is short and very much to the point. If after trying any article bearing the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark you are not entirely satisfied, return it to the druggist from whom you bought it and he will hand back your money. He will do it willingly, too, because we guarantee to stand the loss and return to him every cent he gives back to you.

NA-DRU-CO Preparations Not "Cure-Alls"

There is no NA-DRU-CO preparation that will cure everything, and we don't ask you to believe that there is. But there is a separate NA-DRU-CO remedy for each common ailment—a remedy that will command the confidence of the public.

Consult Your Physician

NA-DRU-CO medicinal preparations are not intended to take the place of your physician's prescriptions—far from it. When you are ill you need the physician's skilful diagnosis and treatment, and it would be folly to depend on your own diagnosis and any household remedy.

But in emergencies when you cannot get the doctor quickly, and in many other cases, a reliable household remedy is a real blessing.

To put the absolute reliability of NA-DRU-CO preparations beyond doubt or question, we are prepared to furnish to your physician or your druggist, on request, a list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO preparation. Ask these men, who are men of standing in your community, and in whom you place implicit confidence, all about NA-DRU-CO remedies.

If your druggist has not the particular NA-DRU-CO preparation you ask for in stock, he can get it for you within two days from the nearest of our wholesale branches, listed below.

Miss Jean Campbell, who is attending Queen's University, spent a few days in Keene last week on a visit to her parents.

Mr. Young, Brandon, is the guest of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Jeffrey, Dinsdale.

The skaters' dance will be held in the town hall on the 17th of March. Mr. Robert Brown, the manager of the skating rink, who has charge of the arrangement for the dance, is issuing about two hundred invitations.

The Choral Class intend giving a concert in the town hall about the first week of April.

Miss Emma Taylor was the victim of a distressing accident last week. While coming down stairs she tripped and fell, cutting her face and head badly, and injuring her eye so badly that it is feared she may lose the sight. She is being treated at Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough.

Owing to last week's extremely soft weather it was impossible to hold the carnival in the skating rink on March 4th, as was intended.

Several loads of Indians passed through Keene Thursday on their way home to Alderville from a visit to their tribesmen at Chemong.

While at the northern reservation they furnished the musical part of the entertainment and supper held by the Chemong Indians.

The skating rink was again opened Tuesday, although it was feared last week that on account of the flooding of the ice that there would be no more skating this year. It is intended to keep it open till the seventeenth if at all possible.

IN VIOLATION of ORDERS

TALES OF THE CHINA SEAS No. 4

By Foxcroft Davis

IT has been said that having an admiral aboard ship is like having a mother-in-law in the house. Technically the admiral is a passenger and knows nothing of the conduct of the ship, but this sort of an admiral happens only once in a blue moon. The commander of His Majesty's gunboat Porcupine, lying off the mouth of the Kiang River and having on board Vice Admiral Harbord, C. B., felt a thrill of ecstacy when the Admiral betook himself to Number Five of the torpedo boat division for a cruise up the windings and turnings of the river.

Each of the young lieutenants commanding a torpedo boat in the division felt extremely nervous lest he should have the honor of the Vice Admiral's presence.

There were things to try the temper of an admiral with a torpedo boat division commanded by little boys, as Admiral Harbord considered these young commanders. Especially was this true when the duty consisted in ostensible torpedo boat practice, but really looking into the tributaries of the Ki-ang, and watching for outbreaks of murder, arson and disguised piracy.

The Chinese are a wary race, especially where the land and the waters meet and the cunning of the Orient is opposed to the cunning of the Occident. They know a gunboat from a torpedo boat, and will scurry away from the one and loiter impudently in the presence of the other. Besides, torpedo boats are frail craft, and, like the maneating shark, one good blow well delivered can do for them.

Perhaps Admiral Harbord would not have ventured so far up the Ki-ang except that he had a sibling of communication with the Porcupine, lying off the mouth of the river.

There was no international agreement—oh, no, not the least bit of it—but by a happy coincidence, the American gunboat Aletta, with a Consul on board, had come up the river to investigate some commercial matters, and lay about ten or twelve miles below the rendezvous of the torpedo boat division. Then, ten miles further down, the third class German cruiser Cecilia, with a scientific party on board, was botanising leisurely and within easy communication with the Porcupine.

Admiral Harbord was acutely conscious that on one point—namely, that of his two daughters—he had become the laughingstock of all the treaty ports in China. He had sworn both loud and deep that his daughters should not marry outside the naval service of Britain. Both of these girls, however, had acted in a mutinous manner, and Mary, the elder girl, had engaged herself openly to Aylwin, a junior lieutenant on the Aletta, while Clarice, who was barely eighteen, had claimed the right to marry Tourneau, the French lieutenant commanding the baby gunboat L'Hirondelle. Admiral Harbord could not in reason object to either of his prospective sons-in-law, but he hated the idea of being balked and of insubordination in his own family. Nobody could accuse him of partiality toward either of these young officers, each of whom the Admiral considered had robbed him of a daughter. And he viewed with a critic's eye all the performances of the Aletta and L'Hirondelle.

The Admiral's View.

The Admiral had a higher opinion of torpedo boats in general than of their commanders. Being a torpedo crank, he considered that nobody but himself rated torpedo boats as high as they should be. They ought to be commanded by seasoned officers, instead of which, as the Admiral thought, grinding his teeth, the Admiralty had sent him out a pack of schoolboys to do the work of men. The only one among the five young commanders who really won the Admiral's favor was Lieutenant Kenneth McKenzie, commanding Number Five, and that because McKenzie, being Scotch and wily, professed to believe that the future of nations was to be decided by torpedo boats.

It was indeed a boyish looking set which gathered around the table in the bare little cabin of Number Five on a July day, the little craft holding their own against the muddy tide of the Ki-ang that flowed down with a strong but sluggish force.

There were four of these lieutenants besides McKenzie. All were bright eyed, clean shaven boys, who thought themselves in great luck in their present duty. In addition to their surprising youthfulness, one of them, Balestier, was heir to an earldom and had ten thousand pounds a year of his own. As such Admiral Harbord viewed him with the greatest distrust. Balestier's executive officer, a chubby, pink cheeked boy, Hyde, who as Honorable, and, worse still, played the violin in an acceptable manner. There is a natural antagonism between violins and torpedoes, as everybody will admit.

Admiral Harbord, looking over his subordinates, concluded that, except Lieutenant McKenzie, none of them was qualified to take care of himself. Also, that Balestier needed the fostering care of an admiral more than any of the rest. He announced, therefore, that he would make a cruise of observation up the river in Number One in the course of a day or two. At this a pall of gloom settled upon the countenance of Balestier and Lieutenant McKenzie's spirits suddenly rose. The Admiral would not in any circumstances have called his conference in the bare little cabin of Number Five, with these youngsters, a council of war. He briefly dictated to them their business in those waters. This was, under the guise of torpedo boat evolutions, to find out things the Chinese river officials did not wish known. If anything was really wrong it could be rapidly conveyed to the Porcupine, which, having lately been overhauled at Shanghai, could do her seventeen knots easily, and mete out justice from her main and secondary batteries. Also, she had boats and men enough to punish any recalcitrants. On no account were the torpedo boats to do more than act as scouts.

"Above all things, gentlemen," said the Admiral in an awful voice, looking around the table upon his young commanders, "remember this is an expedition of observation only. If a force is needed to strike a blow it will be done by the gunboat."

This remark was received in respectful silence, but at that moment the Admiral happened to knock a marine glass off the table, and in the clatter Balestier, the heir to the earldom, whispered to Russell, the commander of Number Two:—

"Not if I can help it."

To this Russell returned an intelligent wink.

Presently the Admiral dismissed his subordinates. Balestier received the silent tribute of sympathy from his colleagues, and was so depressed by the prospect of an admiral's presence on Number One that he asked the commanders of Two, Three and Four, together with Hyde, his executive officer, to luncheon with him in Number One.

The Japanese Spy.

When the five young officers were gathered around the table in the little cabin of Number One and a good luncheon was being served the conversation was general. No names were used, but the Japanese stewards, who had spent a couple of years at the naval college at Tokio, made a note in the Japanese cipher to this effect:—

"All the lieutenants commanding much dissatisfied with the Admiral's orders. They have no taste for running down pirates and Boxers and letting the gunboats strike the blow and get the credit. When the cigars were served we were turned out of the room, but through devices heretofore explained we heard the conversation."

And this was the conversation:—

"I know this river pretty well," Balestier was saying. "The Admiral didn't ask me, and I didn't mention that only five years ago I cruised all over this ground and know a lot about it. Twenty miles up the river grows wider and becomes something like a shallow lake. At the further end, where it narrows again, is a point, and on it is a granary built on piles. Aylwin, of the Aletta, told me yesterday it was reported that this was a queer sort of a granary, chock-a-block with small arms and ammunition collected by the Boxers."

"What a find for the gunboats!" groaned Lieutenant Frederick Charles Reginald Russel, commonly known as Freddy.

"And after we have found it," gloomily remarked Langton, who commanded Number Three, "the only thing we can do is to get Tommy Hyde to play 'Rule Britannia' on his fiddle while we kneel and give thanks that the gunboat has saved the Empire."

Tommy Hyde, the cherubic, innocently remarked:—

"I don't see why we should act merely as pigs to find the truffles for the gunboat. Why can't we dig 'em up ourselves?"

"My boy," replied Balestier, in a voice of fatherly admonition, "you forget that a torpedo boat is made of Dresden china, and the paint on our sides was laid there by the brush of Raphael, or some one equally as good. To rub a little of it off means a court of inquiry, and to damage a torpedo tube is to be dismissed the ship. Torpedo boats, in the eyes of our gallant Admiral, are choice objects of bijouterie, to be handled like valuable carvings by Benvenuto Cellini. Oh, our Admiral knows the value of torpedo boats in time of peace!"

After a little more grumbling the commanders of Numbers Two, Three and Four departed, leaving Balestier and Hyde alone together in the stifling, hot little cabin. Then and there between these two young officers was hatched a conspiracy against the peace and dignity of Admiral Harbord, C. B.

That afternoon the torpedo boat division, including Number Five, with the Admiral on board, skimmed up the river and scattered into the creeks to see what was going on. Number One, with Balestier on the bridge, made straight for Granary Point. By burning more coal than the Admiralty would have approved, Number One reached the widening of the river just as the sun sank in burning splendor. The Admiral had recommended Balestier to anchor for the night, and, as the Admiral's recommendations were always approved under such circumstances, Number One stopped her panting and labored breathing and apparently went to sleep. But there were keen eyes aboard, and the Chinese craft that floated down stream or toiled up stream were counted and closely investigated as far as the murky darkness would allow.

The hot black hours of the July night soon wore away, and when the sudden glare of the dawning came Number One picked up her anchor and sped into the widened river.

The Mysterious Tower.

A new and interesting feature had been added to the landscape since Balestier had last seen it, five years before. This was a square tower, obviously a lookout tower, on the right bank of the river, half a mile below the granary on the left bank.

The air was deadly hot and a white heat-haze lay over the low lying country, where the rye and millet were ripening fast. Upon all the land lay that dreadful shadow of over-population. The mud huts were crammed with women and children and it seemed as if every stalk of grain had a watchful laborer attending it. Alongshore were moored rafts and boats for those multitudes who could not find a foothold on the land.

On the sharp point running out into the river, four miles from the opening, and suddenly narrowing it to a hundred yards, was the alleged granary, built of mud and logs on piles driven into the soft mud of the river bank.

Number One steamed fast across the open lake, the people on the banks scarcely taking time from their labors to glance at the slate colored phantom vessel flying past. Those grubbing millions of Chinese were accustomed to the sight of foreign devils on fierce ships, with wonderful apparatus for killing men, steaming about the Chinese waters. In every case it was the Chinaman who paid the price. Some of them realized that they could die but once, and liked meanwhile to rob and incidentally murder. When these touched a hair of the head of a European it cost a dozen Chinese lives. But that mattered little to anybody.

Number One slowed down close to the granary and was instantly surrounded by Chinese boats with vegetables and fowls for sale. Usually these commodities were bought recklessly by the foreign devils, but on this occasion, although trade was keen, the chaffering was prolonged. It took a leather lunged interpreter half an hour to sell a pair of ducks, the marriage portion of his daughter, and everything was correspondingly and unaccountably discussed by the purchasers in Number One.

Meanwhile, Balestier, on the bridge, was finding out things. One thing his sharp eyes noticed filled him with unholy joy. This was a chain stretched across from Granary Point to a group of stout piles on the opposite bank. The chain was under water and was not ill designed to catch a small vessel below the water line. Balestier shrewdly surmised that the chain might be worked in such a way as to let the bow of the vessel pass over it and then foul the flanges of the screw, which would be very unhealthy for the screw. This chain was a simple but effective engine of deviltry.

Having spent two hours in investigation, Number One turned her nose toward the lookout tower. The heavens burned like molten brass upon the steaming earth and blazing river. It was as hot as the stoke hole of Hades. The usual effect of such heat was depressing, but Balestier, on the bridge, where the heat scorched his feet through his thick shoes and made dark streaks across his nose and cheeks, was happy beyond words. It would go hard with him if any gunboat should clear out the nest of pirates which he felt sure existed at Granary Point.

The Great Conspiracy.

When Number One was close beside the lookout tower the launch was lowered with Balestier and Hyde. Everywhere human beings swarmed, except at the tower. There a solitary Chinese was on guard. He talked volubly to Balestier, who did not understand a single word and did not need to. He made his wish, however, easily understood by the Chinese, which was to see the inside of the tower. A heavy iron studded door, fastened with a great padlock, led to a steep staircase, ascending fifty feet from the ground. There were two landings in the staircase and before each was a padlocked door.

Balestier was so charmed with what he saw and the part the tower would play in the conspiracy hatched the day before on board Number One that he recklessly bestowed all the money in his pockets on the Chinese janitor and made him and all his family rich for life.

Then Balestier returned to Number One and steamed back down the river in the brilliant, sweltering, blazing, torrid noon. When he reached the anchorage not a single vessel except his own had returned, but a launch from the American gunboat Aletta was crawling lazily up the river. In her was Aylwin, the lieutenant who had been in temporary command of the gunboat for a few weeks the November before. In response to Balestier's hail Aylwin came aboard Number One.

Ever since Mary Harbord, the British Admiral's daughter, had smiled upon Aylwin he had developed a fond affection for the British navy, the Union Jack and everything English, and his Anglomania was the subject of pointed sarcasms in the whole international naval force then loitering about the Kiang River.

Balestier, in common with everybody else in the ships, knew this weakness of Aylwin's, and the thought brought with it a shock of delight. Aylwin was the very man for the nefarious purposes of Balestier and his fellow conspirator, Hyde.

Balestier remembered that Stubbs, the Aletta's chief quartermaster, understood the Chinese language perfectly, and was about the only man, except the Chinese, who did, as far as Balestier knew. The scheme rapidly matured in Balestier's mind, and when he and Aylwin were shut up in the steaming little cabin the plan was unfolded in tones so low that not even the listening Japanese stewards could make it out.

"It's a pretty tough proposition," said Aylwin, after the scheme was broached, "smuggling the chief quartermaster aboard Number One, but Stubbs can do most things he tries to do. There will be no trouble about his getting thirty-six hours' leave. I'll mention the matter to him."

"Do, for God's sake!" earnestly whispered Balestier.

"But suppose Admiral Harbord finds out I've had a hand in it?" asked Aylwin anxiously.

"Don't you be afraid of that. Every man in Number One will be ready to swear you never came aboard the vessel, that we did not see you to-day and that Stubbs never set foot on Number One. That ought to satisfy you. And besides, where is your professional pride, your Christian feeling? What becomes of the brotherhood of man, eh? Suppose you, for instance, were looking for Captain Kidd and his treasures and had found them and were ordered to report to a gunboat to go and catch Kidd and the treasures and I could help you to bag the whole business and refused to lend a helping hand, even so much as by telling a few lies?"

"You couldn't," promptly answered Aylwin, "and I know Mary will stand by me through thick and thin. When do you want Stubbs?"

"Just as soon as I can get him. Could you have him aboard to-night?"

"It's as easy one time as another, if it can be done at all," was Aylwin's dark response.

"So it is. Now I don't want to be inhospitable, but the sooner you go away the better."

Telling Him the Tale.

Aylwin was of the same opinion, and in a little while the launch steamed off and Number One lay at anchor, baking and blistering in the sun.

It was not until after sunset that Number One, Admiral Harbord's pet torpedo boat, reached the anchoring ground and joined the other four little vessels of the division, which were assembled by that time.

Balestier went aboard Number Five and poured into the Admiral's greedy ear the story of Number One's discoveries that day. Two important features, however, he omitted to mention. One was that he suspected the granary on Granary Point was an arsenal and the other was the chain stretched across the channel, which was likely to prove awkward to vessels attempting to pass it. But he enlarged upon the lookout tower and the benefit it would be if the Admiral would go up the river and see things himself from that point of vantage.

The Admiral promptly put his head into the noose so obligingly held open by Balestier. And when the latter artfully suggested that the mail boat would be coming up the river the next morning Admiral Harbord decided that it would be best to go up the river in the cool of the evening the next day and anchor for the night and make their observation in the morning. When the Admiral said this the commander of No. 1 could have fallen upon his neck and embraced him in rapture and gratitude. The Admiral having departed, Hyde, the chubby cheeked, was sent for in the cabin and the joyful trend of events was confided to him.

"How will we get the quartermaster on board?" asked Hyde, blinking delightedly at Balestier. "The Admiral, you know, possesses an all seeing eye. Thank the Lord, he doesn't love Number One as he loves Number Five."

"I think I can trust Stubbs to get aboard. Just keep a bright lookout."

A bright lookout was kept, and just as the hot, still night paled before the hot, bright, torrid dawning the mail boat was seen approaching. It came alongside Number Five, and then visited in turn the other torpedo boats, throwing the mail bags on board and taking other mail bags on. On Number One, however, something else besides a mail bag was left. This was Stubbs, the Aletta's quartermaster, who presently appeared in Number One's cabin. A transformation had taken place. His stubbly beard had been sacrificed, and the chief quartermaster appeared as a clean shaven person, wearing the uniform and insignia of a boatswain in the British navy.

The Japanese stewards, for all their listening, could not hear the whispered conversation between the new addition to Number One's company and her commander, but it was wholly satisfactory on both sides.

Late this afternoon as the great red sun lolled in the lap of the gold and purple west Number One started up the river. On board was Admiral Harbord, and as Number One's quarters were unusually cramped, even for a torpedo boat, the Admiral had left his aid behind, Hyde, the cherub, acting in that capacity. There was [illegible] addition to the ship's company in Stubbs, the American quartermaster. Sailormen being unusually clear sighted, Number One's crew concluded that Stubbs had not been taken aboard for nothing, and awaited developments with great confidence in their commander.

The dark and sultry night had fallen upon the land and the muddy river when Number One's anchor kissed the ground at the entrance to the widening river. Little could be seen at that hour, and Balestier assured the Admiral that very little more could be seen by daylight, except from the top of the tower. The Admiral, believing this, gave notice that he would debark and investigate things for himself the next morning at sunrise.

The Admiral Trapped.

In the morning, therefore, as the sky suddenly blazed with light, Number One slipped into the lake, and the Admiral was put ashore at the lookout tower, with Hyde in attendance. Also, there was a boatswain [illegible]ng, who, Balestier said, might be useful, as he understood the Chinese language perfectly, and could communicate with the natives and tell when they were lying. The Admiral approved of this, and also of Balestier's suggestion that while the Admiral was taking a survey from the tower Number One should steam a little nearer Granary Point, in order to let as many of the people as possible see that there was a British torpedo boat in the neighborhood.

Balestier, from the bridge, watched the Admiral and Hyde as they tramped along to the tower, with Stubbs, who perfectly looked the part of the boatswain, trudging behind them. Outside the padlocked door of the tower a group of Chinese were assembled, and Stubbs' linguistic accomplishment became highly available. A minute's harangue to the big Chinese in charge of the tower produced the keys, and under Stubbs' direction the doors were unlocked and the Admiral and Hyde climbed the rickety stairs. Once on the platform at the top, Stubbs, whose gaze was upon the slate colored torpedo boat, steaming slowly away, waved his hand three times behind the Admiral's back.

Then, before Admiral Harbord's astounded eyes, Number One suddenly dashed as fast as she could get up a twenty-five knot clip, toward the granary. As she came abreast the chain stretched across the channel it caught in her forefoot and she came to a dead stop, her screw churning up the muddy water into oceans of foam. Suddenly every boat on board Number One was in the water, and every man who could be spared was in the boats and pulling across the fifty yards of water between the vessel and the granary.

As Admiral Harbord on the tower watched the men tumbling out of the boats and making a rush toward the granary, he slapped his hand to his head. He thought his mind was going.

"Look, sir!" cried Hyde, his cherub face all alight, as he pointed to Number One's crew swarming all over the granary and driving the Chinese before them, "our men seem to be taking possession of the place."

At that Admiral Harbord found his voice, and all of it.

"Number One is acting in violation of orders," he roared. "Go down at once and signal to her to return."

Hyde ran down the steps and bolted full into the first door, which was padlocked like all the rest.

The Admiral, quite beside himself, followed Hyde down the rickety stairs. Sure enough the door was fast.

"Here, you!" he shouted to Stubbs, "go and call to those Chinese beggars that if these doors are not opened at once everything in this place shall be burned before to-morrow morning."

Stubbs, leaning over the parapet, yelled in stentorian Chinese to several Chinese loitering below watching with puzzled and narrowing eyes the performances. Among them was Ting, the keeper of the tower. This is what Stubbs said to Ting:—

"The Admiral has suddenly lost his mind, gone crazy, sheer cracked. The devil possesses him. He is fighting the door to get down to the ground that he may order the torpedo boat to destroy everything in sight, and he swears that he himself will desecrate the graves of your ancestors. Keep fast the doors of the tower until the torpedo boat returns and we may chain the Admiral up."

Ting, who had in his shoe a couple of gold sovereigns acquired from Stubbs, screamed back, with an intelligent look in his eye:—

"We will not let him out until the vessel returns. He shall not desecrate our ancestors' graves."

Meanwhile the landing party from Number One was working as one man, and a Trojan at that. Under the lead of half a dozen frightened Chinese with pistols held at their heads the bags of grain were being tossed apart and pistols and muskets were being hauled out. They were so numerous that Balestier ordered every Chinese in sight, and there were hundreds of them, to assist in the work of removing the arms and loading them upon Number One's boats.

Both Hot and Thirsty.

Then came the more difficult job of getting up four hundred boxes of fixed ammunition sunk in the soft mud around the granary. But with four hundred Chinese, incited to work by the arms and example of a hundred British seamen, the work was done in a surprisingly short time.

As Balestier, revolver in hand, watched the toiling men at work in the blistering heat, he glanced every now and then toward the tower half a mile away. Occasionally he saw Admiral Harbord's tall figure striding up and down the platform, and waving his arms like a Dutch windmill, followed by Hyde, while Stubbs kept up a steady volley of Chinese toward the listening upturned Asiatic faces below. Then, in despair, the Admiral would rush down and begin again the kicking and pounding at the door, followed by Hyde and Stubbs.

"Poor old chap," thought Balestier, wiping his face, "how hot he must be and what wouldn't he give for a whiskey and soda at this moment! However, I'm just as hot and as thirsty as he, and I won't get anything to drink any quicker."

In exactly two hours and forty minutes all the arms and ammunition in the granary had been transferred to Number One. The chain had been unfastened and was coiled up upon the torpedo boat's forward deck, balancing the arms and ammunition loaded aft, which made her so low in the water that everything was awash over the low freeboard.

As soon as her nose was turned toward the tower Stubbs shouted out to Ting some directions, which resulted in the heavy door on the ground floor being thrown back, and the tramp of the big Chinese coming up the stairs to open the other doors was heard. As his square, leathery face appeared at the last door Stubbs, following the instructions conveyed in Admiral Harbord's lurid eye, seized the Chinese and bumped his head thrice against the wooden door, yelling at the same time in English:—

"You infernal, treacherous heathen, what do you mean by locking up a British Vice Admiral in this here beastly hole and keeping him prisoner? For that's what you've done, you damned pagan. Now what do you think is going to happen to you and to all them other damned pagans? There'll be a dozen hangings for this, and your own rotten carcass will be the first one to swing."

The Chinese jabbered softly and meekly. At that very moment Stubbs, unseen by the Admiral, was pressing four gold sovereigns into Ting's receptive hand.

Admiral Harbord, dashing down stairs, made good time to the water's side, and, getting into the launch, reached Number One in less time than it takes to tell it. There was something sulphurous in his eye as he came face to face with Balestier, grimy, dirty and sweating, but smiling, at the gangway.

"May I see you for a few moments in the cabin?" said the Admiral, in his worst quarterdeck voice.

The Japanese stewards had no difficulty whatever in hearing what passed when the Admiral and Balestier were alone in Number One's little cabin. The Admiral was roaring.

"I want to know," he shouted in a voice of thunder, "the meaning of what you have been doing. For the transactions of this torpedo boat were clearly visible to me all the time. You were ordered to make a reconnoisance only, and you took it upon yourself to carry out a plan in direct, absolute and mutinous violation of your orders."

Balestier, assuming a look of innocence, answered:—

"I beg to say that there was no intentional disregard of orders on my part. As I took the vessel up the river we ran foul of a chain, stretched across the channel, which is very narrow at that point. I felt authorized in landing a party to unship the chain, and as soon as we got inside the granary we discovered the arms and ammunition. I looked toward the tower, and supposed as you made no signal of disapproval or recall that I was acting with your approval."

"I couldn't make a signal," bawled the Admiral. "I was locked up in the tower behind three doors, with padlocks as big as this table."

Balestier gave a start of surprise, which had been carefully rehearsed beforehand.

"I had not the slightest suspicion of that, sir," he said. "The boatswain speaks and understands Chinese like a native, and I saw that he was calling to them over the parapet."

"So he was. The fellow yelled Chinese by the mile, and those doors remained locked for exactly two hours and fifty-eight minutes before the boatswain could get them unlocked, damn it."

"At least, sir," said Balestier, with a look of the strictest virtue, "I hope you will do me the justice to remember that I could not know all this, and as the launch remained at anchor, and everything was being done under your eye without any sign of disapproval from you, I supposed I was acting in the spirit of your orders."

The Admiral, leaning back in his chair with folded arms, swelled with rage like a toad. He only made one further remark, and this was:—

"You will hear something more of this, sir."

Toward one o'clock in the day, as Two, Three, Four and Five lay at anchor in the fierce heat of the July day, Number One was seen limping down the river, looking more like a coal barge than Number One of a crack torpedo boat division. The sacred paint upon her sides—that is to say, what was visible of them—was scraped and dirty, her nose was buried despondently in the water and she appeared to have been taking a mud bath somewhere up the river.

She stopped long enough to transfer Admiral Harbord to Number Five, which was as spick and span as a bridegroom. The Admiral's parting orders to Balestier were:—

"Take your damned vessel down the river and transfer your damned arms and ammunition to the Porcupine and do it in your own damned way and then report to me here."

Balestier joyfully accepted these orders and Number One crawled off, the envy and admiration of her consorts. In her little cabin sat Balestier and Hyde and Stubbs.

"The only thing I mind, sir," Stubbs was saying, "is the loss of my beard. Somehow a quartermaster ought to wear a beard if he expects the men to jump when he speaks to 'em, and remember what St. Paul says:—'Servants, obey your master'. I reckon, sir, that means, 'Sailors, obey your quartermasters.'"

That night the Japanese stewards, who had unravelled the whole mystery, jotted down in Japanese cipher:—

"British admirals very easy fooled. No discipline in American ships; petty officers get leave whenever they want it and go masquerading. American and British personnel not equal to Japanese. All say Lieutenant Balestier will be reprimanded, and then promoted. This strange thing undoubtedly sometimes occurs in the British navy."

PETERBOROUGH, January 29th, 1910

W. H. HILL, Esq.,
Manager Sun Life Assurance Co., of Canada
PETERBOROUGH, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—About five years ago my late husband took out $1,000.00 insurance in The Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, on which he only paid the first three premiums. Shortly after his death, which occurred on the 6th inst., although I was under the impression that his policy had lapsed, I called at your office to inquire if anything could be done whereby we might get something out of it. You can imagine my surprise and genuine gratitude to learn that, owing to your non-forfeiture privilege, the policy was still in force at his death, and that I was entitled to the full thousand dollars, less only the two unpaid premiums and interest.

This seems to me such extraordinary and generous treatment that I wish to add my expression of most sincere thanks and appreciation to the many others your Company must receive.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — THE FAMOUS FRUIT MEDICINE

Performs Another Miraculous Cure in the City of Toronto.

Mrs. Lizzie Baxter was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism. She suffered tortures for a year in spite of the best medical treatment. Five boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured her.

4 Home Place, Toronto, Ont., December 15th, 1909.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year, and my right arm was swollen and the pain was fearful. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could hardly move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians but their medicine did me no good, and I tried numerous other remedies but received no benefit. I was simply a helpless cripple and suffered from Rheumatism all during last winter.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in the "Telegram" and decided to try this remedy. After I had taken one box, I was much better and the pain much less, and I continued the treatment with good hopes. When I had taken three boxes, I was so well that I could use my arm again and the pain was practically gone, and after I had taken five boxes, I was entirely well again—no pain—no suffering—and now I am just as well as I ever was.

The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me of my suffering.

For the sake of others who may suffer from this terrible disease, Rheumatism, I voluntarily give you permission to publish this statement."

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

It may be stated, without hesitation, that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy that will actually cure Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. "Fruit-a-tives" is made from fruit juices, and contains Salicine obtained from Oranges. Owing to its marvellous action on the bowels, kidneys and skin—"Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism. And with the stomach clean, the liver active, the bowels regular, the kidneys strong and the skin healthy, it is utterly impossible to have Rheumatism. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that acts directly on all these organs and cures them. There is no other remedy "just the same" as "Fruit-a-tives" or "just as good as Fruit-a-tives" Insist on having "Fruit-a-tives" for only by taking "Fruit-a-tives" can you cure yourself of Rheumatism. At all dealers, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa. The original of Mrs. Baxter's letter—as well as the original of all other testimonials published by "Fruit-a-tives" may be seen at the office of Fruit-a-tives Limited, 386-390 Bank St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Suicide's Favorite Days.

Curious official statistics are published in Berlin indicating the favorite seasons for committing suicide in Prussia. May, June and July are the "popular" months. Men prefer July, while women favor May. The fewest suicides take place in February. Thirty per cent of the male and 28 per cent of the female suicides occur in the springtime and the next most in the summer, autumn and winter in the order named.

Berlin registers an average of twenty suicides weekly in June. Youthful persons prefer the nighttime for suicide, while adults oftener choose the morning or afternoon. The fewest suicides occur immediately after sunset. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday are the "favorite" days. The fact that most suicides occur on Monday and Tuesday is attributed to the reaction after too joyful Sundays. Friday shows the fewest suicides, because people on the brink of despair often recover their courage in anticipation of the payment of weekly wages next day. The smallest number of suicides take place on Saturday (pay day) and Sunday, although the number of women who take their own lives on the Sabbath is relatively high. This is attributed to the fact that women who live alone feel their loneliness, especially on Sundays. —Boston Transcript.

FROM A SHADOW TO ROBUST HEALTH

Is the Change Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Made in a New Brunswick Woman.

Anaemia—bloodlessness is a trouble confined largely to women and growing girls. Its victims are pale; they lose all strength—the least exertion greatly fatigues them and they suffer continually from headaches and depressed spirits. Nothing will cure anaemia so quickly or so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—they have cured thousands of cases, not only in Canada but throughout the whole world. They do this because they make good blood. Among those cured by these Pills is Mrs. T. Chalmer Hartley, East Florenceville, N.B., who says: "At the age of sixteen I fell away to a mere shadow. I had scarcely any blood and suffered from all the distressing symptoms of anaemia. Doctors did not help me in the least ad acting on the advice of a friend I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They effected a remarkable change in my condition; indeed, I really believe they saved my life, as I have been well and strong ever since I took them. I also recommended the Pills to a neighbour's daughter who was similiarly run down, and they also completely restored her health."

Every woman and growing girl should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills occasionally. If you are ailing from any of the many troubles which afflict your sex they will cure you; if you are not ailing they will protect your health and keep you well and strong. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or direct at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Out of Court.

"Good morning," said the lawyer as the lady entered his office. "I suppose you want to know how your divorce suit is getting along?"

"No; I want to call it off," responded the visitor. "I couldn't use a divorce just now."

"But you have such a clear case!"

"No matter. Nothing doing. The man I had intended to marry failed to get his divorce and the woman my husband wants to marry has just got hers. I don't propose to be left in the air. See?"

The Unmade Christmas Gift.

It has grown to be quite a fad to present the unmade gift upon returning from a foreign country or even at Christmas time. So gracious has this been received that it is being tried more frequently even among less intimate friends.

Perhaps the first use of some strip of silk or embroidered materials as yet uncompleted—not made into a finished article—was the giving of a length of eastern fabric, rare in this country, by those returning from a distant port or who were in touch with some importer of exclusive stuffs.

Real laces next came into play, more frequently when some rare piece was obtainable, but now the habit is indulged in quite freely, and it frequently solves the difficult problem of the Christmas gift between women friends or from one who feels herself incapable of choosing for the clever woman who so readily can incorporate the unmade lace.

All sorts of short lengths of good lace are now found acceptable and need only the added touch of the colored ribbon tied about them to make them seem a really truly gift.

Soften Bathing Water.

To soften and perfume the bathing water mix together four ounces of alcohol, one-half ounce of ammonia and one dram of oil of lavender.

A few drops of this mixture will be sufficient for a bowiful of water.

FEW DOSES PUT BAD KIDNEYS IN ORDER

Lame Back, Bladder Misery and All Other Kidney Disorders Vanish.

Usually sufferers from backache, bladder trouble or out-of-order kidneys feel relieved after several doses of Pape's Diuretic.

Misery in the back, sides, or loins, sick headache, inflamed or swollen eyelids, nervousness, rheumatism, and darting pains, heart palpitations, dizziness, sleeplessness, listless, worn-out feeling, and other symptoms of inactive, sluggish kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night) smarting, discoloured water and all Bladder misery ends.

Feeling miserable and worried is needless because this unusual preparation goes at once to the out-of-order Kidneys and Bladder, distributing its cleansing, healing and vitalizing influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it. The moment you suspect any Kidney or Urinary derangement, or feel rheumatic pains, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy, at any price, made anywhere else in the world which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Only curative results can come from taking Pape's Diuretic and a few days' treatment will make any one feel fine.

Accept only Pape's Diuretic—fifty-cent treatment—from any drug store—anywhere in the world.

ROBIN HOOD FLOUR IS DIFFERENT

This is the Wonderful New Flour

that has made such a sensation throughout Western Canada.

Made of highest grade Saskatchewan wheat, in the newest, best-equipped, largest mill on the prairies.

Made with the determination to give users better flour-value, greater certainty of baking-success, fuller satisfaction with the final result, whether with biscuits, cake or bread.

Housewives throughout all the West admit that Robin Hood Flour gives all this. Therefore, Madam, it is the flour for you.

This flour cannot be described in an advertisement. We use this paper merely to give the introduction—to say:

"Let us make you acquainted with Robin Hood Flour."

It is the guaranteed flour. If you are not satisfied with it after two fair trials, ask your grocer for your money back. He will give it to you.

Add more water than usual when using Robin Hood Flour. Made of such hard, dry wheat, it absorbs more moisture—producing a larger, whiter loaf.

The difference between Robin Hood Flour and other flours you have to find out for yourself. That there is a difference every woman who now uses Robin Hood admits.

How He Paid His Fine.

Pat Kelly, the owner of the only jaunting car in the village, went on a spree and was sentenced to a fine of 20 shillings or seven days in jail. Kelly chose the latter.

Now, the prison was ten miles away, and the only possible means of getting a prisoner there was by driving. As Kelly himself had the only car in the place, there was nothing to do but to hire it. For some time the constable and his prisoner haggled over the terms.

Kelly stuck out firmly for 30 shillings, to be paid in advance, and at last the constable had to consent to the extortion. Accordingly they drove off and without any misadventures arrived at the prison. When they had alighted Kelly suddenly informed his companion that he had changed his mind, as the prison wasn't a decent looking place, and would pay the fine.

He thereupon drew out the 30 shillings he had received, counted out the 20 shillings and paid them over to the inspector. Then, jumping on his car, he drove away, leaving the constable to walk back.

A GROCERY SHOWER.

Party to Be Given to Bride of a Few Weeks.

In these strenuous times, in this active, wide awake, pleasure loving world of ours, there is always more or less entertaining for a bride to be, whether it be on an elaborate scale or a more informal plane. From the day a girl announces her engagement her social hours are filled with all manner of entertainments in her honor. There are dinners and luncheons, teas and card parties, dances and box parties and, of course, "showers" of every description—lingerie, table and bed linen, towel, picture, kitchen utensil and even a rug shower, at which the guests clubbed together in threes and fours and gave the lucky bride elect a number of handsome and expensive rugs.

But what will doubtless prove the most original and unique shower of them all is to be given in the near future for a young matron—a bride of a few weeks—who is now returning from her honeymoon journey.

The shower is to be given in her own home, a perfectly brand new house in the country, which is furnished most tastefully and artistically with the gifts of friends. There are linen presses filled with complete sets of everything a young housewife would ever need, pictures hung, rugs and furniture arranged, a sideboard filled with table linen and embroidered centerpieces and topped with shining silver and sparkling crystal, and in the kitchen is an enviable array of cooking utensils and other necessities. There are even potted plants throughout the house, from the tall palms in the hall to the scarlet geraniums in the broad kitchen window sills.

And this shower, which is for the girls and men alike and which is the subject of so much merry speculation, is to be a grocery shower. By careful planning and comparison it is assured that there will be no duplicating and nothing will be forgotten.

Invitations have been issued, and these consist of the endless variety of small tags and advertisements which any grocer has in abundance, small sacks of flour, cakes of soap, packages of breakfast food and wafers, all of cardboard, with the invitation done in surveyor's lettering on the blank side.

It has been arranged that the groceries shall be carried to the bride's home in baskets ranging in size from a large market hamper to the smallest size that can be conveniently used in the kitchen.

The dining room and kitchen are to be decorated with posters and cards advertising every kind of soap, biscuit, washing powder, cereal, flour, etc., strung on twine and festooned across the walls and ceiling. The girls are to wear white skirts and blouses, with the most fetching aprons and caps, frilled and beribboned, and the men will appear in white duck trousers and coats, with large grocers' aprons and starched round hats.

HELPS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

In buying table linen be careful to get a piece that is not full of knots, as it is very apt to wear into holes at those places.

Instead of using beer or ale in cooking Welsh rabbit try adding tomato juice in the same way. The acid cuts the cheese taste to which some people object.

Another pleasing variation for scrambled eggs is to stir in a tablespoonful of chopped mushrooms and a tablespoonful of parsley just before serving.

A thrifty young housekeeper who was much distressed to find her matting had faded treated it with an oak stain of floor varnish and was delighted with the result.

Silver which has become blackened from standing a long time in a closet should first be placed for a few minutes in boiling water in which a lump or two of washing soda have been dissolved. Later clean with a good silver polish.

The best scrambled eggs are those that are done in a chafing dish or else are so carefully watched that they are taken off the fire before they have stiffened. A few tablespoonfuls of cream added just at the last is a great improvement.

Settled.

Two ladies contended for precedence in the court of Charles V. They appealed to the monarch, who, like Solomon awarded, "Let the eldest go first." Such a dispute was never known afterward.

Sailors' Superstitions.

Men on the sailing vessels have always held that scraping or scratching the mainmast would bring a long period of good weather. Men on the huge modern steam vessels now similarly believe that scratching a smokestack with the finger nail will insure continued fair weather.

The Oyster.

In its native habitat the shell of the oyster is always a little open, and microscopic waving hairs set up currents which carry the food plants to its mouth, where they are engulfed and afterward digested.

Outrages In India.

Outrages against the representatives of law and order are becoming alarmingly prevalent in India. Shamrul Silema, a police officer, who was prominent in unearthing the Bengal bomb conspiracy, was shot dead in the High Court recently. The murderer, a young Bengali, fled to the street where he was pursued by mounted police. When overtaken, the assassin threw a bomb at the police, and when this failed to explode, drew a pistol, which, however, he did not have a chance to use, being quickly overpowered.

Catches Votes Also.

The return of the McBride Government was fully expected, the Liberals themselves freely conceding it. Mr. McBride may be all that his critics call him, a weak or dishonest friend of corporations, but he seems to catch the imagination of the province, and their choice is their own business.—Windsor Record.

Woman's World

EUSAPIA PALLADINO.

The Famous Italian Medium Who Is Doing "Stunts" in This Country.

The American people, and especially the amateur psychologists, are very much excited over the performances of Eusapia Palladino, the famous Italian spirit medium who recently arrived in New York city. She is a middle aged and unprepossessing woman of the peasant type.

Her hair is gray and decidedly white on the left side. Under that part of her hair rests the famous scar which is said to give out a cold breeze when she awakens from her trances. Her skin is lightly pitted as with an old attack of smallpox. Her large yellowish brown eyes are filmy and dead; they never seem to hold an expression. This is a description of the medium given by a person who attended one of her seances.

Palladino is a woman of no education and no polish of manner. Her family, she says, was of humble origin—in fact, many of her countrymen remember her cooking supper for her husband on the sidewalk of one of the principal streets of Naples and publicly dishing up the macaroni for both him and herself. She has now a second husband, a handsome young Italian of twenty-five, of whom she seems very proud. How did Mme. Palladino come to know that she was "gifted?" She was cleaning up her father's house one morning many years ago—she is now fifty-three—when she saw a chair moving around apparently of its own accord. Young as Eusapia Palladino then was, she knew that this was no way for a chair in a respectable household to behave, and so she began to investigate.

Now and then, an acquaintance whispered, she used this gift in her household work, especially at the spring and fall cleanings. Then she gave little exhibitions to friends, and after that professional "mediums" took her up. In 1872 Signor Damianai, an ardent spiritist, began to "develop" her, keeping her under his tutelage for ten years.

About 1888 Professor Chiaia of Naples began to write to Professor Cesare Lombroso about her. Lombroso at first refused to take any stock in her, although he became a convert before his death. In 1901 he had his first sitting with Mme. Palladino, since which time she has been a foremost figure in spirit investigations and literature.

EUSAPIA PALLADINO, THE FAMOUS ITALIAN MEDIUM.

When she was quite a young woman Mme. Palladino was waked up one night by a shade which stood near by.

"Is that my father?" she quotes herself as asking. Two knocks said "No." She asked if it was her mother, and again there came two knocks.

"Is it, then, my good guide whom I call John?" she asked, and three knocks on the side of the bed said it was truly John.

Mme. Palladino when asked if all spirits used the same code answered that all mediums do. The code, she said, is as follows: Two knocks mean "No," three knocks "Yes," five knocks "Turn off the light" and seven knocks "Call off the seance."

Dr. J. H. Hyslop says that a great many people hear knockings and that they pass them by, thinking them only the creaking of the wood under change of temperature or explaining them by assuming that some one sweeping in the next room has hit the wall with a broom handle. If people who hear knocks would but ask questions, he says, they might get in touch with another world in a most commonplace sort of way.

Mme. Palladino's greatest stunt is making a table rise unaided by some occult means a foot from the floor. Directly under the full light of a sixteen candle power electric lamp, with two men holding her feet and knees and with her hands in plain view a foot above the table, Signora Palladino recently caused it to rise again and again—three times with all the feet clear of the floor. In all of these levitations the spectators on the edge of the circle could look under the table and see her feet and knees quiet and absolutely controlled.

The price of being present at one of her seances is $250, but doubtless that will make no difference to those who can afford to be psychologists and live in New York at the same time.

What you want is an Edison Phonograph
DO not be misled. The only kind of sound-reproducing machine that is perfect is the one that Edison invented and the one that Edison makes.
It is the one with the smooth and perfect sapphire point, that doesn't require changing with each record and that doesn't scratch—two points alone that should influence your decision.
Only in the Edison do you find the music-reproducing idea at its best.
Don't take our word for it. Compare the Edison Phonograph with all other instruments side by side, on the same music, if possible, and then you will know better than we can tell you.
Edison Phonographs are sold everywhere in Canada at the same price, $16.50 to $162.50.
Standard Records, 40c. Amberol Records (twice as long), 65c. Grand Opera Records, 85c.

"THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME"

A Short Story.

Summer had come back, as it were, to hearten briefly the waifs and strays that would not give up their rioting through the departure of the birds and a certain tang in the wind warned them that it was high time that they shook off their leaves, scattered broadcast their seeds and prepared sensibly for dissolution. Such a day as it was with all the warmth of August and all the windiness of November. The leaves were down; a few blackened pods clung rustling to the locusts; a few stunted pansies nestled in the desolated flower beds. All the tangle and litter of the garden, which was so heartbreaking to see on a cheerless day, now took a sudden grace and seemed to find excuse for its being.

Since the first leaves had begun to tremble down Clothilde had shunned the garden, seeing no more of it than was needful as she passed through it from the house to the gate, beyond which the long, lonely street led into the heart of the town. But to-day it called her; she felt almost a spring-time awakening of her pulses and her courage in response; she ceased suddenly like the garden to be a thing of despair.

It had been a beautiful garden once; Clothilde could remember the time, and each year about June when the roses and lilies and bleeding hearts hid the waste underneath it seemed like an old face lit transiently with a gleam of youthful merriment to regain much of its former charm. Clothilde loved it then and sought it constantly. She spent long hours in it gathering flowers and listening to the bees. Sometimes she dreamed and sometimes she wept tears that did not hurt because they were so gentle. But when fall came and the careless wind blew away the petals from the flowers and the birds were flown and the bees no longer hummed, she withdrew into the house and tried not to see the garden any more than she had to.

The house, like the garden, had once been pleasant. But now it sagged and crumbled and drooped at every corner. There was scarcely a shutter left upon it and no paint, and the addition at the back had fallen in so badly that it would have been dangerous to go out there. But Clothilde never did, and she was the only occupant of the house. She lived in one of the large front rooms, she had a stove and little cupboard behind one screen and a cot-bed behind another. A large table and chair sat at one of the front windows; that was her workshop, where the real business of her life went on. For Clothilde was never idle. She painted little pictures and made exquisite lace which a certain shop in town was kind enough to handle for her at a large commission. Taking out the commission and the expense of materials there was very little money left for Clothilde, but such as there was kept tea in her little caddy and bitter in the jar—two luxuries without which she would not have dared face life.

Clothilde had had her youth at a time when women were sheltered things whose outlook upon life was limited by the four walls of home. Her father had owned the house and garden, and she lived there very happily with hm and her sisters, who had been trained, just as she had to play and sing a little and make a little lace, to paint a little and care for the flowers. What need was there of knowing since they were all sure to get husbands who would take care of them just as their father had always done? But the man Clothilde wanted to marry was one her father did not approve of— a poor boy who lived with his widowed mother in a little house close under the garden wall. Across that garden wall Clothilde had come to know him. There was a great time, of course, made because they loved each other, and because Clothilde had been trained to obedience she gave him up finally. Afterward his mother died and he went away, and she heard no more of him. All she had to remember him by was the pink rose bush which he had given her and which she had set out with her own hands close beside the wall where she used to meet him. Yet she believed that some day he would come back to her and claim her, and so believing she refused to marry. Her sisters married and went away and died, both of them, in their youth. Then one day the breath of life suddenly left Clothilde's father as he sat in his arm-chair. So she was left alone, with the house and garden and a few—a very few hundreds of dollars. It semed that in the last years of his life her father had made some foolish ventures and had allowed his money to drip like water through his hands.

Clothilde was alone. The proud, secluded life she had led had kept her from making friends. She had no one to turn to. She was afraid to go out of the garden, which was really all of the world she knew. So she lived on quietly, unsought, unseeking, painting her little pictures, making her frail, dainty lace, and when she was too tired to work longer of a hot day, dreaming and remembering in the old garden. The town drifted away, evolved from fashion to fashion, from interest to interest and forgot her. After thirty-two years Clothilde was just where she had been at 17, save that the style of gown she wore and the way she did her hair was different. She had been a fragilely sweet young girl and she was an etherealy sweet woman. Her halo of brigh hair had dimmed; lines had come; color had gone; the spirit of her youth had vanished as if an illuminating light had been blown out within her.

Yet, in spite of her isolation, she was not a bitterly unhappy woman. She lived in her dreams and in her remembrances of the past which were clearer to her than anything that had happened the week before. In any circumstance of life she could not have been a brillant woman—merely a very gentle one, who would have made an exquisite wife and a delightful mother. When summer came she warmed herself in the sun, and tended the flowers as well as she could with no conveniences for doing so, and when winter came she withdrew into the house and painted and wove lace and sang old, old, songs to the accompanment of a very unmelodious square piano.

She could not help feeling regret always when she saw summer going and the garden losing its petals and perfume. And to-day, when after weeks of cold and killing frosts and impishly menacing snowflakes, the sky suddenly cleared and let down such a flood of hot, yellow light that one thought one must have turned over the pages of the calendar too fast. Clothilde let the fire go out and opened the windows, and, quickened with the renewed spirit of the outdoors, sought the garden again. She was amazed at what she found—leaves cozily keeping pansies fresh, if frail; verbenas, royal still and comforted against the cold She wandered on, the fallen leaves rustling under her light feet, the sunshine warming her through and through.

"And I thought it was all dead," she said over and over.

She came at last to the brick wall which had begun to crumble in places Against it nestled the pink rose bush The delicate leaves and stems still showed a fresh green, and surmounting them all was a rose small yet pinkly perfect, and breathing an enticing fragrance into the hot sunshine. Clothilde saw it and paused, her two hands clasped upon her throbbing bosom, her eyes wide with wonder. To think that her rose should have bloomed in November, when she had believed it past blooming since July! While she had not watched, it had budded and come to flower. For the first time in thirty-two years Clothilde knew what it was to be glad and surprised at one and at the same time. It was as if Roger had sent her a message—or a kiss—across the empty silence in all those years upon years. Color lit her face, light leaped into her eyes. She bent and touched her lips to the rose in a kiss like a consecration. In that instant of revival she received again something of the hope and promise and grace of her far-away youth.

There was a rustling sound among the fallen leaves beyond the wall, a piece of mortar fell, and as Clothilde, startled, lifted her face she saw a man looking over at her. He was a tall man, else he could not have looked across the wall; it was so high. His hair was gray, his eyes tired; his mouth a little bitter. He looked at Clothilde and she looked at him in absolute wonder.

"Well," he said at last, quietly, "you know me, don' you?"

"I think I do," she replied, faintly.

He moved along the wall till he came to a broken place and climbed through the breach into the garden.

"They told me back in the town," he said as he approached her, "that I should find you living here."

"I've never been away," Clothilde answered, simply.

"If I had known that I should have come back for you," he said.

"I wish you had," Clothilde sighed, "I've been lonely sometimes."

"My God! I should think so." He brushed his eyes and looked at the late blooming rosebush. "That's the one I gave you, isn't it?" he asked.

She nodded.

"See! It's blooming—in November!"

"Yes, yes." He drew a long breath. "It is a wonderful thing to find you and the rose here together. I didn't expect it. Why didn't you marry?" he demanded.

"Oh," she shook her head, smiling a little. "There was nobody I wanted after—you."

He took her hand.

"Bu I married, Clothilde. I am a widower now. I haven't made much of a success of my life, but I've lived decent. I'm not afraid to come back and look in your eyes. We're rather old folks now, but if that rose there can bloom in November I don't see why we can't have a little happiness together yet."

"I hope we may," said Clothilde softly.

He kissed her hand.

"If I'd known then what I do now, Clothilde," he said, "I would have stolen you out of the garden and taken you away with me into the world. There would have been no separation, no waiting on your part. You have waited, haven't you?"

"Yes," acknowledged Clothilde.

He took her ober hand and kissed that, too.

"As it is," he said, "I'll come back and live in the garden with you. But I'm a stirring man, Clothilde, I can't have it as it is. We'll fix it up and take care of the old plants and set out new ones and scrape up the leaves and we'll fix the house up, too. It shall be painted and repaired inside and out. Shall you like that, Clothilde? What do you think of it?

"I think," said Clothilde, with her hands in his and her awakened gaze upon him, "it's very nice—just what I always dreamed you'd do when you came back, Roger."

THE HEART A GREAT WORKER

What a wonder is the heart! Day and night it works away pumping tons of blood through the body and never tires or wears out so long as it is supplied with rich, red blood, such as is formed by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. While sending supplies of nutrition to other parts of the body the heart renews and rebuilds its own wasted cells and so retains health and strength.

Gamboge Yellow.

The yellow sap of a Siam tree produces gamboge yellow.

Rice.

The most careful chemical analyses have demonstrated that rice possesses more nutriment than wheat, oats or barley. It will sustain life longer than any other starch producing plant. The Chinese and Japanese live upon it, endure great fatigue and work harder than the people of any other nation.

HIS ENGAGEMENT

A Short Story.

It was not that Diana Wales did not love Guy Streator. To the contrary Diana often inclined to the belief that she did. The trouble was that she was not quite certain and for more than a year she had kept Guy waiting for his answer while she made up her mind.

"It's this way," she had explained. "About once a week I begin to wonder if it is love or just liking that I feel for you. I should not want to marry you only to find out that it was not love after all. I'm sure you would not want to marry a woman who did not love you."

"I'd be content with a wife who loved me six days out of seven as a starter," conceded Streator cheerfully. But Diana frowned reprovingly.

"I did not say that I loved you on the other days," she reminded him. I said that every little while I doubted that I loved you at all."

"Don't you think it is about time that you came to some conclusion?" he asked gently. "It is more than a year ago that you promised to give me an answer soon."

"But how can I answer when I do not know what to say?" she cried. "I do want to answer you, Guy, but I must have time to decide."

"But if you wait too long perhaps I shall change my mind," said Guy, teasingly. "There is that girl in Buffalo, you know. I always was fond of Clemence Graham. Perhaps I shall —"

The speculations as to his actions was stopped by the pressure of a soft palm against his lips.

"Don't talk that," begged Diana, and for the moment she was very certain that she more than merely liked the decidedly good-looking young man who was so persistent.

Guy turned the conversation and gave the matter no more thought for the moment, but it recurred to Diana some weeks later when she dropped in to call upon Guy's mother. She was very fond of the old lady, and already Mrs. Streator had come to regard Diana as a daughter.

It was with no curious intent that Diana glanced at a telegram that lay opened upon the table while her hostess left the room for a moment. She was looking for a book, and the slip of yellow paper caught her eye.

When Mrs. Streator returned she found Diana standing rigid by the table the telegram crumbled in her hand.

"What does this mean?" she demanded. "Here is a telegram from Buffalo from Ned Bixley. It says, 'Have just heard of your engagement here. Congratulations and best wishes.' What is the meaning of that?"

Little Mrs. Streator coloured and looked decidedly embarrassed.

"Guy wanted to tell you about it himself," she said. "He will be dreadfully annoyed if I should tell you. Won't you wait, my dear, until he speaks? Don't even let him know that through my carelessness you have seen the message.

Diana nodded assent, but as soon as possible, she made her adieu and presently she was home again, where she could give vent to her feelings.

It was true, then, that Guy had changed his mind as he had suggested he might. Perhaps even when he had spoken so lightly of Miss Graham he had been engaged to her.

He had visited Buffalo several times of late. He had told Diana that those were business trips, but she was well acquainted with his affairs and she knew of no business connections he had in Buffalo.

Now Bixley had gone to Buffalo to visit his mother, and of course he had seen the Grahams, for it was while she was on a visit to the Bixley's that Guy had met Miss Graham.

Plainly Bixley had been told of Guy's engagement to Clemence and had wired his congratulations. It was probable that had she not seen the telegram she might not have told of it for some time.

The first flood of bitterness over, Diana could only sit quietly and try to realize the fact that she had lost Guy. She could not blame him. He had waited now for almost eighteen months. Guy was anxious to have a home of his own and Clemence Graham was a very pretty girl, Diana assured herself.

She gave no heed to the call for dinner and she was still sitting in the dark parlour when Guy came in. The maid had received orders always to admit him without announcement and Diana had not thought to tell her otherwise.

He glanced about the darkened room and called softly to her. There was infinite tenderness in his tones, and before she realized it she was in his arms.

"I do love you, Guy," she declared. "I do love you. I loved you all the time."

"I'm glad of that," he said tenderly, and there was real gladness in his tones.

Suddenly she remembered and drew stiffly away.

"I am sorry," she said coldly. "I forgot for the moment the telegram from Mr. Bixley.

"You were at the house?" he asked. "Mother said nothing of that."

"I am sorry that I betrayed her," said Diana contritely. "I did not mean to. I saw the telegram, and she said you wanted to tell me yourself. I guessed what it was."

"I didn't see how you could," he said in puzzled tones. "I did not dare speak for fear the matter would fall through."

"I hope you will be very happy," said Diana. "You told me some time ago that you were thinking of it."

Guy drew the girl to the doorway, where the light from the hall fell upon the tear-stained face.

"You are thinking of Clemence Graham?" he asked, with a sudden realization of her meaning.

Diana nodded.

"This engagement happens to be with Clemence's father," Guy explained. "They are starting a Western branch, and I am to be the manager, with a promise of a share in the business if I can make the thing a success. It was Ned who fixed things for me. He is to marry Clemence himself. I'm sorry that mother did not explain all this to you, and save you all this worry."

"I'm not," declared Diana, as she smiled into the gray eyes that looked down into her own. "It has shown me what a foolish girl I was, Guy. Not until I thought that I had lost you did I realize how much I cared. I've been a very silly girl, Guy, but—I know, now, dear." — Brooklyn Times.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY MARCH 12 1910

DON'T WANT TO GET IN

Some Byersville Citizens Evidently Opposed to Annexation With the City and Give Their Reasons In No Uncertain Manner.

ARE SATISFIED NOW

Byersville, March 12, 1910.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I don't think "A Resident of Byersville in your issue of the 10th inst has troubled much to find out the state of public opinion in Byersville re question of annexation to Peterborough. If he would canvas the village with "Annexation to Peterborough" as a project, he would receive a shock at the very small percentage of residents who are desirous of it.

The sole reason why lots have been bought and houses built here is to escape just what annexation to Peterborough would bring, namely, high taxes.

As far as water is concerned abundance of pure spring water far superior to city water, can be obtained with little trouble or expense.

The disposal of sewerage is a matter of choice, a large number of people living within city limits do not avail themselves of the so-called convenience when pipes are laid past their doors, simply because of increased expenses on the top of already high taxes.

The educational facilities are beyond question, governed as they are by a level-headed body of gentlemen who see that nothing is lacking that would tend to give the children of this neighbourhood a good elementary education.

The question of tramway extenaion is too premature for discussion.

I have spoken to dozens of residents here this last two days on this subject and have not yet met one who is in favour of any change.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I am,

A HOUSEHOLDER.

A REMARKABLE TRADE MARK PROPOSITION

The big "NA-DRU-CO" advertisement, which appears on another page of this issue, announces probably the most extensive trade marked line which has yet been brought out in Canada.

The proposition, as outlined in the advertisement, is a truly "National" one, and one which is of the greatest practical importance to every Canadian.

Scores of Canadian manufacturers have already proved the business-building value of well-advertised—trade mark, but none have ever carried the idea so far as has the firm behind the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

To put out 125 different preparations under the one name and trade mark, and advertise as they are doing, is business genius—though it would be business suicide were they not absolutely certain of the quality of each and every article trade marked.

A careful reading of the advertisement, however, leaves little doubt of NA-DRU-CO quality, and impresses one with the business acumen and judicious daring of the firm which has planned such a project and announced it with such an advertisement, appearing to-day, we understand, throughout the Dominion.

THREE COAL CREEK HOLD-UP MEN WERE CAPTURED AT FERNIE, B. C.

A Reward of $500 Had Been Offered For Their Capture ---Their Crime Was a Most Daring One---A Bad Gang.

ROBBED A PAYMASTER

Fernie, B.C., March 12.—The alleged perpetrators of the daring hold-up at Coal Creek a few days ago, when Messrs. Quinney and Burns, of the Trites Wood Company were relieved of some $1,200 in cash and several hundred dollars' worth of cheques and time receipts in the shadow of the jail at the point of revolvers, were cleverly captured here last night by Acting Chief Bowen and Constable Gorman, of the Fernie police force. Nath Babcock, a prospector and claim-staker, was the first one arrested. He was stopping at the Fernie Hotel and the police took him into custody at 11 o'clock last night. Then proceeding to the residence of J. Bolanger, in the annex, they took Bolanger, and a search of the house resulted in the finding of two $50 bills. It is believed that Bolanger has made some damaging confessions to the chief. At any rate a brother of Bolanger, a conductor running out of Cranbrook, has been arrested by instructions from Chief Bowen, and will arrive in Fernie on the evening train. J. Bolanger has been working on the M.F. and M. train as brakesman, running between Fernie and Coal Creek. He is married and has two children. A reward of $500 was offered for the arrest of the parties.

THREE WOUNDS FROM A KNIFE SAID TO BE ACT OF AN ITALIAN

Ferro Bruno Charged With Wounding Robert McIlwain at an Alleged Disorderly House on Bethune Street Last Evening---Keepers of the House also Placed Under Arrest---Prisoners Were Remanded.

Charged with wounding Robert McIlwain with a knife, Ferro Bruno, an Italian, appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the police court this morning. The police court case was the outcome of a row last night at an alleged disorderly house on Bethune St. McIllwain is suffering from three wounds, two on the right hand and one in the back. Dr. Leach was called and dressed them. He stated that unless some unforeseen complications arose, the wounds were not serious.

It appears that McIlwain in company with another fellow went down to the home of Roland Butcher, 385 Bethune St., but entrance was refused. They then hammered the door until finally Butcher went out and he and McIlwain got into a fight. Butcher was followed by Bruno, who, it is said, used a knife on McIlwain. The police were telephoned for and P. C's Newhall, Adams and Meharry were soon on the scene. The Italian and Butcher and his wife were placed under arrest.

In police court this morning Bruno was charged with wounding McIlwain, Mr. Tom Minnicola acting as interpreter. He pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by a jury. He will have his preliminary hearing on Thursday next, but will be tried at the spring assizes which come on, the latter end of this month. Butcher and his wife pleaded not guilty to being the keepers of a disorderly house and were remanded until Thursday next. Their three children were taked over by the Children's Aid Society.

Looking For First Robin As He Has Seen It For Twenty Years

As Mr. Paul Costello awakens in the early morning these days, he listens ofr the first robin of the year just as he has done every spring during the past twenty years.

"I expect to hear the robin any morning now," he said. "My window looks out into the orchard and it is an odd fact that the first robin seems to know that we are inside the windows, for it comes right up on the closest bow. I'll be lying awake one of these mornings about half past five and the first thing I know I'll hear the robin warbling, as if it was tickled to death to get back to see us."

They always come during the night, Mr. Costello says, but he will offer no explanation of where they spend the winter. Last year it was on the first day of April that Mr. Robin sang gaily in that budding apple tree, carolling to the other early birds of the year, and away off in the distance a mate seemed to be answering, or perhaps it was only the echo carried back on the clear morning air. There has been no variation during the past two decades, and Mr. Costello feels confident that he will see his first robin this year in exactly the same way.

Presented With Ring On His Departure From City

The members of the A.S.K. class of Knox Church Sunday School gathered on Thursday night to say farewell to Andrew Robertson, one of their members who has left to accept a position in Toronto. Mr. Robertson was presented with a handsome gold ring and an address of which the following is a copy.

Dear Andrew,

We felt that we could not let you leave for Toronto, thus severing your connection with the class without letting you know how we regret it without letting you know how much we appreciated you. We have felt since your connection with the class that your presence has been an incentive for us to brace up and do better. Peter's shadow fell on men to cure them and that is the way with the Christian's life. We shall pray that wherever you are you may be kept in the shadow of Christ's all protecting power then shall success be assured. In going through life may you develop qualities that shall make you a leader among men, may they see in you the sterling qualities that will make them wish to be like you. We ask that you accept this ring as an emolem of our love—like the ring, may our friendship have no ending. All we ask for is a place in your kind remembrance and for the expression of the hope that we may have had enough power to magnetize you to the extent of returning once in a while to meet us in class. If you should give your life to Christ for service in the dark corners of the earth may we not have a slight share in the glory.

Your teacher and friends of the A.S.K. Class.

Fine Marble Table Has Been Installed

Handsome New Writing Desk at The Hotel National.

A fine marble writing table is at the disposal of the patrons of the Hotel National and it is but another evidence of the enterprise of Mr. D. B. Denison, the proprietor of one of Peterborough's foremost hotels, and his anxiety to provide his guests with comfort and convenience. The table is one of the handsomest things ever seen in the way of a writing desk and is being admired by many. The table stands in the corner writing room, to the left of the rotunda.

The top is of fine white mottled Italian marble, the top being covered and protected by heavy plate glass. The writing space is divided up by partitions so that it is converted into individual compartments, something not attainable with the open table in use in many places.

The top, back and sides contain the ads. of several of the leading business firms of the city, the lettering being engraved in the stone, then painted with a fine embossing paint in various colours. Trade emblems are also cut in the different ads., the whole being executed in a manner that is beyond criticism and shows a skill in workmanship and designing that reflects great credit upon the maker, Mr. E. D. Wilde, of St. Paul, the holder of United States and Canadian patents. Mr. Wilde has been offered an enormous sum for his patents covering this particular style of tables.

Mr. Wilde favours the forming here of a joint stock company to control the business for Eastern Canada.

The marble work was carried out by Coughlin Bros., the lettering being done by Mr. Fred Cook and the woodwork by Mr. D. Belleghem, everything being in a highly satisfactory manner.

COULD NOT SEE, COULD NOT SLEEP FOR ECZEMA

D. D. D. Prescription Cured Him.

Only those who have suffered from it know the tortures of eczema. Mr. James Lulloch, of Iron Bridge, Ont., knew them all too well. He writes gratefully of his cure by D. D. D.

"I have suffered for years with eczema, and now through using two bottles of your wonderful cure, my skin is as pure as it ever was.

My face was so bad I could not see. I could not sleep. I could not rest at all for the terrible itch.

Thanks to your wonderful medicine I am cured."

D. D. D. is a simple compound of oil of wintergreen with thymol, glycerine and other substances. It penetrates to the inner skin, where the germs of the disease are, kills them, and instantly relieves the terrible itch.

For free trial bottle of D. D. D. Prescription write to the D. D. D. Laboratories, Department P E, 23 Jordan St., Toronto.

For sale by all Druggists.

PLEASE BEAR IN MIND

On account of a very serious case of sickness in the vicinity of St. Luke's church, no bell will be rung for any of the services to-morrow. Those wishing to attend St. Luke's to-morrow are reminded that the services begin punctually at 8, 11, and 7, according to the statement in this paper on another page.

SETTLER'S EFFECTS BURNED IN CAR

Woodstock, Ont., March 12.—James Murray, a young grocery clerk, last Wednesday, packed all his worldly goods in a box car and started for Saskatchewan, where he was going to take up land. A telephone message from him at Barrie yesterday stated that the car in which he was riding, along with his outfit, was burned through the upsetting of a lantern, and everything in it was destroyed. The stock included six horses, three head of cattle and some hens. A fur-lined overcoat, with $60 in one of the pockets, was also lost, while Mr. Murray himself very narrowly escaped death by burning.

SLEEPING DRAUGHTS AND SOOTHING MIXTURES

A mother should never give her child a sleeping draught, soothing mixture or opiate of any kind except on the advice of a doctor who has seen the child. All these things contain poisons and an overdose may kill the little one. When you give your child Baby's Own Tablets you have the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or narcotic and cannot possibly do harm—but always do good. The Tablets promptly cure all stomach, bowel and teething troubles, and give healthy, natural sleep. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"THE GIRL QUESTION" TO VISIT CITY

Messrs. Turner and Sons, proprietors of the Grand Opera House, make the announcement to-day that they have secured a superior attraction for Good Friday, matinee and evening in the appearance here of the highly successful musical comedy "The Girl Question." This amusing and tuneful production is the work of Messrs. Adams, Hough and Howard, who gave us "The Time, the Place and the Girl," which won such favour here earlier in the season. "The Girl Question" has just finished a long run at the La Salle Theatre in Chicago, and comes here with the thorough endorsation of the critics of the Windy City. It is said to be even funnier than the previous efforts of its authors while the music is of the catchy nature that one has grown to associate with Jos. Howard "Good-bye Pal," "Oh, Gee, be Good to Me, Kid," "Waltz Me Around Till I'm Dreamy" and "When Eyes Like Yours Look into Eyes Like Mine," are some of the song hits, while the phantom chimes effect in the rendition of "I Hate to Work on Monday," promise to be a decided novelty. There is a large beauty chorus and a squad of broilers.

RESIDENTS OF BYERSVILLE NOT EAGER FOR UNION WITH CITY

Would be Grateful for Decent Street Car Service, But are Otherwise Quite Content to Remain a Suburb and Pay Taxes to North Monaghan Instead of Peterborough.

Byersville residents are not unanimously in favour of being taken under the city's wing. Several communications have been received of late, one in support of the union and the other objecting to it. Byersville—the name has been secured from the fact that Mr. Byers is postmaster and storekeeper—has developed rapidly and seems to indicate the direction in which future growth will be carried. One would not recognize the old fields that but five or six years ago were profusely dotted with charred stumps. Mr. Arthur Bishop's house was the first erected in the district that was to be built up so quickly, and after that the fields between Lundy's Lane and the extension of Chamberlain street were broken into streets, and while there were a few shacks thrown together afterwards the majority of the residences are a good type of working men's homes. Now, Byersville includes the whole of that section west of the boundary line, comprising a south western suburb of the city. They have electric lights, telephone, a daily mail service, rural free delivery; excellent spring water; in fact, they consider themselves well off, particularly as they are paying their taxes to the township of North Monghan at a figure that would make one of the citizens within the walls sigh for the green fields of the country side. True, Byersville is without sidewalks and sewers, but that is all they do lack. The people are at present most anxious to see an extension of the Street Railway line, in order that a practical and fast service may be enjoyed. It is a safe betting proposition that there is hardly a resident in that section who has not turned the corner at Park and Albert St., in time to see the car disappearing out of sight up Reid St. After dark the conditions are even more provoking. The car will come down to the end of the line and stop a minute. A man or woman notices that it is stationary and begins to run in hopes of catching it, but after a hundred yards' spurt Mr. Car hopes away, gradually increasing its speed, and instances have been recorded in which the immediate neighbours ran in doors in wonder at what occasioned the sudden blueness of the atmosphere. However, Byersvillians are living in hopes. They have been told that the line is to be brought out into their district, and that a loop service will be established. Otherwise they have no very great desire, as a neighbourhood to join arms with the city. To a man they are proud of their little hamlet, and it will be some time before they will develop a strong desire to become a portion of Peterborough.

A STRONG TRIBUTE PAID TO PETERBOROUGH ARTIST

Work of Miss Katherine Wallis is Referred to in Terms of the Highest Praise by the Canadian Century.

GOLDEN OPINION

The Canadian Century says: When "La Grande Sarah" last toured Canada the indignant population of our oldest and sleepiest town pelted her with eggs and stones. It was the best "reclame" the divine one ever got — and, moreover, the Premier of the country made vicarious apology. For a time the controversy over the incident took the place of the sea-serpent as a filler for the daily press, then petered out.

Bernhardt has not yet satisfactorily accounted to herself for the uproar. She had been just frank, as she thought. In fact she had been brutally frank, with the frankness that so exaggerates the half-seen truth as to turn into a lie.

Doubtless she gave the correct impression, as registered upon her mind. These professional birds of passage wing their flight too swiftly across our continent. Their vision gets blurred. Even our own Kipling's last sketch of us, in his "Letters to the Family," is fuzzy at the edges.

Bernhardt, herself aesthetic to the fingertips, had her expressed contempt for the Canadians because she had not seen in them any trace of art, literature, or culture of any kind. We were vandals—our only glimmer of hope for the future being in the readiness with which we slipped our money through the box-office wicket to see—Her.

O course she could not know, what few Canadians are aware of, that in spite of untoward conditions, the loins of Canada breed the poet, the man-of-letters, the painter, and the sculptor also—but that they are no sooner produced than exported. A Bliss Carman sings of Tantramar awhile, then is inveigled to New York or Boston and becomes an "American" poet. In the same way you can find English novelists and French painters, whose birth register was written in Ontario and Quebec.

They must be exported or starve. We have not yet the leisurely class out of which the collector and the dilettante come. Our richest citizens as yet, work harder than our poorest, and have not the time to stretch themselves in Art Nouveau chairs, and be lost in a sensuous dream, gazing at a picture, a statue, or a ceramic. As for our cultured class, its culture is bookish and professional. They lean to learned disquisitions on Syro-Phoenician architecture and Greek art — but they have no eyes to see the genius working in their midst.

We are all tarred with the same brush in that respect. Our art colonies work in perpetual discouragement and silence. The man in the street, in many cases, does not even know the names of painters like Cullen, Brymner, Cote, Laura Muntz, Franchere, Paradis; of sculptors like Hebert, McCarthy and Hill. These although they do not export themselves, are less known here than they are in the art-centre of the world. There, entering into competition with artists drawn from all parts of civilization, they have won medals, and prizes and renown. The Frenchman and his government have bought their works, and the Canadian and his government have not. Therefore, after all, the divine Sarah was more caustic than unjust.

All this introductory to the remark that Canada has in one of her daughters a sculptor, who, while yet in the educative stage, has won golden opinions from French critics and connoisseurs. Except, perhaps, those in the vicinity of her birthplace, her countrymen do not even dream of her existence. Her name is Katherine Wallis.

Miss Katherine Wallis was born three miles from Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario, in a home and amid surroundings admirably calculated to develop in her the love of the beautiful. Her mother was artistic and cultured, and it was from her, probably, that Miss Wallis inherited her bent and inspiration. She was educated by private tuition in her own home, her governess being a most accomplished lady, Miss Jane Buchanan, daughter of the late Isaac Buchanan, of Hamilton.

Miss Wallis then went to Edinburgh to study art, devoting herself entirely to painting. Her assiduity secured a diploma for her. She returned home and for some time painted in a desultory fashion, purely as an amateur. In 1893 both her parents died. Miss Wallis went abroad, travelling in Italy and Germany for two years. After that she settled in London, where she attended the South Kensington School of Art, taking a course in modelling to strengthen the conception of pure line.

Her artistic wanderings then took her to Berlin, and afterwards to Paris. In Paris a casual meeting determined her final art-vocation. Going through the Jardin des Plantes, one day, she made the acquaintance of Oscar Waldmann, the great sculptor of animal life. He prompted her to go into his own atelier as a student, and she has been studying under him ever since. For art-education goes on until the classes are closed by death.

Although Miss Wallis is, in this sense, a student, she has "arrived." She has often had her work placed at the Salon. At the last Salon four of her pieces were admitted. Lately the Conservator of the Petit Palais, the Municipal Art Museum of Paris, bought from her two medallions to be added to the art treasures stored in the galleries there.

In France Miss Wallis has been termed by a prominent art critic "le charmant sculpteur de l'enfant," the charming sculptor of childhood. In fact, among our artists she is to the chisel what Miss Laura Muntz is to the brush. The Canadian Century reproduces on this page two photographs of her more recent work, at present on view in Montreal: "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," a bronze statuette, and "Fille d'Aout," daughter of August, a life size marble bust of a little girl with hops twined in her hair.

Miss Wallis has not been entirely without honour in her own country.

LITTLE TOTS WERE LOST

One Wandered From Albert Street Up George Near Smith Street—Was Brought to Police Station —Another Lost Bearings After Trip to Store.

WERE TAKEN HOME

Sobbing bitterly and tearfully calling for "Mamma" little Arthur Shepherd, Albert St., the four year old son of Robt. Shepherd, was brought into the police station this morning about the noon hour by a boy who said he had found him near Smith St. It was a long tramp for the little fellow and P. C. Meagher made the child as comfortable as possible, going into one of his secret pockets for a big Northern Spy. Little Arthur's wandering from his home south and west of the Edison to the vicinity of Smith St. on George St., is not easily explained, as the distance at the very least is two miles. His mother called for him about half past twelve and the boy's worries disappeared.

Another Tot Lost.

One of the surest signs of spring are the groups of children on the sidewalks and after their confinement during the winter they can scarcely control themselves when liberated, with the weather as balmy and delightful as it has been during the past few days. Willie Stermer, Murray St., was lost for hours yesterday. He was first noticed about nine o'clock sitting on the steps of the Bank of Toronto. He had been to a grocery store and had been given what appeared to be a half-pound of lard. Willie was scarcely old enough to understand that he was lost, although he could convey the intelligence that he had been to a grocery store, but he could not pronounce his name clearly. He remained at the city clerk's office until about two o'clock, when his anxious mother found him after a lengthy search.

Threatened To Cut Their Throats

Former Peterborough Man Appeared in Toronto Police Court.

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Toronto, March 12.—James Simpson and his wife, who are said to come from Peterborough, figured in police court this morning. Mrs. Simpson, a timid little woman, asked for order of protection from her husband who is a big fellow and dissipated.

"He threatened to cut our throats," said the wife, referring to herself and her two children, by a former husband.

"I didn't hurt you," growled the man from the dock. The magistrate finally remanded Simpson for a week, advising them to try to come to some agreement in the meantime.

NOW IN HOSPITAL

Rev. Mr. Stirling of Havelock Removed to the General Hospital, Toronto.

The committee consisting of Rev. J. G. Potter, Rev. H. J. Keith and Mr. J. C. Shook, appointed by the presbytery to look after Rev. J. G. Sterling, of Havelock, who is critically ill, has had him placed in the General Hospital, Toronto, with two doctors attending him. It appears that some time ago Mr. Sterling was wounded in the chest. It has gradually grown worse until of late it has become quite serious and cancer is feared. Rev. Mr. Keith was in Toronto and has made provision for Rev. Mr. Sterling's comfort.

CHILDREN ENJOY THE SHOW

—This morning pedestrians passing along George street wondered where all the little boys and girls gathered in front of the Princess Theatorium had come from, and why? The pavement was blocked with eager little ones anxiously waiting for "the show to open." It seems that the proprietor of the Princess had arranged with a local grocer, Mr. Kerrigan, 622 George street, whereby the latter gave gratis an admission ticket with each sale of groceries amounting to a certain sum. Judging by the hundreds of "kids" presenting admission tickets Mr. Kerrigan's plan had "caught on." To hear the children's roars of laughter over the comedy and their applause over the dramatic pictures, proves that the younger Canadians appreciate good, clean amusement.

THE QUEEN'S

Toronto, the Queen City of Canada, has much of the beautiful. It is found in the many handsome churches, artistic public buildings, imposing offices, public drives, parks and gardens. Its government buildings are fine. Of hotels there are many; none, however, approaching like Queen's for perfect service, quiet comfort, and homelike surroundings, and the peculiar excellence of its cuisine. Its fame is far-reaching, and many remember with pleasure the hours spent within its hospitable walls. The charges are based on the American and European plan, and are as follows:

SATURDAY, MARCH 12, 1910

SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED.

The Canadian Naval Bill was successfully launched at Ottawa last (Thursday) night. She slid gracefully into the troubled waters of the committee of the Whole and now her internal fittings will demand attention and call for another flood of technical and small arm oratory. After Mr. Maclean, of South York, had cast his bolt from the blue into the Opposition ranks a dropping fire was maintained for two or three hours from the area of many naval policies. The vote came on the six months' hoist resolution of Mr. Northrup and Mr. Sharpe. This was negatived on division by a vote of 119 to 75 and the motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the second reading of the naval bill was passed on the same figures reversed. The Conservatives assume to take some comfort from the claim that the government majority was small. It may have been small but it could not have been greater for the Liberals voted solidly for the bill, the difference being 41 and 47, the normal Liberal majority, being accounted for by the fact that there were three Liberals absent form Ottawa without pairs. The majority would have been much larger if the vote had been taken squarely on the policy or expedient of Mr. Borden which was defeated the previous night by a majority of 55. Mr. Borden's scheme of having a supporter move the six months' hoist, was the strongest stroke of statesmanship he has ever been guilty of. It served, the various Conservative policies having been voted down, to solidify the dissident and discordant elements of his own following and unite them solidly against the common enemy. The strength of the naval bill of the government was in the fact that it succeeded on its, merits—on its identity in spirit with the policy unanimously adopted by the House on March 29th, 1909. It was and is a good bill because it filled and fills the bill. It represented and represents the beginning of the discharge of Canada's palpable duty to share in the burdens of imperial defence. It is a policy of loyalty to the empire, and of loyalty to Canada. It is a Canadian policy; it provides for the building of a Canadian navy in Canada, to be build of Canadian materials by Canadian workmen and manned by Canadian seamen. It is further a patriotic Canadian policy because it will give a start and a stimulus to a Canadian ship-building industry that will include the ultimate home construction of our merchant ,as well as our militant, marine. We must make a beginning some time and now, as parliament has decided, is the time. A few years ago Germany had no, or few, facilities for building warships. Within a dozen years she has established a formidable equipment for building her war fleets as well as her fleets of commerce. The same applies to Japan. Neither. Germany nor Japan would have stood where they are now if they had not made a beginning. The lesson is obvious and Canada is taking it to heart by undertaking the beginnings of a Canadian navy with all that that implies.

'ROUND THE STORES

Easter, scarcely two weeks off, means that there will be a good volume of feminine shopping done before Good Friday, 25th instant. Women can no longer delay the Spring suit question, and the various other articles of new Spring attire, that must be decided upon soon. Every department of "The Beehive" is bubbling over with the newest Spring fashions. The new coats shown for this Spring are much shorter, although long ones are still in evidence. Russian blouse effect predominates slightly. Short semi-fitting coats are shown made in neat tailored effects, with long lapels and mannish collar, plain pleated skirt, in Venetian cloth and other material. There are many new colours, some of those noted being the new shade of wood brown, a colour very popular in high-priced suits; also, aeroplane, that fashionable greenish blue; ashes of violet in lovely soft tones; greys, ashes of roses, and blacks. Pretty, white lawn blouses, with embroidery and pleated fronts and sleeve trims, are among the choicest of the dainty Spring waists seen at the Beehive.

The pre-Easter showing of new Spring dress goods at Cressman's, has been favoured with considerable attention from the ladies. This week seems to have started a mild rush for dress goods, and the selections of a dressy gown from the many fashionable weaves at Cressman's is attended with pleasure. The invitation to inspect the ready-to-wear coats, suits, and skirts will also be taken advantage of by all who may come shopping to this store, budding with new novelties for Easter.

Spring flowers are shown in abundance at the West-End greenhouses. Fresh cut flowers every day, in all their beauty and fragrance. Carnations, violets, daffodils, shamrocks, in small pots, and shamrocks in bloom. Down town agency at Porter S. White's grocery, 336 George street.

Are you going to paint the verandah this Spring, or just wash over the paint? It really ought to be painted, and if you don't do it soon you'll lose money. When you once realize how much a good coat of paint saves the wood work, the expense won't be much. The Peterborough Hardware Company has got in paint enough to fill every demand. The firm represent various manufacturers, who make paints that have good covering qualities on wood or metal.

Robert Fair & Co. announce the starting of a carpet sale on Tuesday next, March 13th, comprising hundreds of yards of Brussels tapestry and wool weaves, at clearance prices, to make room for newer shipments arriving. In the stock will be found exceptional bargains for housekeepers and others desirous of replenishing early in the Spring. Besides these carpets, there will also be many chances found in Axminister rugs, linoleums and curtains. See the advertisement in another column.

One of the reasons why people stay customers of a store is to be found in its reliability. Shoppers at F. C. Cubitt's book and stationery store, are impressed with the standard quality of the goods, as well as the prices. It's an ideal store and doing little things well is characteristic of the salespeople. The store is bright, and the stock well kept, and the store news, as published in the Examiner, is worthy of careful perusal.

The Turnbull Co. have started in early this season to make preparations for big business. During this week they have been experiencing a run of busy days with their House-furnishing sale, as well as the interest which their early showing of new dress goods, silks, and ready-to-wear garments have been creating. Not only wanted household goods have been on sale, but the stylish new Spring dress fabrics have been in active demand every day. On another page will be found examples of their new models for Spring wear.

The grocer who does not advertise is not doing the business he might do. It is absurd to think that there is no good way to advertise your store because of certain trade conditions in store location. There are too many things to tell about a nice grocery to keep silent. The general grocery store has nearly as many "leaders" to mention as any other store, and yet some grocers don't seem to know it. Grocery advertising should be seasonable, above all things else. One of the smartest suburban grocery stores in the city is that of Sid. Mitchell's, located at the corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets. There is no cleaner, neater, or better stocked grocery anywhere. Good system in stock keeping, clean, catchy windows, store always in apple-pie order, and everything about it looking "spic, span, new." No better groceries are sold anywhere and any one who tries to undersell Sid. will find him a troublesome competitor. Is it any wonder that Mr. Mitchell's business is growing like a mushroom, especially since he started using printer's ink, in order to enlighten the public about the good things he has for them.

Great varieties and attractive values continue to invest the merchandise in Richard Hall & Sons. There is nothing stinted in this big store. A long list of special values were offered for to-day, which included seasonable goods, in which the opportunity to save money was evident. In view of the near approach of Easter, this store has been strengthened in every department. Among the throngs of ladies out shopping these fine summer days, there are few who do not stroll through Richard Hall & Son's, attracted by the wonderful assortments of new spring novelties. Many Easter outfits have been delivered and the dress-making department has a bookful of orders to fill with a rush.

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, with headquarters in Waterloo, Ont., is one of the oldest institutions of the kind in the Dominion, having completed its fortieth year. The reserve valuation of its current policies is slightly over 12 millions, this reserve being calculated on a mixed standard of four per cent., three and a half per cent.,and three per cent. The reserve value under the uniform Government standard involves a somewhat smaller liability. On the company's own valuation its surplus is $2,269,692—a sufficiently substantial amount on this volume of business; while on the Government standard it is $700,000 greater. Half a million of this surplus was earned during 1909. The assets are mostly in mortgages, with $4,858,000 in debentures, and $1,818,000 in policy loans. The showing of growth for the year is exceedingly gratifying, the new business written being over eight millions, an increase of twelve per cent., over the previous year, and the increase in total assurance being $4,568,000, or nearly nine per cent. The whole of the new business is in British North America.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Post Card Column.

Sir,—Regarding the question of annexing Byersville to the city, the writer might suggest that some of those interested would do well to call on a few East City (formerly Ashburnham) residents and get their views on annexation.

Yours,
"STUNG."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reply to A Resident of Byersville, I suggest that if he wants the city water, sewerage and city schools, let him pack his furniture and move into the city limits. I think the majority of Byersville residents are satisfied with the schools and water of Byersville and do not wish to be taken in the city limits. As the majority always carries let those who are not satisfied with the privileges of Byersville get out and make room for more loyal citizens. Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain, yours sincerely.

One of the Ratepayers of Byersville.

How Long, Madam, Will Your Flour Keep Sound?

Says the FRA:

I once knew a dear Old Lady who had a way of saying when you told her anything—

"I want to know—I want to know".

I used to laugh at this, but now I sympathize with the sentiment—"I want to know—I want to know".

Just so, Madam, every little now and then we like to tell you little things about flour, little wrinkles it has taken us a long, long time to learn.

For, perhaps, YOU "want to know".

And nobody else could tell you but we who know good flour, since we make FIVE ROSES.

For instance, Madam—

Why do some flours get mouldy, acid, discolored, streaky, even wormy?

Why can't they remain on their good behaviour long after you have paid over the good coin?

Of course, Madam, you remember what wonderful promises were made for a brand which simply dealt out dozens of disappointment the older it got.

Turning out like that youth Mark Twain talks about—"of rare promise and much rarer fulfillment".

• • • •

When a flour doesn't keep sound, you see, it's because it contains too much of the branny particles and low grade portions of the wheat, maybe little pieces of the oily germ.

Which act on one another, and the first thing YOU know—why, your flour is working merrily away in the wrong place—in the bag instead of in the dough or oven.

The purer the flour, Mistress Housewife, that is the freer from branny particles and such like, the better its power of keeping sound and sweet.

• • • •

If we say FIVE ROSES contains only the heart of the hardiest, meatiest wheat in Manitoba, it's only the simple truth, Madam,

Keep FIVE ROSES in a dry place for six months or more, and you will find it even healthier, sounder, fresher, drier than the day you bought it.

Madam, we defy YOU to disprove it, Is it a dare?

Australian Strike Ends.

Sydney, N.S.W., March 12.—The strike of the northern coal miners, which has been in progress since early in November, was declared off yesterday, thus ending the difficulties in the New South Wales coal fields. The southern miners resumed work last month.

During the strike, which affected 12,000 miners, the price of coal jumped from $7 to $16 a ton. The question of higher wages and better working conditions precipitated the conflict. Four of the strike leaders were sentenced to terms of imprisonment during the trouble, having been convicted of obstructing work at the mines.

Heap Big Injun Dead.

Vancouver, B.C., March 12.—Chief Joe Capilano, the Indian, who carried the appeal of the British Columbia Indians on the fishery and land questions to King Edward, died yesterday of pneumonia. He was the recognized leader of all the coast Indians.

Smart Boy Sent to Jail.

Smith's Falls, March 12.—A Perth boy named William Beatty, who has been amusing himself lately by throwing red pepper in the eyes of a number of boys and girls in that town, has been sentenced to twenty days in jail.

Chicago Wheat and Cotton Operator Meets With a Hostile Demonstration on the Cotton Exchange in Manchester—Then Goes to Liverpool, Where He Is Warmly Welcomed—Row Nearly Serious.

London, Eng., March 12.—A hostile demonstration on the floor of the cotton exchange at Manchester, and one directly contrasting it for friendliness on the corn exchange at Liverpool, were met with yesterday by James A. Patten, the Chicago wheat and cotton operator.

In the first, Mr. Patten was mobbed and probably escaped injury only by being rescued by the police; in the latter he was greeted with cheering and other manifestations of friendliness. Mr. Patten will sail from Liverpool to-day for New York on the Mauretania.

The brief vacation in England of the Chicago operator had been spent mostly about the Liverpool markets, and yesterday he made up his mind to run over to Manchester to see the city and visit the cotton exchange.

It was known to Mr. Patten that there had been threats of an unpleasant reception should he visit "Cottonopolis," but he refused to believe they would be carried into effect.

These threats, it is said, emanated from persons on the exchange who had lost large sums as a result of Mr. Patten's operations in Chicago and from others who hold him responsible for yesterday's rise in the price of cotton and who believed that his visit to England had for its purpose the manipulation of the market.

Patten's coming to Manchester had been widely heralded since his arrival in Liverpool and the reception was ready for him.

Private Auto Factory.

New York, March 12.—One hundred of the leading business men of Wall street are to make automobiles for their own use on designs embodying the best features of both American and foreign cars. The company will have a factory at Springfield, Mass., the output of which will be bought at the actual cost of manufacture to the stockholders.

The concern has been incorporated under the laws of this state, with a nominal capital of $10,000. It is understood that the output will be limited to 100 cars, the number of stockholders.

Essex Cattle All Right.

Kingsville, March 12.—Dr. Jones of Windsor, veterinary inspector for the Dominion Government, who came to Gosfield Township to investigate a rumor that rabies existed in a herd of cattle in that township, found that the report was untrue. He says that there is no trace of rabies in Essex County.

As Bad as a Leper.

New York, March 12.—"You are such a low, vile creature that I believe the convicts in Sing Sing prison, where you are going, will shun you as they would the plague, saying, as in days of old 'room for the leper'."

This severe castigation was hurled by Judge Foster in general sessions yesterday at Charles F. Dewolf, a self-confessed "white-slave" trader, who came up for sentence for slashing Flora Thomson, whom he brought from Boston. Dewolf tired of the woman and slashed her throat.

Dewolf was given a term of not less than two years and three months, or not more than four years and seven months.

Not Wrong to Get Drunk.

New York, March 12.—"Three times a year is not too often for a gentleman to get drunk," said Surrogate Daniel Noble at Jamaica, L.I., yesterday, in deciding a will contest where two brothers of the testator sought to have the will declared void on the ground that he was a "habitual drunkard." Surrogate Noble held the will valid and gave the contestants a lecture.

The will was that of Wm. Trester of Evergreen, L.I., who left an estate of $4,000. To his two brothers he left $5 a piece. The two sisters got the residue and the brothers protested.

Murdered His Mother.

No Evidence of Wrongdoing.

Montreal, March 12.—R. B. Kessen who took over the Bank of St. Stephen, reports to the Bankers' Association that there is no evidence of anything wrong, that the failure was due to poor judgment in making loans.

As previously announced, the double liability and the assets will protect the note holders and the depositors.

Emigration of Reservists.

London, March 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Commons Sir Edward Grey stated that the emigration of reservists could only be permitted to a limited extent. Respecting time expired soldiers the Army Council would be glad if employment with oversea dominions' forces could be guaranteed for a limited period, say two years.

Awarded $1,200.

Woodstock, March 12.—A jury at the High Court sitting here yesterday afternoon awarded Mrs. McKeand $1,200 damages against the C.P.R. for the death of her son, Adam, who was killed at Thamesford, the young man having fallen off a runaway train while shoveling cement.

A Reverse for Root.

Albany, N.Y., March 12.—Senator George H. Cobb of Watertown was formally elected and installed as president pro tem of the Senate.

U. S. Senator Root, who, since the death of T. C. Platt, assumes the roll of "state boss," had indicated a preference for Senator Hinman.

Brakeman Confesses to Hold-Up.

Vancouver, B.C., March 12.—Fred Belanger, a brakeman, confessed at Farnie, upon his arrest yesterday, that he and another young man, Frank Babcock, were the perpetrators of the hold-up which occurred three weeks ago at Coal Creek. At the point of a gun the two men held up J. W. Quinny, accountant for the Trites-Wood Co., who had just arrived at Coal Creek with $1,200 in cash to pay the workmen. They took this money and $2,000 in checks. Just as they had finished the job of robbing him, a constable, with a drawn revolver approached, but they leaped aboard a passenger train just leaving the station. Belanger was arrested at Cranbrook.

A sensational development occurred last night in the arrest of Provincial Constable Fred Varlow, who appeared when the robbers were running away with the money. He fire several shots at the fleeing bandits, but it is alleged that he used blank cartridges and purposely allowed the men to get away on the outgoing passenger train.

'Quake in California.

San Francisco, Cal., March 12.—A sharp earthquake in some parts of the state, the severest shock since the big one of 1906, was experienced throughout the central part of California on Thursday night about 10.54 o'clock.

The vibrations were long and undulatory, but slow. The duration was from one and a half to four seconds.

In San Francisco people were generally aroused. In the telegraph offices virtually every operator left his key.

"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"

These words or expressions having the same meaning are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth 25c., sufficient for ten days' treatment, to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 2 stamps. Virtue.

Sweet Day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky,
The dew shall weep thy fall to-night,
For thou must die.

Sweet Rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
The root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet Spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie,
My music shows you have your closes
And all must die.

Onl ya sweet and virtuous soul,
Like a seasoned timber, never gives;
But though the whole world turns to coal,
Then chiefly lives.

English Force Meat.

One pound bread crumbs, one-half teaspoonful thyme ,one-half teaspoon sweet marjoram, one half teaspoon savory, one half teaspoon pepper, one-half teaspoon hot milk, eight hard boiled eggs. Mix yolks of cooked eggs with two ounces of butter. Add crumbs and seasoning and mix all together. Beat four eggs and add Bake half an hour, turn out on platter. Chop whites of cooked eggs fine and put over top. Serve with brown sauce.

Browning a teaspoon of sugar in a pan on top of the stove will colour any sauce.

English Beef.

The roast beef of old England is presumably the finest in the world and has been celebrated in both song and story, but one seldom hears of the many other excellent ways in which English cooks prepare this meat. One of their most pleasing dishes is beefsteak stewed without the addition of water or any other fluid. To prepare this have three or four pounds of rumpsteak cut about an inch thick. Put one tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and let it melt without browning. Wash the steak quickly in cold watner, put in the frying pan, cover closely and let it slowly become very hot. As soon as it is thoroughly heated add one teaspoonful of white pepper, then keep it just simmering (never allowing it to boil) until perfectly tender. It should be closely covered all the time. It will require about an hour and a half to cook it just right. When done, place the stake on a heated platter, and add a half a teacupful of walnut or tomato catsup to the gravy in the pan, let it get very hot and pour it over the steak. Sometimes a slice or two of onion and carrot are added to impart a delicate flavour to the steak, but it is quite delicious without.

Life of Turkish Girls.

The first twelve or thirteen years of a Turkish girl's life is not different from that of any other girl. She plays with children of both sexes, Turks and Europeans. The instant however, that she becomes a woman and takes tchichaf—the loose outer garments which conceal the figure—her companionship with boys ends. She no longer accompanies her father or visits the part of the house called selamlik, where the men are. She lives in the part of the house called haremlik, and begins her education as a woman. She learns what is expected of her as sister, daughter, wife and mother. She is not deprived of her European friends nor of the chance of making new ones. She is permitted to study and to go about freely, although always veiled and attended.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Waist Embroidered at Home.

One of the most effective waists embroidered at home or by an expert has been made by a college girl. A fine braiding pattern was chosen and the lines were worked in the "big needle" or pen faggoting stitch which one finds on old samplers on some fine handkerchiefs and other lines. The work is done with a needle that comes for the purpose, known as the "faggoting" needle, with 100 cotton. It is unnecessary to add that the fine thread has to be tied into the eye of the coarse needle. Many of the patterns stamped in art needlework departments are made more effective by working certain of the stems or lines in this way, while the rest of the work is of the convent kind.

Hints for the Housekeepers.

Always soak raisins in cold water before stoning.

Bread crumbs are much better than cracker crumbs for covering things to be fried since they do not absorb the grease.

A delicious salad may be made of grape fruit, pulp, white grapes and stalks of romaine, dressed with oil and vinegar and sweetened slightly.

Nuts have considerable food value. The boiled and mashed pulp may be used as one would meat or vegetables, croquettes being even made of it.

Sago cheese is best for Welsh rabbit.

It is a good plan to have a can of Spanish peppers always in the house. They can be easily and attractively used in an emergency.

Sandwiches may be made of them, or they may be used to garnish left-over meats, etc. Cut the meat into tubes, cover with bits of pepper and bread crumbs and brown.

Before pouring hot fruit into a glass dish or jar, put it on a wet lot. This will keep the glass from cracking.

Close the Eyes Many Times Daily.

Few things are more helpful to the eyes than the simple expedient of closing the lids.

This may be done in the office, in the street car, or at home, and must include a perfect relaxation of the nerves around the optics.

In order to obtain this rest the lids must be closed gently.

If the eyes are squinted it means that all the nerves and muscles are tense, and absolutely no benefit can be gained from the action.

When tired after work it is most refreshing to bathe the eyes in hot water.

For this a cloth, soaking wet, should be used, and if followed by a cloth dipped in cold water, the effect will be doubly beneficial.

Before going to bed at night the eyes should always be very carefully washed, not only to relax the muscles, but to remove any dust which may have been accumulated.

A weak solution of boracic water is an excellent eye tonic, as is also a few drops of camphor water.

Practical Hints.

Whitefish that is to be boiled will be greatly improved in flavour if lemon juice is rubbed on it generously before cooking.

Grated Parmesan cheese sprinkled on scrambled eggs just before they are brought to the table will greatly improve the dish.

All porcelain yellowed with iron sediment may be cleaned with muriatic acid, but this must not be allowed to touch the hands.

To test tea, put a little of it in a pan and touch a match to it. The best tea leaves very little ash; inferior tea leaves considerable.

Potatoes should be pealed as thin as possible. Turnips must be peeled thicker, taking as a guide the line that appears just inside the skin.

If water is spilled on a book do not try to dry it by the fire, as this will ruin it. Mop it as dry as possible, and then put it in the open air.

To whiten tea towels, wash them in the usual manner, then boil in good suds containing a large amount of borax; then rinse them several times.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

(By F. M. D.)

The Daily Letter Bag.

The Examiner is not often in receipt of communications from people who wish under cover of anonymity to reform the morals of the neighbourhood or to have an unfriendly dig at some person who has offended them; occasionally, however, a piece of virulent piety or malevolence reaches the office with a request from the sender that it may be made public in the daily press. Perhaps there may be some people inclined to take offence at the term "virulent piety," and if there be any such it may as well be distinctly understood that the term is not used as a contemptuous fling at religion, but as applying to those who arrogate to themselves the right to lay down the law to their fellow men in everything pertaining to matters of Sabbath observance and religious doctrine. Why people cannot be content to let the religious opinions of their law-abiding fellow citizens alone, passes an ordinary person's comprehension. We may prate as much as we please about the blessings awaiting us in the consummation of church unity, but we are no nearer to it to-day than we have ever been, insofar as regards organic cohesion and it takes no deep insight to know that it can never be realized till the final consummation of all things. The best that we can hope for is that some day, advancing through many a defile and up many a rocky pathway we shall meet at the objective towards which all are travelling. Every one wants to hasten that day, but dogmatic assertion and assumption of superiority by one body or one person is not going to help towards unification and anonymous posteard diatribes having that object in view are not calculated to do much good either.

Need of Telephone Directory for Peterborough.

All the communications we receive are not of this nature, however, and two are before us, whose contents we have great pleasure in laying before our readers.

The first one is from a gentleman, in regard to the need of a new telephone directory for Peterborough. At the present time the Peterborough directory is mixed up in the Central Ontario section and a busy man loses considerable time in hunting up the guide every time he wants to ring up a local number. The gentleman referred to suggests that the Bell Telephone Company be urged to print a separate book for this city, and the villages and towns adjacent hereto. We publish this suggestion in the hope that the Company will think favourably of it and adopt it at an early date.

Peterborough Merchants and Wages.

The second communication is from a lady who writes feelingly in regard to the "bad habit" as she terms it, of the merchants and business men of Peterborough allowing their employes to draw pay on their work throughout the week instead of compelling them to wait until pay day comes and then giving them the full sum coming to them. She says that she knows of many cases of young men and women in this town being led by this custom to draw sums at odd times through the week which they fritter away in all sorts of petty extravagances, with the result that pay day usually finds them, with very little in hand to pay for their board and lodging. Of course the matter is a difficult one for the employer. He wishes to be kind to those in his employ and to meet their desires as far as is practicable, and therefore usually places no obstacle in the way of acceding to their requests. Employes on their side are the masters of what they earn, so that the question narrows down, on the one hand, to the employers adopting a cast-iron rule to pay only on the weekly pay day and on the other hand, to the employe being imbued with enough of the grace of God to bring home sufficient money to pay for his weekly board and lodging. The man or woman who does not do so, is not honest. It has an ugly ring, that last sentence, but it is true.

POST CARD COLUMN.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to my critic in the Review of the 9th inst., I would say. In his letter he clearly points out that it was the custom of our Saviour to go to feasts at the homes of His disciples, viz., at Bethany, in Cana, and with Matthew. Yes, and with custom accords the teaching of His great Apostle Paul, when he says: "What have ye not houses to eat and drink in or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not"? Yes, they had plenty of houses to eat and drink in, as we have to-day without turning our churches into eating houses. In the same connection Paul adds "if any man hunger let him eat at home". Tell me you lovers of church suppers, ye advocates of sanctuary, high teas and banquets, did Christ or His apostles ever go to the sanctuary or exhort the people to go there to buy and eat their meals? Did they?

My critic rightly intimates that it is the business of the church to entertain strangers. Yes, she should be to the fore in this good work, but when we set aside our prayer meetings for violin and cornet socials and sorts of banquets, church operettas, concerts and sing to strangers such songs as Yankee Doodle Came to Town Riding on a Pony; Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son, Stole a Pig and Away He Ran; and Johnnie Smoker. I must say we are entertaining strangers in the House of God with a vengeance. What do you say, my patient reader?

I add that we are entertaining neither saints nor angels at such performances for they would not tolerate them; no, not for a moment. I am glad to know for a certainty that many of the people are getting tired of this thing. Not many hours ago a Presbyterian lady said to me: "You are right, Mr. Carlisle, I have baked my last pies for church suppers and I'm going to tell the preacher s the first time I see him."

The good people are slowly but surely coming to believe that tase church suppers, etc., are mor a means of grease to the church than a means of grace to the church.

Yours for reverence for holy thing

JOHN CARLISLE.

Opportunities For The Y.M.C.A. In Land Of The Rising Sun

Eastern Non-Christian Countries Should be Swayed by Spirit of Christ at the Present Stage of Their Development Along all Other Lines—What the Association Has Done.

YOUNG MEN IN THE WORK

The auxiliary work of the Y. M. C. A. as a factor in the Christianizing of the East might be said to have been the principal theme of three addresses, delivered in the Grand Opera House last night by young men, who have been and are still engaged in that endeavour. At the same time interesting facts, gained by an actual experience in Japan and China, were presented in support of the necessity of the work being carried out along even broader lines and to demonstrate the success that has already been accomplished by members of the Young Men's Christian Association who are devoting their lives to carrying the principles of this great institution in eastern lands. The opportunity that is presented to the Y. M. C. A. in this regard were emphasized and it was also shown that young men are offering themselves for the field. It remains for the people of the United States and Canada to show themselves willing and ready to do their share by materially supporting the Association with the means necessary to securely implant the Y. M. C. A. in non-Christian countries, after which they will surely provide for themselves.

Japanese Characteristics.

"Why I like the Japanese" was the subject of the address by Mr. G. S. Phelps, who spent six years in Y. M. C. A. work among that people. They are kind-hearted and hospitable, and courtesy appears to be a national characteristic. Mr. Phelps himself experienced this at all times during his stay in Japan. He was also impressed by their attitude towards their enemies. This was strikingly portrayed after the late war with Russia, when train loads of prisoners were brought into the country, having been captured on the field of battle. The manner in which they were treated by the Japanese people at the various stations where the trains stopped was a revelation. Kindness was extended by every one, instead of hoots, jeers, or even worse, as might be expected. Their love for children is also evidenced on all sides, and does not fail to create a favourable impression in the eyes of a stranger in that country. They are courageous and possess high ideals which they will remain true to at any cost. Their ambitions are the same as ours, and they are subjected to the same temptations. They are deeply interested in modern education, 97 per cent. of the boys and 94 per cent. of the girls attending the public schools. Their universities compare with the best the west boasts of, and in every regard they possess possibilities as a nation that are of the greatest. The Japanese, like the American people, and particularly Canadians, for whom they have a genuine kindly feeling. Japan is looking toward the Dominion for encouragement in moral and political respects. Mr. Phelps wished to judge the Japanese not from the difficult questions which are confronting them but from the attitude they are displaying towards these questions.

Going to Japan.

Mr. G. E. Trueman, who is returning shortly to Japan, where he spent two years in Y. M. C. A. work, spoke on why he was going back. He touched upon the moral tone of the men as a whole, stating that they measure up to a very low standard. What is greatly needed is a place for clean recreation, a place that will be a moral uplift to the men and will impress them with the ideals of purity, temperance and morality that hold sway in this country. The Y. M. C. A. work in Japan has surpassed all expectations and with greater assistance from the business men more young men can be sent.

Mr. E. T. Coulton.

The last speaker, Mr. E. T. Coulton, who is in close touch with the foreign department of the Y.M.C.A. of North America pointed out the opportunity, even the obligation that rests upon the people of the West in regard to spreading Christianity among them at this particular stage of the development of the races under the rising sun. In every direction they are keeping pace with the west and are acquiring our civilization in its fullest measure. It is, therefore, particularly necessary that they be brought to know Christ and that their advancement in all directions shall be swayed by Christianity. At present they are fighting a losing batle against two forces for evil that are locking arms against them. They have to combat the evils that have been strongly entrenched as the result of their old civilization. They have to meet the evils of the west that have been brought to the east in even viler forms and the western spirit of commercialism is likewise spreading its influence among the people. Mr. Coulton left no doubt as to the extent of the vice and crime that is stalking in the cities of the east and referred especially to Shanghai, one of China's seaports, leading all other ports in the world last year in point of tonnage. In conclusion he gave a number of reasons why the Y. M. C. A. should be established in the East, and asked for material encouragement from those who are unable to give themselves up to the work.

Ald. Turner ably filled the position of chairman. During the evening Miss Pringle contributed a vocal solo.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A little grated cheese improves chicken soup.

If a wire clothes line is used, it should be painted.

Boiled meat should always be left in its own liquor to cool.

If lemons are peeled before squeezing, more juice may be had.

Seeded raisins, cut in half, will help an apple and nut salad.

In making a French dressing, use twice as much oil as vinegar.

Putting vegetables to cook in too hot water destroys their flavour.

A bay leaf added to a plain tomato soup will give it a pleasant flavour.

Iron napkins first on the wrong side, and then on the right, until perfectly dry.

Chamois leather should frequently be washed if silver is to be kept bright with it.

Rubbing spirits of camphor on the lips morning and night will give relief from cold sores.

Laces, embroideries, and all kinds of braided work are best ironed over a Turkish towel.

When frying mush dip the slices first in white of egg. This will make the mush crisp.

Snap fasteners cut from old gloves may be successfully applied to the plackets of skirts.

If the bottom of a kettle is slightly greased in making custards, the mixture will not stick.

A waxed floor should never be washed with soap and water except just before rewaxing.

Avoid use of strong soaps and soap powders in washing fine china on which there is gilt decoration.

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed in clear water with pure castile soap to make them look like new.

Hot chocolate, unsweetened wafers, and crystallized prunes form a dainty course for luncheon or supper.

Always line a cake pan with medium weight yellow paper. Grease the paper, heat the pan, except the edges.

Leather-covered furniture can be cleaned with pure milk rubbed on with a piece of flannel. Rub gently until dry.

Pots and pans to which foodstuffs cling will soak much more effectively if filled with cold water than if hot is used.

If silk ties or waists are wanted stiff, iron them while quite damp; if they are wanted soft and silky, iron when almost dry.

AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Llwyd of Trinity University Will Preach To-morrow.

The preacher at St. John's both morning and evening to-morrow will be Rev. Dr. Llwyd, who is rapidly taking his position as one of our leading public men. The son of the late Archdeacon Llwyd, of Huntsville, he has been for years a distinguished clergyman of the American church, being rector of St. Paul's, Seattle, whence his influence extended along the Pacific slope. Dr. Llwyd was chosen last year as Vice Provost of Trinity. He preached last month before Queen's University and has just been selected by the officers of the Queen's Own Rifles to accompany the regiment to England this summer as chaplain.

HOW CROUP IS DREADED

If there is any warning use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and prevent the terrible struggle of the little one for breath. If you know nothing of it till the struggle comes, cause the child to vomit and then use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine frequently in small doses to prevent repeated attacks. This great medicine is wonderfully effective in curing croup and bronchitis.

LENTEN LECTURE

Rev. E. A. Pearson's Address at St Luke's Was Appreciated.

The Friday Lenten lecture was given last night by Rev. E. A. Pearson on his travels through Italy. The Sunday School room was crowded and a most instructive and interesting lecture was listened to with great attention. Mr. Pearson received a hearty vote of thanks for his kindness in giving the lecture.

BIRTHS.

JONES—At 114 Stewart street, Peterborough, on March 7th, 1910, the wife of Mr. W. A. Jones, of a son.

SLEEP WAS IMPOSSIBLE

ALMOST DRIVEN TO DESPAIR UNTIL CURED WITH USE OF

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

No symptom of nervous prostration is more to be dreaded than the inability to sleep. Man can exist for considerable time without food, but without sleep, and the restoration which it brings, he soon becomes a mental and physical wreck.

When you cannot sleep and rest look to the nervous system and remember that lasting cure can only be obtained from such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which naturally and gradually restores the exhausted nerves to health and vigour.

Mr. Wm. Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes: "My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and we had two of the best doctors we could get, but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine for I believe my wife owes her life to its use."

Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of so much rich, red blood and is therefore certain to do you good.

LADIES WHO HAVE HELPED IN A WORTHY CHARITY

Clothing Has Been Provided for no Less Than Sixty Children During Last Year.

THE WORK CONTINUES

At the last annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society a special committee was appointed to undertake the work of providing clothing for the children who come into the shelter. Some idea of what this involves may be gained when it is remembered that last year nearly sixty children passed through the Society's hands, all of whom came in in a destitute condition and had to be provided wih clothing and sent out to their foster homes in some kind of comfort. To do this has for years been one of the Society's great burdens. The new Committee, determined to try to enlist the sympathy of the women of all the Protestant churches and an appeal was made to the ladies' societies of each church to give one afternoon to the making of the necessary clothing. The answer proved to be most hearty and generous, and the members of the Committee desire to acknowledge their appreciation of the manner in which this response was made. The Ladies' Aid Societies of the following churches gave each an afternoon to help the good work: Knox, All Saints', Charlotte Street, St. Paul's, St. Luke's, St. Andrew's, and Mark Street, and the King's Daughters. In addition the George Street Sewing Circle and the Girls' Guild of St. John, did sewing at their meetings.

Many friends of the Society have done much sewing at their homes, while others have made generous gifts of clothing, bedding and material. The Committee gratefully acknowledges the assistance in these ways of Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Miss Laidlaw, Mrs. Monroe, Mrs. W. M. Roger, Mrs. Logan, Mrs. Yokome, Mrs. H. Morgan, Mrs. Mowat, Mrs. Richard Hall. Mrs. Jas. Wood, Mrs. Conway, Thos. Barrie & Co., Mrs. Mulholland, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Church, Mrs. Crane, Miss Davies Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Menzies, Mrs. Greer, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Hogan, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Melville, Mrs. Wolstenholm, Mrs. R. J. McWilliams, Mrs. Adam Hall, Mrs. R. G. Kingan, Mrs. G. H. Thompson, Mrs. A. P. McLean, Mrs. R. D. Hamilton, Miss Hall, Mrs. W. G. Ferguson, Mrs. Heal, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. G. W. Johnston, Mrs. Bourne, Mrs. Rawlings, Mrs. Wright, Miss Ferguson, Mrs. Robert Hall, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Pearse, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Mrs. R. S. Davidson, St. Aiden's church, Young's Point, and the Methodist church, Lakefield. The Sewing Circle of George Street Church sent a large and most welcome contribution of clothing as did also Charlotte Street and Park Street. Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid also contributed $10.00 to the fund to pay for material which the Committee undertook to raise, gifts to which have been already acknowledged.

The work which has now been done has made sufficient provision for the children now in the shelter, but with new children coming in there is constant need for more sewing. It has therefore been decided to set aside the first Thursday afternoon in every month for sewing at the Shelter to which everybody who is free to do so is invited to come. A little help from many hands will ensure a provision for these unfortunate children, which will help to give them a new start.

MARGARET KNOLLY

Slender Margaret Knolly, now, if you please. The fascinating leading lady of the Bijou, now more fascinating than ever, astonished all her friends on Broadway the other day by presenting to their admiring gaze a svelt and willowy form in place of the plump, not to say fat, outlines with which she gaily sailed away to new triumphs and foreign shores last January. After a good deal of diplomatic cross-examination from interested fat acquaintances the secret was cautiously whispered to a few dear friends, with the result that everybody knows it now. It was not exercise, nor fasting, nor sea air, nor worry about her new venture that had brought about this wonderful willowy change in the charming Margaret; no, none of these; nothing but a simple mixture which all good druggists are familiar with and can supply at small cost, to wit: One-half ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, 4 3-4 ounces Peppermint Water. "Grown folks need a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime," explained the now slender Margaret. "It is simply wonderful. It takes off the fat quickly, as much as a pound a day, and keeps it off. You can eat what you like, too, In that respect it is unlike anything of the kind I ever heard of, and besides it has another splendid feature—it is entirely harmless, and will not cause wrinkles. I think it is about as essential a toilet article for the woman who is fat and wants to get thinner as face powder. In order to get the best results, however, you should buy the Marmola in the original package and mix it with the other ingredients after you get home."

THE GROWING HIGH PRICES OF FOOD

The Interview Given by Mr. F. W. Thompson, Managing Director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, Reviewed by Mr. William C. Edgar, Editor of the Leading Milling Journal of the World, viz., The "Northwestern Miller" of Minneapolis.

The Effect of the Discussion Will be Far-Reaching and Will be a Mighty Factor in Educating the Consuming Public in the Matter of Living Well and Yet Cheaply.

BREAD, THE BEST AND CHEAPEST FOOD.

In an interview published originally in a Montreal paper and reprinted in this issue of the Northwestern Miller, Mr. F. W. Thompson, managing director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, makes a strong statement in behalf of bread, when considering the much discussed topic of the advanced cost of living. It is rather convincing proof that this increased expense is due more to luxurious habits than to necessity when bread remains, as it is, a comparatively neglected article of diet. If people actually felt the pinch of the increase, they would eat more bread and less meat and other expensive foods.

As Mr. Thompson points out, the average family spends more in reading matter and amusements in two months than its entire expense for bread in a whole year; the butter bill is actually double that of bread, and the milk expense nearly three times as much. Mr. Thompson places the average per capita expenditure for bread in Canada at less than three cents a day.

Man can actually live by bread alone, if he really wants to do so. The government reports prove conclusively its nutritive value. It is the healthiest, cheapest and best food in the market, yet while the public is howling over the increased cost of living and Congress is investigating the cause; while we charge the condition to trusts, to the tariff, to the increased production of gold and to every other imaginable cause that we can think of, we turn stubbornly away from the best and cheapest food, because we have allowed ourselves to grow luxurious in choosing what we eat. We actually scorn bread, not because it is unappetizing but because it is so cheap as to escape serious consideration.

Both bakers and millers could vastly increase the consumption of their output at this very opportune time by calling the attention of the consuming public to the simple, sound merits of bread as an article of diet. People have overlooked the obvious advantage, both to purse and stomach, of eating more bread, in their foolish devotion to more expensive foods. They need to be reminded of the very easy method of reducing the cost of living which is within the grasp of every one. By eating more bread and cultivating a taste for this most wholesome and nutritious food, they can very materially reduce their expenses without neglecting in the slightest a strength and muscle producing diet.

The public really does not know how cheap and how good bread is compared to the other foods to which they have turned in their scorn of simplicity. It needs enlightenment and education, and the bakers and millers can individually do the world and themselves great service by exploiting in every way possible the strong and economic position in which bread stands compared to any other food now offered.

It is folly to contend that a man is forced to live expensively, while the consumption of bread is so small that three cents a day represents the average expenditure per capita. Life, wholesome, vigorous, effective life can be entirely sustained, if need be, at an expenditure of only six cents a day for bread. Moreover, people would be infinitely better off, mentally, morally, physically and financially, if they ate more bread and less of other foods.

There are tables which graphically show the difference between the cost of bread and other commodities which the public consumes. These should be placed before the people without unnecessary comment. They tell the true and simple story so plainly that even the most ignorant can understand their meaning. Millers and bakers should, individually and collectively, use their utmost endeavors to get these facts before the public.

In such a showing there lies the answer to the claim of increased cost of living, that is, necessary increase. If a man will, he can emancipate himself entirely from the thraldom of high prices which now exhausts his endeavor. He can do so by the simple expedient of turning to the staff of life, never purer, better or comparatively cheaper than it is to-day, and avoiding foods which are as unnecessary to the proper maintenance of healthy vigor as they are out of proportion, in their cost, as strength and muscle producers. It is the province of the millers and bakers to call back the people to their old allegiance to bread as a sure protection against unnecessary extravagance in living.

The following table was compiled by the United States Government and issued as Farmers Bulletin No. 142. Note the great difference in food value in ten cents worth of different articles of diet—and see how ten cents worth of wheat flour has twenty times the food value of ten cents worth of eggs. The usual way of comparison is by the pound, but the better way is to compare the same money value.

London, Ont., March 12.—An interesting case came up yesterday morning in the Police Court, when ex-Ald. Dr. H. A. Stevenson was charged with letting his dog go unmuzzled. The doctor showed that the dog had been muzzled ever since the regulation came in force, that three times the animal's muzzle had been stolen, and in the present case the dog was away from the house only two or three minutes when captured. However, Mayor Beattie, acting for Magistrate Love, who is quite ill, was obdurate, and the doctor was fined. He intends taking the matter to a higher court.

RAILWAY WORK DURING 1909

Mr. Graham Promises Haughton Lennox That Allegations of Graft Will Be Carefully Looked Into — Mr. Borden Sees Robbery In Transcontinental Railway Affairs —House Has Day of Scandal.

Ottawa, March 12.—Before the House of Commons settled down to supply on the railway estimates yesterday, Haughton Lennox (South Simcoe) made serious charges regarding a transaction of which Hon. G. P. Graham and Hon. A. B. Aylesworth will require explanations from two Government agents.

According to a statement by Mr. Lennox, certain lands in East Peterboro were alleged to have been flooded by the building of some dams in connection with the Trent Valley Canal.

Complaints were laid before the Government by owners of these lands, and an investigation and valuation was ordered.

The valuator was a surveyor by name of Dixon, and L. F. Clarry, a former Liberal candidate for the Legislature, was appointed agent of the Justice Department to look after the interests of the Government.

A number of the land owners were paid apparently, on a basis of $10 an acre, but some have not been paid. It is stated, that some of the claims which have not been recognized are genuine.

In support of these charges Mr. Lanox produced a letter said to have been written by Mr. Clarry to a farmer, urging him to influence his brother, who was a claimant, to hang out for twelve or fifteen acres, and also a document alleged to have been sent out by Mr. McClarry soliciting business. Mr. Lennox further stated that Mr. Henry Humphries, a Liberal farmer, had complained of being held up by Mr. Clarry for 15 per cent. commission, with a threat that if he did not pay he would get no compensation.

Hon. Mr. Graham said that if any agent of the Department had been acting improperly, he could not think of allowing him to act for the Department. The Department would institute an enquiry.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth said he was inclined to doubt the truth of the statement. Clarry was in good standing as a lawyer. However, he would be called upon for an explanation, and if things were not right, he would get no more work from the Justice Department.

"It is certain there has been gross negligence or incompetence in the beginning, or else the country is being robbed of millions of dollars."

This strong statement was made by R. L. Borden in the Commons relative to expenditures on the National Transcontinental Railway.

On the vote for the expenditure for the next fiscal year being taken up, the Minister of Railways, at the request of Mr. Borden, gave statistics as to the progress of construction, etc., up to the end of 1909. The total expenditure up to that date, he said, had been $67,899,697. The estimated cost per mile still remained at the figures given in the House in 1908, viz., $63,500.

The number of miles graded was 1,062, and the number of miles of track laid was 727. Of the track mileage 621 miles were the main line and 106 on sidings.

The estimated cost of the construction of the prairie section still stood at $33,000 per mile. The estimated cost of the mountain section per mile had not been arrived at.

Mr. Graham said the estimates were not so close as they should be. Still, it was difficult to make accurate estimates from surface indications. The same sort of thing occurred on all railways, but the public did not hear of them.

Samuel Barker (Hamilton) said that any board of directors of a railway would dismiss its whole engineering staff if it made such errors in its estimates.

Haughton Lennox said the commission, which had been named to study the classification, had been blocking things for two years.

The Minister gave figures to show that on certain contracts the estimates of common excavation were 1,841,152 cubic yards, whereas with 95 per cent. of the work done, common excavation was only 520,726 cubic yards.

Mr. Borden described these figures as astonishing. He had no personal knowledge of the matter, and did not want to make charges, but it looked as though something was wrong.

Mr. Graham denied that the board was doing no work. The board had commenced the work, and it would be continued as soon as the snow left the ground.

There was another bit of a breeze in the House of Commons at the opening of the sitting yesterday afternoon when R. L. Borden, Opposition leader, pointed out an irregularity in connection with the reporting of the proceedings of the Lumsden investigation, which he suggested might have been committed purposely.

E. M. MacDonald of Pictou, who has been the active member of that committee, lost his temper during the debate which ensued, and was sternly called to order by the Speaker, who ordered him to sit down.

Mr. Borden drew attention to an "extraordinary mistake," which had been made by the chairman of the investigation committee. A motion had been made by Haughton Lennox, and agreed to, that the proceedings should be printed and "reported to the House from day to day." In the printed report, the words "reported to the House" had been omitted.

Victor Geoffrion, the chairman, said the report had been printed as prepared by the committee, was submitted to the committee and nobody objected.

Mr. Borden pointed out that the proceedings had not been reported to the House from day to day, as agreed upon, and he thought there must be some connection between the two incidents.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said some error might have occurred, as sometimes happened.

Mr. MacDonald remarked that a chairman of a committee did not report. If Mr. Borden's friends would attend the committee, they could have had this corrected.

Mr. Borden retorted that this was not a matter for the committee, but for the House.

Mr. MacDonald said Mr. Borden might have taken the trouble to investigate the matter.

Mr. Borden replied warmly that he had investigated the matter, when he discovered that the recommendation of the committee had been altered.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "It looks like a clerical error."

Mr. Borden, however, insisted that the proceedings should have been reported from day to day, and the recommendation this should be done had been altered. However, Mr. MacDonald seemed to give a clue.

Mr. MacDonald rose, but the Speaker ruled that he could not continue the discussion. He remained standing, whereupon the Speaker intimated that when the Speaker rose, a member must be seated.

Mr. MacDonald then rose to a point of order. He said that the leader of the Opposition had made a personal reference to him, and he had a right to reply. He objected to Mr. Borden's being allowed to make three speeches and himself only one.

The bill for the construction of a canal from Lake Superior to Lake Winnipeg, over which Janies Conmee, M.P., the committee, and the Ontario Government have had so much trouble recently, was again before the railway committee yesterday morning, and was temporarily disposed of by being referred to a sub-committee to inquire into the legality of the bill and the desirability of the project.

The sub-committee consist of Messrs. Nesbitt, Conmee, Boyce, Haggart and Congdon.

Lumsden and His Staff.

Ottawa, March 12.—H. D. Lumsden, former chief engineer of the National Transcontinental Commission, was cross-examined yesterday morning by R. C. Smith, K.C., in regard to his declaration that he had lost confidence in his engineering staff, and that was why he had resigned.

He admitted that, as chief engineer, he was fully responsible for his staff. The engineers were all appointed and dismissed, where dismissals took place, on his recommendation, and he was never interfered with by the commissioners in that regard.

He could not make his charges more definite nor could he name the engineers in whom he had lost confidence.

Asked as to what he based his loss of confidence on, Mr. Lumsden said that his confidence was weakened to a certain extent as to the manner in which they were carrying out his instructions. He could not, however, give any definite illustration.

"The only difference we had was that their classification did not agree with what I thought it should have been," he said.

Asked if he could give any illustration of where ordinary earth was classed as rock, he said he remembered one case on the Wabana River where he saw a cutting plowed, yet it was afterwards charged as loose rock.

The committee adjourned until Tuesday morning.

Farmer's Hard Luck.

Woodstock, March 12.—James Murray left on Wednesday for the north west, taking six horses, three head of cattle and other stock, intending to start farming.

While near Barrie yesterday morning, the car in which his stock were riding, took fire, from an upturned lantern, and he had a narrow escape from death. All the stock, together with a fur-lined overcoat containing $60, was completely destroyed.

Long Lease to C.P.R.

Ottawa, March 12.—An application will be made on behalf of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway Co to the Railway Commissioners for Canada for a recommendation to the Governor-in-Council for the sanction of a lease of the railway of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway Co to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co for a term of 999 years.

Killed While Photographing Train.

Cobalt, Ont., March 12.—Geo. Prentice, night clerk at the Matabanick Hotel, Haileybury, was instantly killed at the Haileybury Station. He was struck by the incoming Cobalt special while taking a photograph of the train rounding the curve. He was 30 years of age and leaves a wife and two children in England.

Six Years and Big Fine.

Chicago, March 12.—Summary action was taken yesterday by Judge K. M. Landis, in the United States District Court, in sentencing violators of the federal laws regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine.

The court fixed the punishment of Samuel Driesbach, who pleaded guilty, at a fine of $15,000 and six years imprisonment in the United States prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kas.

To Daniel Bortz who also pleaded guilty the court meted out an eighteen months term in the house of correction in this city.

Wm. Broadwell who was sentenced some days ago must meet like punishment with Driesbach.

Orange Grand Lodge.

St. Catharines, March 12.—It was nearly five o'clock yesterday morning when the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario West concluded business. Barrie was chosen for the next place of meeting and these officers were elected:—Grand master, Harry Lovelock; deputy grand master, Fred Dane, Toronto; junior deputy grand master, Dr. J. J. Williams, Woodstock; grand chaplain, Rev. John Coburn, Toronto; grand treasurer, John Hewitt, Toronto; grand secretary, W. M. Fitzgerald; grand lecturer, J. J. D. Banting, Cookstown; grand director of ceremonies, A. H. Jennings, North Toronto; deputy grand secretary, William Cook, Meaford; grand auditors: A. W. Wright, Toronto, and W. T. Taylor, Aurora.

The deputy grand chaplains elected were:—Rev. J. R. Bell, Laurel; Rev. C. H. Buckland, Listowell; Rev. J. P. McInnes, Cedarville; Rev. J. C. Perry, Toronto; Rev. J. A. Robinson, Markdale; Rev. Wm. Walsh, Brampton; Rev. Canon Dixon, Kingston; Rev. G. G. Dryer, Beaton; Rev. W. H. Hartley, Blyth; Rev. J. J. Haylock, Leamington; Rev. F. E. Howitt, Hamilton; Rev. E. W. Hughes, Tilsonburg; Rec. E. C. Laker, Toronto; Rev. T. R. White, Laurel; Rev. R. L. Wilson, Staffa; Rev. Dr. Walter Witten, Barrie; Rev. G. Kain, Sarnia; Rev. J. S. Willoughby, Georgetown; Rev. H. A. Fish, Kleinburg; Rev. J. S. Carrie, Rothsay.

It was decided after a long discussion, to do away with organizers. This was the outcome of dissatisfaction with the way the work has been carried on, the organizers being under direction of the executive, whereas the delegates claimed they should work in districts under the guidance of county and district masters. A new resolution to this effect was finally submitted and carried.

Palpitation of the Heart.

One of the first danger signals that announce something wrong with the heart is the irregular or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or, again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin, and visable pulsations of the arteries.

There may also be experienced a smothering sensation, gasping for breath, and feeling as though about to die.

In all such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart and restoring it to its normal beat, is beyond all question marvellous, as our thousands of testimonials will show.

Mrs. Martha Mason, Marlbank, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

To Amend Liquor Act

Although the New Clauses In the Liquor Act Are Not Fully Drafted, Yet the Bill Is Put Through Its First Reading to Help It Along In the Dying Hours of the Legislative Session—Magistrates' Fees.

Toronto, March 12.—One of the most important bills of the present Legislature, the long-looked-for amendment to the Liquor License Act, was introduced by Hon. W. J. Hanna yesterday afternoon, in the dying hours of the session. The bill was in blank, being brought in, as Mr. Hanna explained afterward, merely to get the bill on its way.

"We have not definitely decided just what it will include when it comes back from the printers," he said. "But different propositions have been urged, and at our next Cabinet Council it will be decided which we will adopt."

Among the changes most generally urged was one to include Christmas Day in the days on which liquor may not be sold.

Again, cases had arisen in the province on recounts, where it was brought out that certain persons had voted who were not legally entitled to do so. What was to be done in such cases was not clear, though most of the judges held that the vote should be subtracted from the majority, though, as he pointed out, the man in question might have voted against the bylaw.

Where local option had failed to secure a 60 per cent. vote, but had got over 50 per cent., it was proposed to allow the municipality to take another vote in a year's time. "This has been considered," said Mr. Hanna, "but, like the others, nothing definite has been decided."

Regarding corrupt practices in local option contests a short amendment will be introduced making the section of the municipal act, which at present applies only to votes on money bylaws, applicable.

Another bill was introduced by Mr. Hanna, to bring into operation the "Juvenile Delinquents' Act" of the Dominion of Canada, passed in 1908.

Under the provisions of the new act introduced by Hon. Mr. Reaume to amend the game laws, the duck season will be from Sept. 15 to Dec. 15, instead of from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, as previously, in spite of the protest of J. D. McDougal (East Ottawa), who thought Ontario sportsmen might just as well shoot the ducks themselves instead of protecting them for Americans to bag when the birds migrated.

The commencement of the season for quail was changed from Sept. 1 to Sept. 15.

Capercailzie were given six years more lease of life, and will be protected till 1915.

Mink, which have not been protected heretofore, will in future have the same close season as muskrat.

Hunters will be allowed to shoot only one deer in a season, instead of two.

Non-residents hunting and trapping licenses are placed at $10.

On the understanding that full discussion will be allowed when the measures come to committee on Monday, two bills of Hon. Adam Beck, "Respecting certain Municipal Bylaws and Agreements," and "Respecting the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario," and a bill of Sir James Whitney "To amend the Department of Education Act," were allowed to pass their second reading without discussion.

Hon. J. J. Foy's bill respecting fees of public officers, was amended in committee by allowing local registrars to retain to their personal use their net income up to $2,500. Over this sum an income from $2,500 to $3,000 they will hand over to the Government 10 per cent.; on income from $3,000 to $3,500, 20 per cent.; on income from $3,500 to $4,000, 30 per cent. The salaries of sheriffs are not touched by the bill.

RUTHERFORD SILENT.

Says He Will Not Make Statement Till the Proper Time.

Edmonton, March 12.—For ten minutes yesterday the fate of the Rutherford Government hung in the balance. The crisis was precipitated by Riley, seconded by Boyle, moving a vote of lack of confidence in the Government, the vote being defeated by a vote of 20 to 17.

Rutherford, Cross, Marshall and Lessard occupied treasury benches, while Buchanan occupied a seat as private member, and voted against the Government.

Cross moved a second reading of a bill respecting towns, and following was moved by Riley "That this bill be given the six months' hoist, as this Legislature has no further confidence in the Government."

Outside of the regular number of insurgents, Buchanan and McKenney switched from the Government ranks. Smith, of Camrose, gave notice of motion that the Government stay all work on the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway until a commission, entirely free from politics, was appointed.

When Premier Rutherford moved the adjournment until Monday, R. B. Bennett immediately demanded an explanation. He enquired if the Attorney-General had resigned, and had then returned to the Government, also had the Minister without portfolio, Buchanan, resigned, as was evident since he had voted against the Government on division? The Prime Minister, he said, was either trying to befuddle members or else he was incompetent.

Rutherford, in reply, stated that he had accepted no resignations.

Bennett—"Has Buchanan resigned? If not, why his vote against the Government?"

Rutherford—"I will make a statement when the proper time arrives."

A local paper declares that Thursday night nineteen members of the Government signed a round robin to the Lieutenant-Governor, asking that he call on Cross to form a Ministry. It is also reported that a hotelkeeper up country has arrived here and has hinted that Boyle would e acceptable to the license-holders as Attorney-General.

THE HARP CAME BACK

Incident In the Career of an Old Time Opera Manager.

A SURPRISE FOR MARETZEK.

It Came at a Time When Max Was Broke and the Sheriff Had Levied Upon All His Stage Properties—Mme. Maretzek's Thanks to the Carpenter.

In the old days in New York city, before there was a Metropolitan or a Manhattan Opera House and when the center of the theatrical world was around Fourteenth street, Max Maretzek and Strakosch were prominent at the old Academy of Music. There was a keen rivalry between them. Strakosch had Nilsson, and Maretzek was exploiting Di Murska.

By some error of dates both were booked for New York at the same time. Strakosch was at the Academy and Maretzek, having closed a poor season elsewhere, had halted in New York before going to Philadelphia and secured a week at the Lyceum theater on Fourteenth street. There were strong bills at both places. Each manager had his friends, and the billposters had a busy time of it. A round of bills for one company was no sooner posted than the rival billposter covered up the poster with the rival company's sheets.

At last, for the matinee on Saturday, bills at both houses were suddenly changed, every vacant fence place plastered over quickly, and with a pelting storm in the morning the managers began to put out "paper" to fill the houses. Alfred Joel was the business man for Maretzek and an adept at "papering" when necessary. With a house packed from parquet to gallery Joel had counted the boxes, found only $100 in the house and announced it to Max when the curtain fell between the acts.

This was serious to Max. The ever ready money lender who had "put up for him" had a lien on the box office, a sheriff's officer was in waiting on the stage, and it was a question of replevin before the properties and costumes could be liberated to follow the company to Philadelphia early next morning.

"Well, Alfred," quietly said Max, "I guess I'm used to trouble. But there is a good, big house anyway!" Then, turning to his wife, who was the harpist of the orchestra, he clasped both her hands, kissed her and remarked: "Let your fingers do their best. I want to hear you play. It does my heart good, you know, even when there's trouble."

There was hustling after the performance. Legal talent was at a premium, creditors were obdurate, everything that was supposed to be Maretzek's was temporarily in "hock," and Mme. Maretzek in tears, with longing looks at the harp she valued.

The scene of negotiations was transferred to the greenroom just as the officers making the levy were searching for more, and when their backs were turned the old stage carpenter hurried Mme. Maretzek away, then called her back again five minutes after and pointed to the orchestra.

The harp had disappeared. Clearing out everything on Sunday morning, while the boxes of properties were being taken away, Max and his wife stood in the center of the darkened stage. Both were crying. The instrument they valued most had been taken from them. Other things had been liberated, but no harp, and with a scene of grief that no others than themselves could have appreciated they were silent.

Then Old Man Guernsey stood between them and waved his hand above them into space. There were a creaking of pulley wheels, an injunction from the carpenter to "look out for your heads," and, lowered from above, came Mme. Maretzek's harp, landing on the stage between them.

"Now you've got it again, get it away quick!" said Guernsey. "Stop crying and be thankful. That's all."

He moved off without waiting for thanks, and a pathetic scene with Max and his wife closed the incident. To them the harp was as a part of themselves. To lose it was more than a misfortune, and in a broken voice the lady called the carpenter back to her.

"Please let the harp thank you," said she, "and listen. It will speak with my hands on this Sunday morning."

She placed herself beside it, seated on a box, and, with a smile that chased away tears, gave for a moment or two, as only she could give it, the air of the doxology, "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow."—New York Times.

Breathing of Insects.

Insects generally breathe through special pores in various parts of their bodies, and if these pores are closed by oil they are suffocated. Any one may test this by dropping sweet oil on the thorax or back of a wasp. It very soon dies. For this reason oil has been found one of the best things to use for the destruction of insects.

What the Doctor Did.

Gustave Ullyatt has a little daughter who hasn't been well recently. The other day a physician was called to the Ullyatt home to see her. He examined the child with the aid of a stethescope. When her father came home that evening he asked what the doctor had said.

"Nothin'," replied the little girl.

"What did he do?" asked Mr. Ullyatt.

"He jist telephoned me all over," was the child's reply.—Denver Post.

My pal and I both loved a maid
Up in the Klondike region.
We didn't have a cinch—indeed,

But Jim and I both swore that we

For, though she wasn't much on face,
She had a mint of dust.

The fates they smiled on my pal Jim.
They frowned on me, alack!
For he won both the girl and dust.
I only got the sack.

A year ago a manufacturer hired a boy. For months there was nothing noticeable about the boy except that he never took his eyes off the machine he was running. A few weeks ago the manufacturer looked up from his work to see the boy standing beside his desk.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"Want me pay raised."

"What are you getting?"

"Free dollars a week."

"Well, how much do you think you are worth?"

"Four dollars."

"You think so, do you?"

"Yes, sir, an' I've been t'inkin' so for t'ree weeks, but I've been so blamed busy I ain't had time to speak to you about it."

The boy got the raise.—Success.

PRE-EASTER SALE of . . . CARPETS

BEGINNING TUESDAY, MARCH 15th

The Golden Lion's Carpet Department is to be very strong this season. New shipments hurrying in make it imperative that extra room must be obtained for the latest Spring patterns, which, months ago, were passed upon by our buyer.

Present Stocks of Floor Coverings must, therefore, melt away quickly. Although a little in advance of the season, we have planned for a Before-Easter Price-Pruning, Stock-Reducing

5 DAYS' CARPET SALE, Commencing Tuesday, Mar. 15

The advantage will be all in favour of early buyers, who, we intend, shall fully realize the exceptional nature of this first fling of Spring from our Carpet floor. The knife has been sunk deeply into the following lines:

STRONG TRIBUTE PAID TO PETERBORO' ARTIST

A marble Mercury of hers was purchased by the Ontario Provincial Government, and now graces the Parliamentary buildings in Toronto. With characteristic tact Miss Wallis has remembered her native town and has presented it with the "maquette" or original design of this Mercury.

At present Miss Wallis is at work on what many believe will be her chef d'oeuvre. It is a marble group, a mother holding up a child whose tiny hands reach up further as if groping for the possibilities of the infinite beyond. She proposes to call it "Root and Flower"—the mother being regarded as the root of the child, just as the root is the mother of the flower.

This is Miss Wallis' record of achievement, so far. The future lies before her full of promise. She has adopted a branch of art in which financial success is very coy indeed. Sculpture is, above all others, a public art. To live, the maker of statues has to secure orders for monumental statues chiefly. Everyone buys pictures. Few buy statuary. How runs "La Ballade du Povre Esculteur" in Pailleron's 'Cabotins?' "

"Des statues, le bourgeois n'en veut pas,
Rapport a son plafond, qu'est trop bas.
I'fraudrait leur couper les mains et les pieds
Pour en faire des presse-papiers."

HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. John George, late baggage master at the Grand Trunk station, who left a few days ago for his new home in Millbrook, narrowly escaped injury from the explosion of his kitchen range. The exact details of the affair are not known.

Molasses In Plug Tobacco

Sticky Substance Not the Weed, Burns The Smoker's Tongue—How Cut Plug is Made.

(New York Sun.)

"Say, I'll have to drop this brand of smoking. It nearly burns the tongue off me. What's the matter with it?" said the smoker.

"It's been made up with a little bit too much molasses," said the tobacconist. "The tobacco intended for winter sale always has a little more molasses in it than summer tobacco.

"They've several reasons for adding molasses to tobacco," he continued, coming back to the end of the counter. "In the first place, if the leaf wasn't made just the least bit sticky it would be apt to crumble to a very fine powder that would choke up your pipe, especially in winter, when tobacco gets extremely dry.

"So when they add a little molasses to the cut leaf they make a thin, sticky film over it. This keeps the tobacco in good shape and the molasses locks the nicotine in the body of the leaf.

"Nicotine, you know, will evaporate and be lost if the tobacco is exposed long enough. Then when the nicotine is gone you might as well smoke the cabbage leaf that comic papers talk so much about for all the satisfaction you get.

"Plug tobacco is simply leaf glued together with molasses and then pressed into a block. If you will take a plug outside somewhere and then come back after a week or two to look at it you'll see a pile of square cut leaves, perhaps five or six inches high. This is because the tobacco will have lost its molasses glue, not from the molasses having been washed off the leaf, but from its having fermented into vinegar.

"The film of molasses keeps the leaf moist and pliable. This is because of the sugar crystals in it. If you've ever noticed salt in wet weather you'll often have seen how it gathered in the wet. The sugar crystals act exactly like the crystals of salt, but to a less degree.

"When you fellows that smoke pipes say that tobacco burns your tongue you're away off. The tobacco hasn't a thing to do with it, and your tongue isn't being burnt, it's being scalded."

"From the moisture in the tobacco?" asked the customer.

"Partly," said the tobacconist, 'but mostly from moisture you would not think was in the tobacco. There's a great deal of water in the little sugar crystals over and above what you'd expect they might collect from the air.

"When you melt this sugar in your pipe each crystal dissolves first in a little pool of water, and makes material for steam, in addition to the free water in the tobacco that you can feel with your fingers.

"This hot steam makes a regular steam heating system between the bowl of your pipe and your tongue, and while you think your tongue is being burnt you're actually getting it parboiled."

"Has all tobacco molasses in it?" the customer asked.

"No," said the tobacconist. "The very cheap tobacco smoked by the natives of Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico and those countries, in the form of cigarettes, hasn't any molasses in it. Molasses isn't needed once the manufacturers have their leaf made up in the form of cigarettes, because they use a very heavy paper cyclinder, with the ends tucked in. This keeps the leaf from falling out, even if it is crushed a little through the thick paper.

"You'll get twenty-five of those cigarettes for about two cents. The workingmen smoke them all the time because they're too lazy even to roll their own cigarettes. The coolest pipe smoke you ever had will be yours if you'll only go to the bother of buying a few bunches of those cigarettes and emptying the tobacco into a jar."

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of Dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Cantharides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Growers.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

It is the original and only genuine scalp germicide manufactured.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

GEO. SPOTTON, PRESIDENT — J. A. MACRAE, PRINCIPAL

ROOSEVELT NEARING HOME.

Ex-President Is Awaited by Family and Big Crowds at Khartoum.

Khartoum, Egypt, March 14.—Khartoum is now in gala attire, awaiting the coming of Theodore Roosevelt, who, with the other members of the hunting and scientific expedition, is aboard the steamer Dal, on the last leg of the journey to this city. The steamer is expected to arrive here this afternoon, but an unusually strong northern gale is blowing, which is taking up heavy waves in the river, and it is possible that the coming of the party will be somewhat delayed. His wife and daughter will meet him here.

Roosevelt, it is learned from correspondents who have met him up the river, is particularly glad to learn that the policies advocated by him are marching on the minds of the people. He scouts all talk that he may stand for governor of New York, mayor, Senator or anything else.

He says, however, that the ensuing years will see no idleness on his part. He has already planned work for himself years ahead.

Among other things, he expects to write a book of reminiscences, the publication to be made within three years. The book containing the account of his African hunting expedition will be off the presses soon.

Col. Roosevelt was at first not inclined to accept the reception planned for him on his arrival in New York next June, but later became favorable to the scheme, it having been impressed upon him that everything that might tend to give the affair a political significance would be studiously avoided.

Forty stilletos and half as many revolvers have been taken from the Italian colony of Montreal, since Saturday, and ten of the sons of Italy are under arrest.

Seventy identified and eight unidentified bodies have been taken from the Washington State avalanche, and the bodies of eleven passengers and six trainmen are still in the train.

Winston Churchill, Secretary for Home Affairs, and several members of Parliament in London, were on Saturday victims of the old joke of somebody ordering a number of loads of coal, to be delivered at their addresses. Twenty carters deposited their loads at Churchill's cellar, despite protests.

Duez Embezzlement Has Caused Great Scandal

Trustee Has Been Dishonest in His Administration of the Religious Organization Funds of the Nation---Thefts Amount to no Less Than Two Hundred Millions.

Paris, March 14.—The Duez scandal is a terrible blow to French Parliamentary methods, and especially to the administration of French justice, and comes with telling effect just before the general elections. Public opinion is thoroughly aroused and determined to put an end to such scandals. The root of the evil is due to the careless and perfunctory manner of selecting and appointing the official receivers who act as trustees and liquidators in the administration of sums realized by the forced sales of the property of religious orders, estimated, probably too highly, at $200,000,000.

Premier Briand was nervous and fatigued during the fierce interpellations of MM. Jaures and Berry, but he succeeded in convincing the Chamber that during his tenure of office he did what he could in spite of red tape and the abuses of the bureaucracy of the Ministry of Justice and of the Treasury experts who had repeatedly assured the present Cabinet that the Duez accounts were "models of probity."

It would require a Balzac to describe adequately the reckless gambling and the stock speculations and robberies of Duez, who began his career as a shop boy in the Bon Marche establishment, was afterward secretary to M. Imbert, another liquidator, where he, on his own confession, embezzled $100,000, and in spite of this was afterward pitchforged by political influence into the post of one of the three official receivers and trustees of church property funds.

TO CHECK ASQUITH

Lord Rosebery's Remedial Resolutions Will Probably Be Brought to Maturity Before the Ministerial Plan Is Dealt With—Sir Edward Grey Favors a Democratic Elective Chamber for Upper House.

London, March 14.—(New York Tribune Cable.)—The Lords can play the game of political tactics as cleverly as the Ministers themselves.

The Government, in restricting the supply to six weeks for spending services, has acted on the close calculation that the veto resolution will be passed by the Commons during April, and that the crisis caused by the rejection of the proposals by the Upper House will occur about the time when the present votes on account expire.

The Ministers by resigning office abruptly under these circumstances would compel Mr. Balfour to face the alternative of forming a Government and of appealing to the country when the Treasury was empty and embarrassed with the floating indebtedness and there was no authority for carrying on spending services, or else of declining the responsibilities of administration and of leaving Mr. Asquith at liberty to exact terms from the sovereign before returning to power.

The Lords, however, can interfere with this dexterous little game by deferring the consideration of the veto resolutions until they have disposed of their own resolutions for reforming the Upper Chamber. The votes on account would expire before the crisis over the veto came on, and the Ministers would be forced to obtain fresh supplies themselves before resigning office. Probably this course will be adopted as the best method of meeting the Ministers' expedient of limiting supplies to a deliberately calculated term in order to obtain their continuance in office and to make it impossible for their rivals to make up a business administration.

Lord Rosebery's motion for resolving the Lords into a committee for considering the reform resolutions will be debated exhaustively this week, but the resolutions themselves will not be taken up until April, and the debate may be adjourned from week to week and followed by the long vacation. The Lords can easily contrive to defer action on the veto resolutions until the Ministers have renewed supplies and there is no risk of bringing the national services to a full stop by the power of the purse. The Lords can arrange the time table to suit themselves, and have the crisis come when Mr. Balfour can take office and appeal to the country without a financial difficulty over the supplies.

Lord Rosebery's resolutions, as enlarged by Lords Curzon and Newton, will contemplate the restriction in the number of legislative lords through an order of merit, and the election of English representative peers on the same terms as Irish and Scotch peers. It will be a definite plan for strengthening the Upper House and increasing its efficiency.

The Liberal peers will not waste time in debating a scheme which the present Government is not prepared to support, but they will probably disclose the main lines of Sir Edward Grey's plan for an entirely elective chamber of 150 members, chosen by democratic franchise and uninfluenced by the hereditary principle. Conflicts between the two houses under this plan would be settled by a vote of the united Parliament.

Coroner's Jury Disagrees.

Revelstoke, B.C., March 14.—The coroner's jury in the Rogers Pass disaster, where an avalanche killed sixty men, was dismissed Saturday without bringing in any verdict, the members being evenly divided as to the result of the evidence.

Three members wished to declare it was an unavoidable accident, with a recommendation as to precautions in future, and three others wished to return a verdict of negligence. A further investigation will probably be held.

WILL USE HUNGER.

Union Men Call Out Deliverymen to Win Fight.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 14.—In its efforts to demonstrate the strength of organized labor and to make stronger the sympathetic strike, the Central Labor Union yesterday directed that all milkmen, bakers, grocery clerks and other dispensers of the necessities of life should remain away from their usual vocations to-day and until such time as the grievances of the striking carmen shall have been adjusted.

It was also resolved that union members withdraw all their money from the banks. Their sympathizers, whether organized or not, are also asked by the promoters of the sympathetic strike to do likewise.

The union milk and bread wagon drivers are called upon to strike today. The grocery clerks, 1,000 of whom organized yesterday morning, will quit work to-night. Any one working Tuesday in any line of employment will be considered as a non-union man, and expelled from the union of which they are members.

Pressure was brought to bear on the brewery workers and their representatives voted to join in the general strike, despite the orders of their national officers.

The strike promoters say they take this action to disprove the claims of the authorities that the general strike is a fizzle.

Attracted by a fire in a box car on a railway siding in Kensington, a crowd of several thousand persons collected late yesterday. Small boys threw stones at some of the police, and later the windows of a number of cars were broken before the reserves got the crowd under control. This was the only outbreak of the day in the street carmen's strike. Cars were run without molestation.

It is predicted that thousands of sympathetic strikers will return to their jobs to-morrow.

Heroic Lighthouseman.

South Norwark, Conn., March 14.—After being continuously on duty for eleven days, with the light always burning and the greater part of the time with the foghorn sounding, Le Roy C. Loughborough, assistant keeper of the Norwark Light, in Long Island Sound, was found lying prostrate by the side of his engines, starving and exhausted by his long vigil.

By his side was his faithful dog, and more than once Loughborough had considered the possibility of killing it for food. But he did not have the heart to do this, and two days before shared with the faithful pet the last of the potatoes and dog biscuits which had been their food for eleven days, while the only drinking water was the condensation of the steam from salt water which was boiled.

John M. Kiarshon, keeper of the lighthouse, left for Norwark on Feb. 28, for the purpose of getting provisions and the salary orders for himself and his assistant, but instead, started out celebrating.

There was a continual fog on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and for seventy-two hours Loughborough never slept and ate almost nothing. One of the engines broke down and he labored over it for hours, and for part of this time the light was all but extinguished, the jar from the engine causing the glass to become covered with smoke.

More Vessels For Jap Navy.

Victoria, B.C., March 14.—Several Japanese journals are calling upon the Government for expansion of the Japanese navy without loss of time. Capt. Oguri, in an article in The Osaka Mainichi, says more vessels are urgently required, as by 1920 ten battleships and thirteen cruisers will be useless for active service.

The professor was 79 years of age.

Fewer Divorces.

Chicago, March 14.—If man had the lapels of his coat and his collar and necktie in the middle of his back, so his wife would be called upon to assist him in dressing, even as he is called upon to fasten her hooks and eyes, there would be fewer divorces, because conditions would be less one-sided. Anyway, this is the belief of Dr. Luther H. Gullick, director of the child hygiene department of the Russell Sage Foundation, New York, who spoke on "The New Attitude Toward Health," before the Cook County Teachers' Association Saturday.

"What is needed for the harmony of the homes is more co-operation between man and wife," he said. "A man can dress himself, but a woman has to have assistance."

Dr. Gu[illegible] will give a series of lectures [illegible] soon.

C. [illegible] May Be President.

Montreal, March 14.—There is a statement go[illegible] rounds of the financial commun[illegible] that Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., will be called to the presidency of the Bank of Montreal and retain the general managership as well, that R. B. Angus will be the new vice-president, and that either Robt. Meighen, president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., or H. Vincent Meredith, manager of the bank, will be a new director.

Goderich Church Burned.

Goderich, March 14.—About 1.30 p.m. Saturday fire broke out in St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, originating from the sanctuary lamp. The church was almost completely gutted. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

SPECTACLES
Should be Changed

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and then go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity for such be not apparent to them. As a general rule, spectacles for close work require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every 2 years.

HAVE EYES TESTED AT INTERVALS

When you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us.

Always glad to help you.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

M. Chauvenet inquired for his friends the Claibornes and was clearly annoyed to find that they had gone, and no sooner had this intelligence been conveyed to him than he, too, studied time tables and consulted steamer advertisements. John Armitage in various discreet ways was observant of M. Chauvenet's activities, and bookings at steamship offices interested him so greatly that he reserved passage on two additional steamers and ordered the straps buckled about his trunks, for it had occurred to him that he might find it necessary to leave Geneva in a hurry.

It was not likely that M. Chauvenet, being now under his eyes, would escape him, and John Armitage, making a leisurely dinner, learned from his waiter that M. Chauvenet, being worn from his travels, was dining alone in his rooms.

At about 8 o'clock, as Armitage turned the pages of Figaro in the smoking room, Chauvenet appeared at the door, scrutinized the group within and passed on. Armitage had carried his coat, hat and stick into the smoking room, to be ready for possible emergencies, and when Chauvenet stepped out into the street he followed.

It was unusually cold for the season, and a fine drizzle filled the air. Chauvenet struck off at once away from the lake, turned into the Boulevard Helvetique, thence into the Boulevard Froissart with its colony of pensions. He walked rapidly until he reached a house that was distinguished from its immediate neighbors only by its unlighted upper windows. He pulled the bell in the wall, and the door was at once opened and instantly closed.

He packed his raiment.

Armitage, following at twenty yards on the opposite side of the street, paused abruptly at the sudden ending of his chase. It was not an hour for loitering, for the Genevan gendarmerie have rather good eyes, but Armitage had by no means satisfied his curiosity as to the nature of Chauvenet's errand. He walked on to make sure he was unobserved, crossed the street and again passed the dark, silent house which Chauvenet had entered. He noted the place carefully. It gave no outward appearance of being occupied. He assumed from the general plan of the neighboring buildings that there was a courtyard at the rear of the darkened house, accessible through a narrow passageway at the side. As he studied the situation he kept moving to avoid observation and presently, at a moment when he was quite alone in the street, walked rapidly to the house Chauvenet had entered.

Gentlemen in search of adventures do well to avoid the continental wall. Mr. Armitage brushed the glass from the top with his hat. It jingled softly within under cover of the rain drip. The plaster had crumbled from the bricks in spots, giving a foot its opportunity, and Mr. Armitage drew himself to the top and dropped within. The front door and windows stared at him blankly, and he committed his fortunes to the bricked passageway. The rain was now coming down in earnest, and at the rear of the house water had begun to drip noisily into an iron spout. The electric lights from neighboring streets made a kind of twilight even in the darkened court, and Armitage threaded his way among a network of clotheslines to the rear wall and viewed the premises. He knew his Geneva from many previous visits. The quarter was undeniably respectable, and there is, to be sure, no reason why the blinds of a house should not be carefully drawn at nightfall at the pleasure of the occupants. The whole lower floor seemed utterly deserted. Only at one point on the third floor was there any sign of light, and this the merest hint.

The increasing fall of rain did not encourage loitering in the wet courtyard, where the down-spout now rattled dolorously, and Armitage crossed the court and further assured himself that the lower floor was dark and silent. Balconies were bracketed against the wall at the second and third stories, and the slight iron ladder leading thither terminated a foot above his head. John Armitage was aware that his position, if discovered, was, to say the least, untenable, but he was secure from observation by police, and he assumed that the occupants of the house were probably too deeply engrossed with their affairs to waste much time on what might happen without. Armitage sprang up and caught the lowest round of the ladder, and in a moment his tall figure was a dark blur against the wall as he crept warily upward. The rear rooms of the second story were as dark and quiet as those below. Armitage continued to the third story, where a door as well as several windows gave upon the balcony, and he found that it was from a broken corner of the door shade that a sharp blade of light cut the dark. All continued quiet below. He heard the traffic of the neighboring thoroughfares quite distinctly, and from a kitchen near by came the rough clatter of dishwashing to the accompaniment of a quarrel in German between the maids. For the moment he felt secure and bent down close to the door and listened.

Two men were talking, and evidently the matter under discussion was of importance, for they spoke with a kind of dogged deliberation, and the long pauses in the dialogue lent color to the belief that some weighty matter was in debate. The beat of the rain on the balcony and its steady rattle in the spout intervened to dull the sound of voices, but presently one of the speakers, with an impatient exclamation, rose, opened the small glass paned door a few inches, peered out and returned to his seat, with an exclamation of relief. Armitage had dropped down the ladder half a dozen rounds as he heard the latch snap in the door. He waited an instant to make sure he had not been seen, then crept back to the balcony and found that the slight opening in the door made it possible for him to see as well as hear.

He was secure from observation by police

"It's stifling in this hole," said Chauvenet, drawing deeply upon his cigarette and blowing a cloud of smoke. "If you pardon the informality I will lay aside my coat."

He carefully hung the garment upon the back of his chair to hold its shape, then resumed his seat. His companion watched him meanwhile with a certain intentness.

"You take excellent care of your clothes, my dear Jules. I never have been able to fold a coat without ruining it."

The rain was soaking Armitage thoroughly, but its persistent beat covered any slight noises made by his own movements, and he was now intent upon the little room and its occupants. He observed the care with which the man kept close to his coat, and he pondered the matter as he hung upon the balcony. If Chauvenet was on his way to America it was possible that he would carry with him the important paper whose loss had caused so much anxiety to the Austrian minister. If so, where was it during his stay in Geneva?

"The old man's death is only the first step. We require a succession of deaths."

"We require three, to be explicit, not more or less. We should be fortunate if the remaining two could be accomplished as easily as Stroebel's."

"He was a beast. He is well dead."

"That depends on the way you look at it. They seem really to be mourning the old beggar at Vienna. It is the way of a people. They like to be ruled by a savage hand. The people, as you have heard me say before, are fools."

The last speaker was a young man whom Armitage had never seen before. He was a decided blond, with close trimmed straw colored beard and slightly curling hair. Opposite him, and facing the door, sat Chauvenet. On the table between them were decanters and liqueur glasses.

"I am going to America at once," said Chauvenet, holding his filled glass toward a brass lamp of an old type that hung from the ceiling.

"It is probably just as well," said the other. "There's work to do there. We must not forget our more legitimate business in the midst of these pleasant side issues."

"The field is easy. After our delightful continental capitals, where, as you know, one is never quite sure of oneself, it is pleasant to breath the democratic airs of Washington," remarked Chauvenet.

"Particularly so, my dear friend, when one is blessed with your delightful social gifts. I envy you your capacity for making others happy."

There was a keen irony in the fellow's tongue, and the edge of it evidently touched Chauvenet, who scowled and bent forward, with his fingers on the table.

"Enough of that, if you please."

"As you will, carino. But you will pardon me for offering my condolences on the regrettable departure of la belle Americaine. If you had not been so intent on matters of state you would undoubtedly have found her here. As it is, you are now obliged to see her on her native soil. A month in Washington may do much for you. She is beautiful and reasonably rich. Her brother, the tall captain, is said to be the best horseman in the American army."

"Humph! He is an ass," ejaculated Chauvenet.

A servant now appeared bearing a fresh bottle of cordial. He was distinguished by a small head upon a tall and powerful body and bore little resemblance to a house servant. While he brushed the cigar ashes from the table the men continued their talk without heeding him.

Chauvenet and his friend had spoken from the first in French, but in addressing some directions to the servant, the blond, who assumed the role of host, employed a Servian dialect.

"I think we were saying that the mortality list in certain directions will have to be stimulated a trifle before we can do our young friend Francis any good. You have business in America, carino. That paper we filched from old Stroebel strengthens our hold on Francis, but there is still that question as to Karl and Frederick Augustus. Our dear Francis is not satisfied. He wishes to be quite sure that his dear father and brother are dead. We must reassure him, dearest Jules."

"Don't be a fool, Durand. You never seem to understand that the United States of America is a trifle larger than a barnyard. And I don't believe those fellows are over there. They're probably lying in wait here somewhere ready to take advantage of any opportunity—that is, if they are alive. A man can hardly fail to be impressed with the fact that so few lives stand between him and"—

"The heights—the heights!" And the young man, whom Chauvenet called Durand, lifted his tiny glass airily.

"Yes, the heights," replied Chauvenet a little dreamily.

"But that declaration—that document! You have never honored me with a glimpse, but you have it put safely away, I dare say."

"There is no place—but one—that I dare risk. It is always within easy reach, my dear friend."

"You will do well to destroy that document. It is much better out of the way."

"Your deficiencies in the matter of wisdom are unfortunate. That paper constitutes our chief asset, my dear associate. So long as we have it we are able to keep dear Francis in order. Therefore we shall hold fast to it, remembering that we risked much in removing it from the lamented Stroebel's archives."

"Do you say 'risked much?' My valued neck, that is all!" said the other. "You and Winkelried are without gratitude."

"You will do well," said Chauvenet, "to keep an eye open in Vienna for the unknown. If you hear murmurs in Hungary one of these fine days!—Nothing has happened for some time; therefore much may happen."

He glanced at his watch.

"I have work in Paris before sailing for New York. Shall we discuss the matter of those Peruvian claims? That is business. These other affairs are more in the nature of delightful diversions, my dear comrade."

They drew nearer the table, and Durand produced a box of papers, over which he bent with serious attention. Armitage had heard practically all of their dialogue and, what was of equal interest, had been able to study the faces and learn the tones of voice of the two conspirators. He was cramped from his position on the narrow balcony and wet and chilled by the rain, which was now slowly abating. He had learned much that he wished to know and with an ease that astonished him, and he was well content to withdraw with gratitude for his good fortune.

His legs were numb, and he clung close to the railing of the little ladder for support as he crept toward the area. At the second story his foot slipped on the wet iron, smooth from long use, and he stumbled down several steps before he recovered himself. He listened a moment, heard nothing but the tinkle of the rain in the spout, then continued his retreat.

As he stepped out upon the brick courtyard he was seized from behind by a pair of strong arms that clasped him tight. In a moment he was thrown across the threshold of a door into an unlighted room, where his captor promptly sat upon him and proceeded to strike a light.

Chapter V

A LOST CIGARETTE CASE.

THE man clinched Armitage about the body with his legs while he struck a match on a box he produced from his pocket. The suddenness with which he had been flung into the kitchen had knocked the breath out of Armitage, and the huge thighs of his captor pinned his arms tight. The match spurted fire, and he looked into the face of the servant whom he had seen in the room above. His round head was covered with short wirelike hair that grew low upon his narrow forehead. Armitage noted, too, the man's bull-like neck, small sharp eyes and bristling mustache. The fitful flash of the match disclosed the rough furniture of a kitchen. The brick flooring and his wet inverness lay cold at Armitage's back.

The fellow growled an execration in Servian. Then with ponderous difficulty asked a question in German.

"Who are you and what do you want here?"

Armitage shook his head and replied in English:

"I do not undestand."

The man struck a series of matches that he might scrutinize his captive's face, then ran his hands over Armitage's pockets to make sure he had no arms. The big fellow was clearly puzzled to find that he had caught a gentleman in water soaked evening clothes lurking in the area, and as the matter was beyond his wits it only remained for him to communicate with his master.

This, however, was not so readily accomplished. He had reasons of his own for not calling out, and there were difficulties in the way of holding the prisoner and at the same time bringing down the men who had gone to the most distant room in the house for their own security.

Several minutes passed during which the burly Servian struck his matches and took account of his prisoner, and meanwhile Armitage lay perfectly still, his arms fast numbing from the rough clasp of the stalwart servant's legs. There was nothing to be gained by a struggle in this position, and he knew that the Servian would not risk losing him in the effort to summon the odd pair who were bent over their papers at the top of the house. The Servian was evidently a man of action.

"Get up," he commanded, still in rough German, and he rose in the dark and jerked Armitage after him. There was a moment of silence in which Armitage shook and stretched himself, and then the Servian struck another match and held it close to a revolver which he held pointed at Armitage's head.

"I will shoot," he said again in his halting German.

"Undoubtedly you will!" and something in the fellow's manner caused Armitage to laugh. He had been caught, and he did not at once see any safe issue out of his predicament, but his plight had its preposterous side and the ease with which he had been taken at the very outset of his quest touched his humor. Then he sobered instantly and concentrated his wits upon the immediate situation.

The Servian backed away, with a match upheld in one hand and the leveled revolver in the other, leaving Armitage in the middle of the kitchen.

Women

Cannot be Strong and Healthy Unless the Kidneys are Well.

Weak, lame or aching backs are the first sign of Kidney Trouble.

Under ordinary conditions they ought to be strong and ready to bear the burdens of life.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back. Backaches come from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them than they can stand it is not to be wondered that they get out of order.

Weak back is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney troubles.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you in the same way as they have cured thousands of others.

Miss Alberta B. Clarke, Stoney Creek, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with kidney trouble for several years; my back was weak, I had such terrible headaches, and was so restless I could not sleep at night and tried everything without any benefit. Meantime a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got four boxes and they completely cured me. I now feel as well as I ever did and would advise everyone suffering from Kidney Disease to try them."

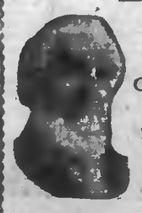
PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Choose Ye This Day Between Truth and Error.

"Choose You This Day Whom Ye Will Serve. . . . If Jehovah Be God, Serve Him" (Joshua xxiv, 15).

Washington, D.C., March 13.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York, preached here twice to-day to splendid audiences. One of his discourses was entitled, "The Overthrow of Satan's Empire." We report the other one from the text above quoted. Pastor Russell said:—

As Christians in the light of this wonderful Twentieth Century we stand at the parting of the ways and must decide for right or for wrong, for truth or for falsehood, in respect to our religious convictions. Without questioning the sincerity of our forefathers, we all object to their theology. It is in vain that ministers and Bible class teachers longer deny the facts of the case. Nor will intelligent and honest people agree that it is right that through their creeds they should profess one thing, and in their lives and general conversation they should ignore or absolutely deny the teachings of those creeds. Yet this is the position of practically all the thinking people of Christendom. Their consciences will not stand for this much longer. If they refrain from telling the Truth and taking their stand for it, they will not only sear their consciences (1. Timothy iv, 2) and correspondingly separate themselves from God's favor, but additionally their course will sooner or later bring upon them the disapproval and contempt of all honest people. For although the masses are not yet aroused on the subject, they are rapidly getting awake.

Do you wish me to illustrate what I mean? Do you wish me to show in what respect all denominations are ashamed of their creeds and anxious to hide the fact that they ever professed them or were anxious to give them some new interpretation more consistent with the broader thought and more generous sentiment common to civilized man in this Twentieth Century? I will do it.

Our Methodist friends are ashamed of that feature of their creed which declares that the Almighty is now doing everything that Divine Wisdom and Power can accomplish on behalf of our poor race to bring all to a full knowledge of Christ and to opportunity of faith and obedience. They realize that there is a weakness in this argument. And when they protest that God must work through means, and hence that the responsibility lies at the door of Christian believers to carry the Gospel to the heathen, they realize that this is an illogical argument too. For why should our Great Creator send to eternal torment millions of his creatures, because of an insufficiency of zeal on the part of some of their more enlightened fellow-creatures? Acknowledging the inconsistency of such a theory our good Methodist brethren tell us that they hope that God has some other way of saving the ignorant of heathen lands and, perhaps, of civilized lands.

We appreciate the loving heart which prompts this answer and we agree that it is true—that God has another way for these. But when we attempt to point out what that other way is, some of these dear friends inquire,—Is it Methodism? Did John Wesley preach it? Our answer is, No, Brother Wesley did not preach it and did not know of it. Not because it is new, but because it is so very old and was lost sight of during the "dark ages" for fifteen centuries before Brother Wesley was born. He was feeling after it, yearning for it, hungering and thirsting for it, but the "due time" for it to be made known to God's people had not yet come in Brother Wesley's day. He preached the eternal torture of all mankind, except the sanctified believers in Jesus the Saviour. But in his preaching of the love of God he was used of the Almighty to wondrously prepare the hearts of Christendom for the broader message of the Bible now due to be seen and understood. Wesley's Gospel of the love of God has mellowed the heart of Christendom, which once was frigid under the cold teachings of Foreordination, Predestination, etc., of the Westminster Confession of Faith—once the basis of nearly all Protestant Communions.

If we and our Methodist brethren could maintain the same degree of spiritual warmth that Wesley and their forefathers enjoyed we might do without further instruction. But we cannot do this! None can stand still! Christians to-day are losing their holiness, their sanctification—their zeal for God is giving place to zeal for a sect.

The light of the Millennial morning which for a century has been gradually breaking upon the world, stimulating thought in every direction, makes it necessary for our Methodist brethren, as well as for us all, to awaken to the wonderful privileges of our day for Bible study: to ascertain the real teachings of God's Word, which, in the dark past we all seemingly misunderstood and misrepresented. Already the most intelligent one-fourth of Methodism not only rejects Brother Wesley's theory, but alas, repudiates the Bible also! It accepts instead of Salvation that most dangerous form of infidelity known as Higher Criticism and that most un-Scriptural proposition of human Evolution, which denies the fall of our race and makes void Christ's redemptive work and the glorious result thereof—human restitution (Acts iii, 19-23).

God forbid that we should bury any of the doctrines of Christ and his twelve apostles! On the contrary let us strive to resurrect these from the rubbish of human traditions which eighteen centuries have piled upon them. Let us instead bury our man-made creeds, of which we are all ashamed. Our Presbyterian friends some years ago set a noble example to all Christendom in the burial of their Confession of Faith and their substitution instead of a much simpler and much more rational statement.

But, No, I must correct myself here. This is what they should have done but did not do. Instead of burying the old creed, not only from sight, but also from odor, they have merely covered the corpse which is admitted to be dead and placed the briefer and better Confession atop the winding-sheet. They assuredly declare that it is not a substitute but merely a representative statement. Hence every time we read the re-statement, we must hold our noses to avoid contamination from the odors of the carcass beneath. Not all must do this, for, as the Apostle suggests, All have not their senses exercised to discern. But all intelligent Presbyterians are being rapidly driven not only away from Calvinism, but, alas, away from the Bible also, because of their erroneous supposition that the teaching of Calvin and the teachings of the Bible are one and the same.

These bright minds are not merely lost to the Christian forces. They become active agents in the promulgation of anti-Biblical teachings. They are engaged in pulling down the Bible and substituting for its teachings Darwin's Evolution theory. These sincere men are to be found in the faculties of all of the Colleges, in the highest pulpits throughout the land and in the most prominent positions in business and social life. Their loss of faith in the Bible has not made them murderers or thieves. Their noble inheritance from the past preserves to them an uprightness of character which the loss of a fear of hell-torment has not undermined. While they are no longer Christians from the Bible standpoint—no longer believers in Jesus as a Redeemer—they are still believers in Jesus as a great Teacher and a noble Leader of men. They fail to discern the fact that if he posed as the Son of God and the Redeemer of men, and was not such, instead of being a noble example, his life and teachings were most stupendous frauds and deceptions.

When we say that this awakening is also reaching our Baptist and our Disciple brethren, let it not be understood to mean that all of these have been asleep until now. Perhaps it would have been better for them if some who have gotten awake during the past thirty years had slumbered longer. Those long awake have principally gone off into Darwinism and Higher Criticism. Baptist and Disciple schools and Colleges and Theological Seminaries, like those of other denominations, are manned with the brightest minds of the denominations, and all with one accord teaching Higher Criticism, Infidelity and Darwinian Evolution. With one accord all are engaged in overthrowing the Christian Faith of the rising generation. They are doing this intelligently, wisely, cunningly, but not with evil motive. Having gotten awake to the inconsistencies of their creeds these scholarly men, concluding that the creeds truthfully represented the Bible, abandoned faith in the Scriptures to the same degree that they have abandoned faith in the creeds which their intellects have repudiated. Now they are seeking to gradually help Christian people of all denominations to what they consider the higher plane of Truth. What they have—almost anything in fact—is better than the "creeds" they have repudiated. They are working hard and succeeding well in introducing their faith-destroying theory into the minds of the rising generation through the school books. From these they not only have eliminated everything sympathetic with Bible faith, but in the stead have introduced the subversive doctrine of Evolution.

As for the rank and file of Baptists and Disciples, probably three-fourths of them still hold vaguely and indefinitely to the Bible and their Confessions of Faith though both of these denominations in their innocency of mind think that they have no creeds—that they take the Bible only. As these dear friends awaken to the inconsistencies of their Confession and teachings they are in great danger of following their leaders into a repudiation of everything pertaining to the past—into Higher Criticism-Infidelity and Darwinism.

Joshua's words to the Israelites, after they had come into Canaan, constitute our text. Joshua perceived that the Israelites were in a trying position and that it was their duty to decide promptly and thoroughly which course they would take. So we may see to-day that Christians of all denominations are in a trying position and that a prompt decision to stand by God and the Bible is the necessary thing for those who would be delivered from the darkness of the past and avoid falling into the Adversary's great deception of the present—into which their leaders are guiding them. Unless they heed speedily, the blind leading the blind will fall into the ditch of Darwinism and the mire of Higher Criticism. There are not many ways to escape this threatening calamity! There is only one way—the Bible way. Many Baptist and Disciple ministers are becoming awake to the inconsistencies of their positions and drifting without foreknowledge of where their course will end. For instance, I have before me the words of the Rev. Dr. MacDonald of my own city, Brooklyn, on February 27th. This gentleman speaks of the Baptist Confession of Faith as "these swaddling clothes of an ancient dogmatism." And respecting the Baptist doctrine which recognizes only immersed persons as members of the Church of Christ and heirs of salvation, he says, "Henceforth it can be regarded to be as dead as the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, and as worthily buried." The gentleman rejoiced that recently a Baptist minister had been ordained to the Sixth Avenue Baptist Church of Brooklyn who affirmed in advance that he would invite all to communion and Church membership who loved the Lord Jesus. He urged that "associate members" should be received into Baptist communions "without imposing baptism upon them."

This courageous brother fails to see wherein the course he advocates is illogical. What he needs to see is the real teaching of the Bible on the subject of Baptism—that it is baptism into Christ's death, and thus into the real Church of Christ—not the Baptist Church, nor any other human organization, but the Church of God—"The Church of the firstborns, whose names are written in heaven." That roll contains the names of all the saintly, faithful, consecrated believers in the Redeemer—of all denominations and outside of all denominations.

It is not sufficient that we get rid of the errors and superstitions of the past. We must supplant those with the Truth, that "We may be able to withstand in this evil day" (Ephesians vi, 13). It alone will constitute the armor of God. Christian people hold much precious Truth, but hold it in so illogical and confused a manner that it fails to give them the needed strength. God permitted us to come to this very hour and has permitted the present tests for the purpose of developing the characters of the "Israelites indeed, in whom is no guile," and for the purpose of gathering out from them all the tares, all the chaff, and all not at heart copies of his dear Son.

None of our Creeds were too strict in defining the saintliness of the Church class, invited to become the Bride of Christ and his Joint-heirs in his Kingdom. On the contrary, in many respects they were too loose—they were not nearly up to the standard of the Master's word, "If any man will be my disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me." "Strait is the gate and narrow the way which leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it" (Matthew vii. 14). Jesus taught that his followers must drink of his cup of suffering and be baptized into his death—and not merely into water. Our too-low standards have admitted to membership in all denominations millions who are far below the Master's standards.

Our error and deception was the supposition that all who are not saintly, all who would not become the Bride of Christ, all who are not baptized into his death, all who do not drink of his cup of ignominy will be eternally tortured. This great mistake, common to all Protestants (and in the much modified form of Purgatory shared also by Catholics) must be displaced by the Bible teaching that as soon as the elect Church shall be completed and glorified the antitypical Year of Jubilee will begin; that then for the thousand years of the reign of Christ and the Church as the spiritual Seed of Abraham, the non-elect, of all the families of the earth will be blest by the elect (Galatians iii, 16, 29; Acts iii, 19-23). Let us, dear brethren, choose this day to stand by the Word of God, to reject all human traditions contrary to it and to hold fast the things that are true, just, loving, good.

If occasionally a thoughtless friend asks, Why do you believe in a Millennium? answer that it is one of the oldest doctrines of Christendom and above all, the Bible doctrine. Answer that he who does not believe in the Millennium and the resurrection then of the world of mankind—"All that are in their graves"—must account for the dead in some other way—must claim that they have been experiencing pain or pleasure for thousands of years, or must claim that they are extinct as the brute beast and will have no resurrection or must believe in universal salvation regardless of a knowledge of Christ or obedience to him. On next Lord's Day, we will discuss the Millennium and show its absolute necessity, not only from a Bible standpoint but also from a scientific standpoint. "Choose ye this day"—to stand for the Bible and reason and to oppose the Creeds of the dark ages and their unreason!

Hence the Circuit System.

Whitefield and Wesley had splendid chances of exploiting the oft-repeated sermon. They were wandering ministers.

Wesley gloried in the fact. After six or seven weeks, he explained, a preacher cannot find matter for preaching every morning and evening, nor will people come to hear him; hence he grows cold by lying in bed, and so do the people, whereas if he never stays more than a fortnight in one place he will find matter enough and the people will gladly hear him."

"I know," he added, "that were I to preach one whole year in one place I should preach both myself and congregation to sleep." And there is the origin of the Wesleyan circuit system, that gives a man three years at most in his local pulpit.

Risen From the Ranks.

After all, it is scarcely surprising that these cute, hard-headed men of the North should vote for men with whom they have lived and worked all their lives, and who, by their honesty and earnestness of purpose, have won their confidence. There is Mr. H. Twist, for instance, who won a seat at Wigan, and who was born within three miles of that town. He started work in the mines at eleven years of age, rising to be check weighman at the Mains Colliery, near Wigan. He did good work in connection with the Miners' Federation, and now at forty finds himself in the House of Commons.

Pimples Cured.

Mr. J. Morehouse, Zealand Station, N.B., writes: "My face and neck were covered with pimples, and I tried all kinds of remedies, but they did me no good. VANISHED FROM THE STAGE, BUT SINGING IN THE HEARTS OF THE PEOPLE

GOOD Old Songs That Once Set You a-Humming and Heard in Public No More Are Not Forgotten, but Are Prime Favorites in Private Life

Fragment from Chorus of "Marguerite."
By C. A. White.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

ARE they forgotten? The music sellers say no. Old familiar songs, they may have disappeared from the vaudeville and popular concert stage and have been supplanted by the rapid fire succession of temporary hits, but forgotten they have not been. They still are sung in parlor and "best room" and by many a fireside. For they live in the hearts of those whom Lincoln called "the common people."

Go into a music store and ask for "Marguerite." The salesman doesn't have to whistle up to the stock room for it. It may not be on the sales counter, but all he has to do is to turn to a nearby shelf—and there it is. That doesn't look much as if it had been forgotten. And the same is true of many and many a song that no longer comes over the footlights.

Moreover, if the singers only knew it, they could make a bigger hit with some of these old songs than they do with the new ones that are shouted into popularity, soon die away like a faint echo and, when forgotten, are forgotten forever. If any good singer came out before the footlights to-morrow and with due expression and charm of voice sang "Marguerite," that lovely little song still would be found to make as strong an appeal to the hearts of its hearers as when it was first written and composed and first made its way to a sale of a million copies—something, it is said, no other song has accomplished. A popular singer of the day when "Marguerite" was first published used to say that she could note its effect upon the young people in the audience, see them draw closer together and exchange tender glances; and that she had even known quarrels to be forgiven after lovers who had parted in temper had heard "Marguerite" sung.

This is a very charming song, this "Marguerite," and there is every reason why it should not be forgotten. Indeed, in actual musical merit it is rather above the average popular song, even above those that, like it, have gone on living unobtrusively for many years. Its composer, the late Mr. Charles A. White, called it a "romanza" on the title page, and under that head it may well be classed. It has a broad, flowing introduction and a charming melody, and the name "Marguerite" is repeated effectively several times in the course of the song, and twice repeated at the end with added effect.

The Story of "Marguerite."

In fact, the song is what musicians would call "well composed." It is cleverly harmonized, the melody is simple, without being primitive, introduction and interlude reflect the character of the "romanza," and the voice part works up to an excellent climax, which in the second verse gains additional force from a strengthening of the accompaniment.

There is no reason why a singer of to-day in search of a really effective sentimental song should not reintroduce "Marguerite" to the footlights. It is true that the words taken by themselves are quite commonplace, but they are not noticeably so when sung to the music. In fact, they sound appropriately sentimental when combined with the romantic melody.

Mr. White is said to have made $200,000 from this one song alone, and as he also wrote "Put Me in My Little Bed," "Moonlight on the Lake" and other songs that were popular it is no wonder that he enjoyed a large income from his compositions. He was born in Taunton, Mass., became professor of dancing at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, and when he died in Boston, at the age of sixty-two, had composed something like sixteen thousand songs and instrumental pieces.

If you see a piece of music in a cover with a general deep glowing effect and occasional red tones in it and on examining it more closely find that a young lady in evening costume is reclining in a red cushioned arm chair with the glow of a red shaded lamp on her face and a background of heavy maroon colored curtains—why, it's "After the Ball." If you take up the music you will see also in red letters on the cover "By Mr. Charles K. Harris, composer of 'Would You Care' and 'Without a Wedding Ring,'" &c. Mr. Harris is said to have drawn $48,000 in royalties within a couple of years after the publication of this song.

He was born in Poughkeepsie and then went to Milwaukee, where he was living when "After the Ball" made him famous as a writer of popular songs. He himself is authority for the statement that he doesn't know one note of music from the other. Yet he has a natural ear for melody and a natural gift for playing musical instruments, for when he wrote "After the Ball" he already was trying to make a living by giving lessons on the banjo and the guitar. He had written a few songs—that is, he had conceived the tunes in his head and had whistled them to some one who wrote them out for him and harmonized them.

"After the Ball" was written at the request of a friend who wanted something to sing at a semi-professional entertainment, and as this was to take place within a few days the friend wanted it quickly. Mr. Harris had not up to that time made a great success with any of his songs, but his friends regarded him as a young genius who could knock off a song to order in no time. The day his friend came to him, however, for a song for the entertainment in which he was to take part Mr. Harris was tired. He had been to a dance the night before and didn't feel up to the mark. Consequently when he was asked if he would have a song ready for the occasion his answer was, "Don't ask me now, 'Doc,' I'm so tired after the ball."

His friend went away disappointed, but hardly had he gone when Mr. Harris found his own words, "after the ball," constantly recurring to him, and soon, as they recurred, he began to hear music with them. Before long he had his music amanuensis at his side writing down bar after bar of a melody that Mr. Harris was whistling. That was the genesis of "After the Ball," and it is a good example of what a few bars of music and a little rhyme will do toward accelerating a young man into the rays of the popular limelight.

After the Ball.

There does not seem to be much association between Mr. Charles K. Harris and the late Alexandre Dumas, but as one cannot make a success without being found fault with by those who haven't, it is, perhaps, not surprising that the author and composer of "After the Ball" has been said to have gotten his idea for the song from Alexandre Dumas' "Queen's Necklace." This stanza is quoted as showing similarity to Mr. Harris' words and as having suggested them:—

"After the tragedy's over,
After the play is done,
We must go home with the ladies,
Coupled, and not one by one."

Aside from the fact that it is most unlikely that Mr. Harris was familiar with the "Queen's Necklace," that the metre of the stanza just quoted is by no means an unusual one and that any writer of verse readily might drop into it there is little or no resemblance between the Dumas stanza and the lines of "After the Ball" with the familiar refrain:—

"After the ball is over,
After the break of morn,
After the dancers' leaving,
After the stars are gone;
Many a heart is aching, if you could read them all;
Many the hopes that have vanished—after the ball."

Mr. Harris has composed a great many more songs, among them "Somewhere," "Would You Care?" "Dreaming, Love, of You," and "The Belle of the Ball," but nothing of his later work has made the same universal hit as the song which first brought him his reputation.

To have a city named after them is not the lot of common mortals. Musical composers, like artists, used to be named after cities. This in the days of the old Italian painters and the old Italian composers of church music. Since then it has not happened often, if at all, to any of the composers of serious music. It is not recalled that there is a city rejoicing in the name of Hadyn, Mozart or Beethoven. But out in Indiana—"way down in Indiana" might be more appropriate to the occasion—there is a city named Dresser. It was named after the late Paul Dresser when his great song hit, "On the Banks of the Wabash," was at the height of its popularity.

Mr. Paul Dresser was a wonder at writing words with the sentimental home association that never fails to touch the hearts of the people and wedding those words to tuneful and appropriate music. Even if you never had seen the Wabash, but heard his song about the effect of the moonlight "on the banks of the Wabash, far away," you longed to go there and look at the thing for yourself or regretted that you weren't born there, so that you could share the poet-composer's homesickness for those picturesquely described shores. Nor were you apt to be disillusioned unless you heard the ditty sung by the comedian who between each verse had a habit of saying, "Have you ever seen the Wabash? It's just about that broad," making a gesture with his hands indicating that the Wabash was about the width of a brook.

"The Banks of the Wabash."

Mr. Paul Dresser was forty-seven years old when he died, a few days ago, after an illness of only three days—heart failure induced by dropsy, rather a sad ending for a man who really had done nice work of its kind. He came from the State through which flows the Wabash and he lived there until he was twenty years old, when he left home and went into a patent medicine house. While he was there he wrote "Paul Dresser's Songster," but it was not until he gave up business and took to the stage, appearing opposite to "Billy" Rice in a minstrel troupe in Chicago, that he wrote his first hit, "I Believe It, for My Mother Told Me So," words in every way typical of the "home and mother" style of songs he turned out. But "home and mother" are good old standbys for song writers if they only know how to work them right, and Paul Dresser did. That first "home and mother" song of his took him off the stage and brought him East to New York, where he settled down to the profession of song writing. At one time it seemed as if there wasn't a popular singer in vaudeville, a minstrel troupe or a quartet in rural melodrama that wasn't singing "On the Banks of the Wabash" with "weeps" in the audience.

Another wonderful "home and mother" production of Dresser's—wonderful, that is, from the standpoint of the popular song writer—was "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me." The words may be banal, but in a popular audience they somehow never failed to make straight for the heart.

"Just tell them that you saw me,
And they will know the rest.
Just tell them I was looking well, you know;
Just whisper, if you get a chance,
To mother dear and say
That I love her as I did long, long ago."

The song is in narrative form, and whatever you may think of the words from a literary standpoint they "fetch" you every time. In fact, the charm of all truly popular songs is that you don't stop to think of the words from a literary point of view at all. You hear them with the music and that seems to throw a halo of sentiment around them and for the time being saves them from the charge of being maudlin and trashy.

"That's a classic." They were speaking of "Dearie'" The man who said "That's a classic" is not the first one to pass that judgment on Mrs. Claire Beecher Kummer's song. Of course the word classic refers to its lasting qualities, not to anything staid or complicated in its melody and harmonization. It is simplicity itself, and in that very simplicity lies its great merit.

Plenty of songs are simple but have nothing else to recommend them, but the songs that are simple and "carry" must possess some merit peculiar to themselves or they would not last. In fact, were you to analyze all the songs that ever have been popular you never could arrive at any set of rules for composing a popular song. It is that subtle quality that gets over the footlights and making an impression brief or lasting, that makes a song popular for about a time or forever. And it is their inability to get over the footlights that has made failures of many songs which on paper possess far more merit than those that have succeeded.

In any event, "Dearie!" got over the footlights and got over in great shape. Forgotten? Not at all. Ask any music dealer and he will be apt to tell you that its author and composer still should be making comfortable living out of the royalties. It may not be getting over the footlights, but it still is getting over the counters of the music stores.

All of Them Catchy.

"Dearie!" saw the light of day in Mr. Charles Dillingham's production of the musical farce "Sergeant Brue," in which Mr. Frank Daniels was the star. Miss Sallie Fisher, the leading woman with the company, who is a friend of Mrs. Kummer's, went to Mr. Dillingham one day and told her manager that she could get a lyric from her friend, and was told to go ahead and get it. Result, "Dearie!" a song with a catchy tune and words to match; or, if you choose to put it another way, with catchy words and tune to match—a very good song to fall in with and a pleasant song to hear. Mrs. Kummer is a grandniece of Henry Ward Beecher and a cousin of Mr. William Gillette. She wrote a whole opera, words and music, by herself. It is called "Noah's Ark," but the public failed to find the olive branch. However, there is ample consolation in being a successful writer and composer of a song like "Dearie!" and the later song hit, "Egypt." Some of the great composers, for example Beethoven in the scherzo of the "Eroica" symphony, have utilized popular songs for their themes. Some great composer, if another ever comes along, could make a very attractive episode of "Dearie!"—Mrs. Kummer permitting.

"And Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back." Was it, indeed? Yes, indeed it was when the simple little maiden arrived at the Grand Central Station, but when she left it was done up and there was "a naughty little twinkle in her eye." This poetical effusion, with appropriate music, is an Anglo-American product—the words American, the music English, the work of Mr. Felix McGlennon. Mr. McGlennon is interesting because he is the composer of "Comrades." Some years ago one of the New York newspapers recorded with great glee that, as a political excursion sailed past Blackwell's Island, where the convicts were doing time and the chain step, the band played "Comrades." This English composer was born in Manchester. He had a musical education and first tried his hand at composing high class music. Apparently it was high but not "class." Accordingly he went in for popular music, and the result was "Comrades" and standing contracts with two hundred singers in England. Domesticity is an aim of Mr. McGlennon in writing his songs, so that they can be sung at the fireside as well as on the boards.

"Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay!" Do you recall how the queer postures and the abandon of Miss Lottie Collins made that song? To think, too, that it actually got into the Chancery Court of London, Chief Justice Sterling rendering a decision, in a suit brought for infringement of copyright, that the origin of the song was not discoverable—a decision that brought down the price of copies from four shillings to a penny. This song, which made its greatest hit in England, got there by way of America. It may have originated in England, but it was an American version which Miss Collins obtained and used in London—the song, although the words simply are a jargon, making a success because of the fiery élan and fierce energy of the air, qualities into which Miss Collins threw herself with alacrity.

A London house bought the copyright from her. Presto, there appeared upon the scene Mr. Gilbert, a composer of most serious music, who claimed that the air had been taken from his cantata "Abdallah." Thereupon the publishers bought the cantata and brought out the song with Miss Collins in red ink on the cover.

"Though full of fun, I'm never rude,
I'm not too bad and I'm not too good."

The same might be said of the song, but it had great vogue for a long time and still seems to hold its own in the stores. At the time of its great popularity learned dissertations in regard to the origin of the refrain, Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay," were published, and it was even traced back to Sanscrit.

IN THE EARLY FILES

OLD "GRIP" HAS SOME INTERESTING PAGES.

Little Canadian Weekly's Cartoons Recall Bygone Days In Canada's Affairs—Grant and the Making of Queen's University — A Page of Comment—Sir William Van Horne and Cock-Fighting.

If one wishes to be reminded at a glance and with the least possible trouble of the transitoriness of human things; of how soon the seven parts assigned by Shakespeare to man on the stage of life are played, and how inevitably come to each and all the ringing down of the curtain, let him consult the files of an old newspaper or periodical.

Here on the table of a public library is the file of a little Canadian weekly that has long ceased to be published, but which during its twenty-odd years of life furnished its readers with many an entertaining hour, drove dull care away, and at the same time threw light on many a public question of the day. It is the file of "Grip" for the year 1889.

The address label on the bound copies is itself a reminder of the flight of time, for it bears the name of "Joseph Duhamel, Q.C.," once one of the leading special pleaders at the Bar of Montreal.

The volume opens with a full-page cartoon. A clergyman with one hand thrust within the breast of his coat, is being warmly clasped by the other hand by a young woman in tuque and blanket suit. A second glance and all is clear.

It is Dr. George M. Grant, principal of Queen's University, being welcomed home by Canada.

At one side stands a lady with an address in her hand. This is Kingston, but the greetings from Canada show that Principal Grant does not belong to Kingston alone.

He was a contemporary of the late Sir William Dawson, principal of McGill; they were both born and educated in the same little town, and perhaps they represent the best that Canadian universities have yet produced.

On the next page are a couple of columns of what may be called current comment. One paragraph is very interesting when read by the light of recent events.

The Liberal party at Ottawa had then been in opposition eleven years, and it had already had three leaders —Mr. Mackenzie, who had led it into Opposition in 1878, Mr. Blake, who succeeded Mr. Mackenzie, but wearying of the up-hill and seemingly hopeless fight, had resigned, to be followed by Mr. Wilfrid Laurier, who at the time of the writing of that comment had been in the saddle two years.

His first lieutenant was Sir Richard Cartwright. This is what "Grip" wrote of them twenty years ago:

"Rumor again whispers that a change is to be made in the leadership of the Reform party at an early date. Mr. Laurier expresses himself very willing to hand over the reins to Sir Richard Cartwright at any time, but Sir Richard does not manifest much anxiety to take them.

"It is this indifference in the commanding officer that is demoralizing the Grit rank and file.

"A leader ought to be full of confidence in himself, and loaded to the very muzzle with ambition.

"Mr. Laurier is a most admirable and gifted gentleman, admired by friend and foe alike, but he is not a political pugilist.

"Sir Richard is a perfect Parliamentary John L., but he either has a want of faith in himself or the future of the party that robs him of his strength.

"What seems to be needed is a combination of the qualities of the two men. Isn't there some young Liberal looking for a job?"

If the man who penned those lines is alive, he would be compelled to admit that in this case at least he did not read aright the signs of the times; that much less did he understand the character of the man about whom he was writing.

Mr. Laurier, or Sir Wilfrid, as he is known to-day, lacking in confidence in himself, or in ambition, or not relishing a fight—what could be more false? Let anyone ask the Opposition to-day what they think about it.

If there was "any young Liberal looking for a job" he did not get it. Laurier stuck to his guns, and seven years later they battered down the citadel of power, held by his opponents for eighteen long years.

A little farther on is a page cartoon in which Mr. (now Sir William) Van Horne, and the late Hon. Thomas Greenway are the central figures. They have been indulging in cock-fighting. The fight is over, and each holds his bird in his hands.

Mr. Greenway's is crowing lustily, while Mr. Van Horne's is drooping and shows signs of collapse.

It will also be noticed that Mr. Greenway's bird bears the face of Sir. Oliver Mowat, then Premier and Attorney-General of Ontario, while that of Mr. Van Horne has a face that reminds one of Hon. Edward Blake. Near the scene of the fight is a railway crossing.

The cartoon relates to a judgment of the Supreme Court just rendered by which it was held that railways with provincial charters in Manitoba had a right to cross the track of the Canadian Pacific, which had then been in operation only four years. To-day Manitoba contains a network of railways, and at a point near Portage la Prairie the lines of three transcontinental systems cross one another. Sir Oliver was counsel for Manitoba, Mr. Blake for the railway company.

Of course, the face most frequently seen throughout this volume is that of Sir John Macdonald, and while often the faces of other public men are poorly done, and in some cases would be unrecognizable were it not for the lines beneath the picture, those of the great Premier are perfect. Even in caricature the likeness, or at least the essential features, are clearly brought out.—Montreal Standard.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

Revolution a Failure.

Hong Kong, March 14.—The viceroy of Canton yesterday issued a lengthy proclamation stating that the recent mutiny was fomented by the reform organizations, which sent emissaries to Canton. During the last few months several lots of banners, arms, and dynamite were discovered, but their owners escaped. The viceroy urges the people to have no sympathy with the disbanded soldiers.

The city now is quiet. Business people are looking forward to the visit of the Cleveland, with her party of American tourists. The Self-Government Society and various guilds resent the action of the viceroy in opposing the visit of the tourists. The people say they will lose at least $30,000 if the tourists do not come.

It is understood that the tourists are visiting Canton in spite of objections. It is understood that their visit will be spread over four days from next Tuesday, in order to prevent blocking of traffic.

Grimsby Park Sold.

Hamilton, March 14.—Grimsby Park was sold on Saturday afternoon on the order of Judge Snyder for $50,000. The order, incidentally, brings to an end years of litigation in connection with this famous watering resort. The purchaser was W. H. Wylie, representing the Beach Land Realty Co. of Cleveland, Ohio. Under the terms of the sale the purchaser, whose payments will be made on time, undertakes to build permanent roadways and other specified improvements. The park will be run as before, but on a more extensive scale.

Among those present were John Pearson of the Employers' Liability Co., and Henry Irving of Kilbourne & Irving, representing the Cottagers' Association.

Three Children Burned.

Rapid City, Man., March 14.—During the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Willis from their farm house Saturday afternoon it caught fire and their three little daughters, Vera, Florence and Violet, aged from three months to three years, were incinerated with the building.

Willis was digging a drain in the vicinity, but the fire made such rapid headway, that before he could reach it the children were beyond succor.

Suicided on Liner.

New York, March 14.—As the White Star liner Adriatic was pulling away from her pier on her trip to Europe Saturday an officer on the bridge suddenly shouted through his megaphone that a man had committed suicide by shooting himself in the head in one of the second cabin rooms, and that the body would be sent back to shore on a tug.

An Actor's Suicide.

Chicago, March 14.—Thos. Thorne, who played the part of the poet in "The Fourth Estate," at the Studebaker Theatre, hanged himself with the waist cord of his bath robe in his room at the Alexandria Hotel. While his fellow players could suggest no motive for the scicide, it was reported an unhappy love affair was the cause.

Paper Money Is Dangerous.

Washington, D.C., March 14—Germs—92,000,000 of them, of manifold variety—were found on a one dollar bill microscopically examined at the request of Representative Wiley of New Jersey, according to his statement before the House committee on banking and currency, in support of his bill to provide clean currency by burning all paper money returned to the treasury.

Among the many diseases found to be circulating about this money were: Smallpox, scarlet fever, typhoid, tuberculosis and diphtheria.

Another bill, examined by the Agricultural Department, Mr. Wiley said, disclosed the presence of 13,318,000 living bacteria.

STOMACH DISTRESS IS ENDED FOREVER

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion Vanish in Five Minutes.

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis, or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fulness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in the mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, billiousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Weak Kidneys Make Weak Bodies.

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Peterborough People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking-down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Booth's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. Peterborough cures are the proof.

Mrs. R. Duncan, of 115 McDonnel street, Peterborough, Ont., says:

"Some thirteen years ago I suffered with a severe attack of La Grippe that had up until this spring left me in a weakened and miserable condition. The kidneys had been disordered through this and became so inactive that doctors had pronounced Bright's disease and termed my case incurable. My back was very weak and the pains across the kidneys were most excruciating. I was unable to sleep through the night, and the desire to urinate was so frequent and irregular. The urine was highly coloured and contained a quantity of whitish sediment. I became so discouraged through my years of suffering that I had no care for anything. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at Wm. Madill's Pharmacy, and I tried them. The first box convinced me of their merits. I used three boxes of Booth's Kidney Pills and have been entirely cured. I am like a new person, well and strong, and can sleep through the night and awake refreshed and ready for the day."

Multi-Millionaire Suicides.

Pittsburg, March 14.—Suicide by shooting caused the death of Thomas McK. Laughlin, the assistant treasurer of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., and a brother-in-law of President Taft.

While Mr. Laughlin is reported to have died at 10 o'clock Friday morning, the coroner did not receive news of it until one p.m. Saturday, when the physician's certificate of death by cerebral hemorrhage was returned. According to the coroner, the hemorrhage was caused by a bullet.

His father's death some months ago so seriously affected him that he had to go abroad for his health, returning from Europe only a week ago.

His wealth is estimated at twenty million dollars.

Couldn't Get Concessions.

Washington, March 14.—Chas. M. Pepper of the Bureau of Trade relations of the State Department and Henry C. Emery of the tariff board of the Treasury Department returned from Ottawa Saturday and reported further regarding the failure of the negotiations so far as getting any concessions from the Canadian Government is concerned. Beyond the issuance of a statement by the State Department, that regret was felt that the mission had not been a success, no information was obtained.

Unless there are further parlays between the two Governments the question of the imposing of the maximum rates or the withholding of them will rest entirely with President Taft.

The situation regarding a tariff war with France is equally discouraging. As matters stand to-day, unless there is a change, the maximum rates will be applied to French importations into the United States after March 31.

Grey to Speak In Albany.

Albany, N.Y., March 14.—President Taft will meet Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, when he comes here on March 19. Other speakers will be Governor Hughes, Dr. Ernest Fox Nichols (president of Dartmouth College), David R. Francis (former governor of Missouri and secretary of the interior under President Cleveland).

UNNATURAL THINNESS EASILY CORRECTED.

By Clever Prescription Which Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store.

No Need to Be Thin Now as Reports Show This Method Effective.

People who are very thin and scrawny ought not to be so. Undoubtedly they are more subject to disease and contagions than the normally fleshy. Thinness is usually accompanied by weakness, and weakness subjects any one to colds, coughs, consumption, pneumonia, etc. It has been discovered, almost by accident, that tincture cadomene, when combined in a prescription with proper accelerative medicines, becomes one of the most valuable, effective, and reliable nutritive or flesh making medicines known to science. It is especially beneficial to men and women between the ages of sixteen and fifty-five, who, from lack of proper nerve force and digestion, remain undeveloped in body, limbs, arms and bust. A well-rounded symmetrical figure in man or woman indicates health, magnetism, stamina and happiness.

The reader who wishes to add from ten to forty pounds should not fail to begin with this valuable prescription:

First, obtain of any well stocked druggist, three ounces of essences of pepsin and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Shake well and take one teaspoonful before each meal, one after each meal. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Keep up this treatment regularly and of a certainty from one to three pounds will be added to the weight each week, and the general health will also improve.

NECESSARY FOR THE FAMILY

If health is to be maintained there must be at hand in every household a medicine which can be positively relied upon to regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have proven their right to first place in this regard, and already hold a secure position in the great majority of homes.

A CORRECTION

Young Man Did Not Try to Enter Bethune Street House.

In the report of the assault case in the police court on Saturday, it stated that Robt. Mellwain was at the door of the house on Bethune street, whereas he was merely passing by when the Italian Bruno ran out and struck him. Mr. Mellwain called at the Examiner this morning and stated that he was never near the door and asked that the correction be made. The Examiner apparently had been misinformed.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF STEALING FROM HOTEL

A German Rejoicing in the Celtic Name of "Kelly"---Is in the Toils Accused of Stealing Watches and Lockets---Remanded for a Week----Other Court Cases This Morning.

A man of German extraction, who goes under the Celtic name of "Larry Kelly," appeared before His Worship this morning on a charge of having stolen one hundred and twenty-six gold-filled lockets and seven gold watches from a traveller staying at the Oriental Hotel.

When Kelly was asked if he was guilty or not guilty he answered in a half-broken German dialect: "No understand." His Worship remanded Kelly until next Monday. In the meantime the Chief will investigate the case and procure evidence.

The next called was James Anderson, charged with not paying proper attention to the wants of his infant child.

It appears that Anderson's wife became ill and she was immediately sent to the hospital on Wednesday last. Since that time there was no one to take care of the child.

Anderson claimed that he had not sufficient time in order to help his child, but Constable Cochrane, in his evidence, told that the grandmother wanted to take the child, but Anderson refused. The Constable said he was instructed by the Secretary of the Children's Aid Society to investigate the matter and see that the child was cared for. Following out the instructions Mr. Cochrane found Anderson just getting over "a spree," and the child without anyone to attend to it. He placed the child in the care of its grandmother and arrested Anderson.

The Magistrate informed Anderson that he could receive an imprisonment of three years for such an offence, and remanded him for a week.

Thomas Newall, of Norwood, was charged with selling goods without a license, but Thomas didn't appear. It was a case of "Nobody there seen Newall."

The last of the "carters' stand bunch?" appeared this morning. The young man pleaded not guilty to being drunk on Thursday last. His Worship allowed him to go, strongly advising him to keep out of bad company.

Discontent In Ireland---A Legitimate Ambition For Better Conditions

The Church of the Sacred Heart was filled to overflowing last evening on the occasion of the eloquent sermon delivered by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore, in commemoration of the anticipated feast of St. Patrick. Father Fitzpatrick is an interesting and forcible speaker and his discourse last evening was one of great eloquence and could not fail to impress his hearers.

Father Fitpatrick traced the life of St. Patrick from his birth in France, down through captivity and preparation for the priesthood, followed by his consecration in Rome by Pope Celestine. He referred in beautiful language to St. Patrick's work of converting Ireland, and of the unparalleled success he met with in the establishment of schools, colleges, and convents. The efforts Ireland made to convert Europe were touched upon and Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, at some length, dealt with Ireland during the fourth, fifth and sixth centuries. He pointed out how different nations, at different times, held intellectual supremacy. Away back when history gives but scant information, this supremacy was held by China, Arabia, and Egypt, and Rome followed Greece. Italy held this supremacy in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, England in the sixteenth, France in the seventeenth, and Germany in the present century. No historian has attempted to deny that from the sixth to the ninth centuries, inclusive, this supremacy belonged to Ireland. This was Ireland's golden age.

The eloquent priest spoke of England's misgovernment of Ireland. The discontent of the Irish people, he said, sprang from a legitimate ambition to improve their lowly condition. They were anxious to eliminate the commercial stagnation, emigration and absentee landlordism. He spoke of the sad condition of the Irish people, politically and socially owing to this misrule. He also referred in eulogistic terms to Ireland's soldiers, statesmen, scholars and heroes, and drew attention to all that Ireland had done for other countries of Europe at various times.

In conclusion Father Fitzpatrick appealed to the people to be ever mindful of their glorious past, and worthy sons of their sainted forefathers, faithful to the teachings of the church.

The choir sang splendidly at Vespers, solos being taken by Miss Annie Simons and Mr. H. Quinlan.

MISS ALLAN'S ADVANCE SHOWING OF MILLINERY

To-day and all this week, Miss E. M. Allan's Millinery Store makes its bow to Spring with a beautiful Fashion Store of early headgear novelties for the season. A March blizzard ushered in this first view of Spring Millinery in Peterborough, but Miss Allan was not daunted by the unpropitious weather. The store is in gay attire for this style function, and the good ladies were out to view the special displays, which will continue all week. Millinery is Miss Allan's specialty, and so she was enabled to be first to announce her readiness for showing the new Spring models in hats.

Trolley League Champs Failed To Shake Cup

Montreal, March 13.—Berlin's Stanley Cup ambitions were fairly easily disposed of by Wanderers here on Saturday night, when the champoins of the Ontario Professional League were defeated by 7 to 3 on poor ice. Owing to the bad condition of the ice at this late season the game was not a brilliant one, and was only attended by 1,200 people, who took the result as a foregone conclusion. The ice soon cut up, and became so sticky that the puck would scarcely move, a condition which favoured the challengers, who were more used to bad ice than Wanderers.

The result was regarded as inevitable, both by the crowd and Wanderers, and the latter hardly extended ers, and the latter hardly extended themselves save at long intervals. Berlin put up a splendid defence game, but their forward line was not equal to Wanderers, and they were well taken care of most of the time. Lehmann, Berlin's goal, put up a splendid game, saving a volley of deadshots on the German nets, which started at the very opening of the game, although Berlin scored the first goal. Wanderers, however, soon got it back, and the half ended in their favour, 5 to 2. Berlin again scored first in the second half on a brilliant dash of Corbeau's, but this ended the Germans' scoring. For the rest of the game they were on the defensive most of the time, and Wanderers put in two more shots, ending 7 to 3. The play was fairly clean despite bad ice, and the penalty list was light. The line-up:

Referee, Mr. Russell Bowie; judge of play, Mr. Chauncy Kirby.

A Birthday Party will be held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) McClelland, Brock St., on Thursday, March 17th, from 4 to 7 o'clock, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of George Street Methodist Church. There will be a good programme, and refreshments will be served. Everybody welcome. Admission 15 cents. 3d58

The change in the weather has started the curling bee working again, and the rink will probably be a popular place as long as the thermometer remains around its present location. Mr. McIntosh announces that he has seven rinks in good shape and they will probably be all in demand to-night.

Two rinks of Bobcaygeon curlers are expected down to-night for a friendly game.

MR. L. F. CLARRY REPLIES TO THE LENNOX CHARGES

Was Employed by the Government Only to Search Titles And Never as Solicitor---Had Nothing to Do With the Settlement of Claims---Got Nothing Out of Claims Spoken Of.

Mr. L. F. Clarry, barister, of Hastings, was in Peterboro' on Saturday and was interviewed regarding charges of wrong-doing on the part of Mr. Jas. Dickson, P.L.S., as valuator, and himself as solicitor, preferred against them by Mr. Haughton Lennox, M.P., in the House of Commons on Friday last, in connection with the settlement of damage claims made by certain farmers living on the shores of the Trent Canal against the Government.

Nothing to Do With Claims.

Mr. Clarry said: "I am not now and never have at any time been engaged by the Government as its solicitor or in any other capacity, to either adjust or assess damage claims against the Government in connection with the drowned lands, nor did I at any time, either directly or indirectly, induce or attempt to induce Mr. Dickson to make any award either for or against any claimant in connection with those drowned lands. So far as I know, Mr. Dickson made his valuations and assessed the damages of the claimants on his own responsibility, and without any consultation with me, directly or indirectly. The Government has, however, in some cases retained me to search the titles of certain claimants to lands in respect of which damages for flooding had previously been awarded, and the fier of settlement of the claimant had previously been accepted by the Government before I was ever instructed by the Government to search the titles of such claimants.

Connection with Mr. Humphries.

"Long before I had ever searched any titles to drowned lands for the Government, Mr. Henry Humphries retained me as his solicitor to put in his claim against the Government for damages. I did put in his claim and shortly afterwards he came to my office and said that he did not want his claim pressed farther, as he was going to let the matter drop, and we agreed to cancel my engagement, without any charge for my services being made against him.

"Some time later I was asked by the Government to search the title of Mr. Henry Humphries to his lands, which he represented to consist of 200 acres in the township of Asphodel, and in respect of which he had been awarded by the late Mr. W. R. Aylesworth, P.L.S., of Belleville, $800. I searched Mr. Humphries' title to the lands in question and reported to the department that Mr. Humphries owned only 163 acres, instead of 200 as represented by him, and that the remaining 37 acres had been sold by him before he signed the offer of settlement. I further reported that Mr. Humphries claimed that the 37 acres sold were not damaged by flooding, and that he would make a statutory declaration to that effect. A few weeks later I was instructed by the department that as a result of a re-inspection by Mr. James Dickson, P.L.S., who succeeded the late Mr. Aylesworth as valuator, part of the 37 acres in question was damaged, and that the amount of the award was reduced to $240. Mr. Humphries refused to accept this amount, which I reported to the Department. This is the cause of Mr. Humphries' complaint, and the foundation of Mr. Lennox's charges, of which I court the fullest investigation.

The Graham Charge.

"In respect to the Graham charge I beg to state that Mr. Graham's brother, who was a client of mine, asked me if I would present his brother's claims to the Government for drowned lands. I told him I would, and gave him a refhiner to have signed, and advised him the course to pursue. He did not accept my services, nor did he pay me anything nor have I been asked by the Government to act on its behalf in connection with the Graham case."

ST. MICHAEL'S WIN THE O. H. A. SENIOR CHAMPIONSHIP AGAIN

Gallant Little Irishmen Beat Parkdale Canoe Club 2-1 in Overtime on Soft Ice and Won the Round by 1 Goal---Will Likely Play for the Allen Cup Now.

Toronto, March 14.—St. Michael's College are the O. H. A. senior champions again. Saturday night they beat Parkdale in twenty minutes overtime by 2 to 1, thus winning the final round by 6 to 5, the score in the first game last Wednesday night having been 4 to 4. It is now probable that St. Michael's will play Queen's University, who successfully defended the Allen Cup against the Cliffsides, of Ottawa on Saturday night last, some day this week in Kingston.

As in the junior and intermediate series this season, the finalists in the senior series were very evenly matched. A draw in the first game of the round and a 2 to 1 score in overtime in the second is sufficient evidence of the fact. Unquestionably St. Michael's College played at a disadvantage on Saturday night owing to the slow ice, but that makes their hard-earned victory the more creditable. The collegians are a fast ice team. All things considered they are not very much speedier than Parkdale on any kind of going, but their team play, which has won most of their games this season, works to better advantage on keen surface. There are no outstanding stars on the St. Mike's outfit, but they are a well-balanced smooth going team, hard to beat under any conditions. Parkdale have no excuses; they were fairly beaten under a critical and impartial referee, on ice which was to all intents and purposes made to their order.

The Paddlers showed commendable spirit in entering the senior series with a team which did not appear to have much of a chance to win its district, let alone get to the final. When they were in danger of losing two of their best men, the mainstays of their team, they signified no intention of dropping out. They battled their way to the top by sheer pluck, backed by an indomitable club spirit which has been an admirable factor in the successes which Parkdale has achieved on land, ice and water. They have come from behind in almost every one of their winning hockey games and are honoured in their final defeat.

There was so much water on the ice on Saturday night that the playing surface was almost submerged but the puck slid better than in heavy slush and enabled the teams to play rather more combination than in the recent games at Mutual street. The water splashed over the heads of the players at times and all were drenched. The pace from beginning to end was terrific, neither team appearing to suffer from exhaustion, and both were going at top speed from end to end. Neither may be said to have had the better of the play on the whole or for any extended period of the game. It was a thrilling struggle, with no end of excitement. At half-time the score was 1 to 0 in favour of St. Michael's, but Parkdale hung on and got a goal with only a minute to play, making the count 1 to 1 at the expiration of the hour. In the first period of overtime neither side scored, but St. Mike's got the winning goal in the first five of the second ten minutes of overtime. Lane was on the fence at the time. When the teams changed ends again there was a Titanic struggle and both sides narrowly missed getting goals.

Interesting Presentations Were Made By The T. A. S.

Several interesting presentations took place at the meeting of the T. A. S. yesterday afternoon. The gold medal offered by the Society for the member securing the greatest number of new candidates was won by Mr. Maurice Ahearne, and was presented to him yesterday by Rev. Father McColl. Mr. Ahearne also was the winner of the prize, a pair of gold cuff links, presented by Mr. Nicholas Bibby for the member securing the greatest number of candidates and keeping them in good standing. The Duffus prize presented by Ald. J. J. Duffus, for the member securing the second greatest number of new candidates, was presented to Mr. Jos. Picard, senior.

Mr. Geo. H. Cain made an interesting donation to the Society in the shape of a Father Matthew medal, which had been given his father by the great temperance worker, whose name will always be remembered in Ireland. The medal is quite large and an inscription upon it reads that the holder promises to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor, except as a medicine and to do all in his power in the interests of temperance.

NOTES OF THE WEST

Mr. Fred L. Roy Writes in an Interesting Manner of Medicine Hat, Winnipeg and Other Western Centres — Is Still Loyal.

THE WINNIPEG 'SPIEL

Mr. Fred Roy, of the Roy Studio, who is enjoying a trip with Mrs. Roy, through the West, contributes the following notes by the way to the Examiner:

As you will see by the above we are in Medicine Hat, "The Gas Town." It is a hustling, progressive town, with the tpvical western spirit. The buildings, especially the new municipal post office and banks would be a credit to a place many times its size. Everything is run by natural gas, lighting, heating, cooking, etc, at a cost of 5 cents per 1000 ft. for manufacturing purposes, and 15 cents per 1.000 less 10 per cent. for domestic use. $5.00 per month will cover all lighting, heating and cooking expenses for an average household. The large brickyards in the vicinity of the town all use it in their ovens, also the water works pump house to run their gas engines, and to generate steam for the boilers. The American settlers still continue to pour into this country. Three trainloads are expected here next month, as there is to be a sale of school lands some time between then and June. The local land office is to be made an agency which means that homestead entries can be here made without being telegraphed to Lethbridge and that the district will be much enlarged.

Winnipeg is a wonderful city. Fine big hotels and buildings, broad streets splendid stores and excellent street car service. Portage avenue appears to be the coming street. Most of the financial houses being on the Main street.

We met a great many Peterborough people there, all of whom appear to be delighted with the city, but were all anxious for news of the old town. The great bonspiel was just over. It brought thousands to the city from all over the West. The record of Cassidy's Kids stands as a wrold's record, fifty-six straight wins.

Brandon is very much on the map at present, the annual stock show and fair being in progress.

All along the line we have met Peterborough people, all in love with the great west, but loyal as ever to the old town.

We expect to leave for Lethbridge to-morrow and from there into the mountains. The snow slides have been terrible, but you have doubtless received full reports of them.—Sincerely yours,

FRED L. ROY.

THE CUP BACK

Examiner Trophy Will be Presented to the Strathconas This Evening.

As they say down in Montreal, "The cup has come back." The Examiner trophy, emblematic of the City League championship which will be presented to the Strathconas at the annual banquet in the Oriental Hotel to-night, was brought back by the Secretary from Lakefield on Saturday night.

The trophy which has been in existence for five years resembles its famous rival the Stanley cup, inasmuch as it bears many marks of the teams through whose hands it passed. The trophy is liberally scratched up with the names of the Strathconas and Lakefield players.

CROSSED THE ICE

Drove Across Stony Lake on Friday Afternoon Last.

Mr. Graham, of Lakefield, and proprietor of the summer resort "Vismede", Stony Lake, drove across Stony Lake, on Friday afternoon. Mr. Graham stated that the ice was still quite safe and people were still crossing on it. He paid a visit to his summer resort and found everything alright. No damage had been done by the winter's storms as yet.

PATTERN HATS AND PATRIOTISM.

Spring is with us again; if not, in all its vernal glory of leaf and flowers, it is here as far as the ladies are concerned. Easter is at hand and that season to the female heart—and head—means another term in the kaleidoscope of fashion; in change of attire. Paris, the gay, the original, the dainty in matters of millinery and modiste mode, sets the pace. Cities, like London, New York and Montreal, take their fashion suggestions from the French capital, and not only the fashions, but the articles in which the genius of the raging mode is embodied. We are a race of imitators in more than fashion. As wealthy residents of London, New York, Montreal and, possibly Toronto, get their hats and gowns from Paris so do the smaller places emulate the greater. It seems to be the fact that there are many Peterborough people who, when they want something which they think distinguished in the way of gowns or hats, or, indeed, numerous other articles, go to Toronto, either in person or by mail order.

Here is where the moral comes in. These persons under the delusion that they get better, and more stylish articles at a lesser value in Toronto violate the principle of local patriotism. Patriotism, like charity, finds its proper and laudable beginning at home. One of the chief elements of local patriotism is the spirit of co-operation that is exemplified in the injunction, "patronize home industries." Our local merchants in various lines of business depend on others in trade. The dry goods merchants must depend in part upon the help of the grocer, and the dependence is mutual. This principle extends into every department of trade and industry. But one gaining money by the help of all the others, who goes to outside places to spend his money, instead of at home, is committing a moral wrong, outraging the spirit of cooperation, fair play and local patriotism. As a rule, the whole of our citizenship thrives by the help and cooperation of everybody else. And thus every citizen owes it to everybody else to recognize the obligations of returning favour for favour, advantage for advantage. This is not done by spending the money made in the city, out of the city. A man wants printing; he may be a lawyer, or a grocer or a blacksmith, and he sends for it to Toronto or Montreal. He is thus unfairly treating the local printing establishments, all of which have newspapers attached. Three hundred days in the year the newspapers are working to build up the city; to attract new industries; to increase population and develop local trade. In a word, the newspapers work to increase the sum total of prosperity in which the lawyer or the grocer has his share. On the principles of fair play the local printing establishment is entitled to share the profits derived from the expenditure of money it has helped to create. This is only an illustration of a condition that may be applied to every branch of industry, calling or occupation in the city. Each helps the other to make money and prosper, and each owes all the others the duty, of reciprocation. The recognition of this duty in practice constitutes local patriotism and involves the relation of pattern hats and patriotism. We do our money making at home by the help of everybody else; we should do our spending of it at home in the interest of those who have helped us make it, without whose help we could not have made it. In the tug of war with fate and circumstance, we must all pull together to succeed. To build up Peterborough we must have both unity of aim and of action. As each brick in the wall has its place and only derives value as a component part of the whole, so each citizen in the community has his place, and the integrity of his position and its value depends upon the relation he holds to all the members of the community. He, doing his duty conjointly with all the others, all doing the same in their place, is what constitutes the cooperation that is the most important expression of local patriotism.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Prof. Skelton, of Queen's University, holds that the German people themselves will bring Germany's Dreadnought ambitions to an end; they will revolt against the crushing burden of taxation necessary to enter into competition in naval construction with Great Britain. In every recent bye-election the party that has opposed Dreadnought expenditure has won sweepingly.

It is stated that a general election is imminent in the Province of Manitoba. It looks like it. The Opposition is stirring up scandals like that of Premier Roblin's relation to a sand company, and the true story that a government employee was forced to vote and work Tory on pain of losing his situation. The government is stifling all inquiry into things like these, and it looks like a general election.

An example of the waste of public money which is entailed in the demands of certain Opposition members for returns, is, says the Ottawa Free Press, given in a return presented to the House of Commons concerning expenditures upon wharves and piers in the Maritime Provinces and in British Columbia. The demand for the return was moved by Mr. Barnard of Victoria, B.C., in February last year. The result is a bulky return of 634 pages, which has taken over a year to prepare and which will never be heard of again, even if the mover has the temerity to read it through.

The plans of the Liberal government for a Canadian Navy are popular in British Columbia. At a recent public meeting under the auspices of the Navy League a resolution was adopted, endorsing the permanent policy of the government as being calculated in the long run to afford the greatest measure of aid to the Empire, but urging that an emergency exists at the present moment, which necessitates an immense additional contribution of Dreadnoughts or cash. The Colonist, the chief Conservative organ endorses the naval policy of the government in a lengthy editorial.

Many persons with the clearest of consciences, are greatly perturbed as to what will come to them, when Halley's comet whisks over the face of our earth. On May 18th next the comet is due to collide with the earth. But this collision will not be a very serious affair. Very probably, but for the astronomers' calculations, no one will know what is happening. The earth only passes through the tail of the comet, and this is very thin, as may be judged from the statement of a scientist that the whole comet might be packed into the space of a suit case. The substance, if anything, so ethereal and diaphonous can be called a substance, is so unsubstantial that our everyday atmosphere is a London fog in comparison. So there is no danger of the whole world going to Halleygan when the comet brushes over good old steady-going mother earth.

CHESTERFIELDIAN ROYALTY.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

King Edward is more than a mere monarch; he is a personality. And this personality is distinguished by a polish that has brought even Paris to offer its meed of homage. So thinks the Paris Figaro, which asks:

"Is this sovereign a hypnotist that after subordinating the world of European diplomacy to himself, he can extend his sway to a turbulent welter of Socialists, aristocrats, Radicals and Conservatives, all at war over a budget revolutionary in principle and confiscatory in practice? Is the world witnessing a revival in the most subtle from of a personal rule unpractised by any English monarch since Charles the First lost his head?"

Certainly King Edward always was popular in France, but now he appears to have captured the newspapers. Listen to the Gaulois:

"The King of England has made himself the model of deportment for the whole Anglo-Saxon world by assimilating the courtliness of the Latin type of behaviour with the conditions of an English environment. Time was when the best born noble in all France was a boor until he had been to Versailles and studied etiquette at the court of Louis XIV.; but, in our time it is as strictly true that no one is civilized until he has caught the manner of the British Sovereign. He is refining the world."

And the Gaulois proceeds to discover a new function exercised by Britain's King. On his account the polite world repairs to London for its lesson in deportment instead of to Paris and therefore the British peerage capture the majority of the American heiresses, who would otherwise become Bourbon duchesses. The Paris journal thinks this is good for the heiresses, because they thus get manners, "which they sadly need."

But if they get the manners of the Castellanes, for example, there may be some question as to the value of the acquisition.

A FACTITIOUS MINIMUM TARIFF.

(Montreal Witness.)

The position of Canada is analogous to that of France in the matter of tariff arrangements with the United States. All three countries have adopted the maximum and minimum system with a view to securing concessions from other protectionist countries. It allows an opening for the application of the 'dickering' policy. But while the Canadian and French minimum rates are appreciable reductions on their tariff as these existed before the adoption of the double system, the United States plan, as worked out by the Aldrich-Payne Act, was generally to let the old high duties, intended to be exclusive in operation, remain as they were, call them the minimum, and add from 25 to 45 per cent. and call that the maximum tariff. Reductions were made here and there, in the schedules, which merely affected articles classed as raw material required by United States manufacturers. The whole alleged revision has been minutely analyzed, the results have been given to the public, and these are completely understood by the governments of Canada and of France. Hence, the difficulties both are facing in the effort to come to an understanding with the United States, whose minimum tariff is a transparent pretence. This has been abundantly proved by Mr. Richard Washburn Child, an expert who has shown it up conclusively, in 'Everybody's Magazine' for March. He takes Schedule 'K,' which fixes the duties on wool, as an example of how the revised tariff is loaded with fol and even with noxious and iniqu s provisions. President Taft, before his conversion, described this schedule as "indefensible." Not only does it stifle foreign imports, but it allows a privileged class of manufacturers a competition-killing advantage over another class. It accepts false assumptions as facts whereon to establish unreasonable duties which bear heavily upon the cost of necessities. It cheats everybody except the one interest that had the pull in framing the schedule, placing disproportionate burdens upon woollen products of least value. It is a gigantic compound of graft. The governments of Canada and France know very well all about the fraudulent nature of the Aldrich-Payne tariff, its intricacies of 'jokers' and 'snakes', and, if they refuse to accept its hollow pretence of a minimum scale, it is because they do not propose to be practised upon by open and apparent humbug. The epithet is not too severe, because the trusts, who were the actual revisers of the tariff, manipulated it so as to crush competitors, prohibit importations, rob the consumers and cheat the government of revenue.

Miners May Strike.

Cincinnati, March 14.—"The miners are not talking strike, and don't want to strike, but if a strike must follow a failure by this conference to agree upon a new wage scale, 800,000 men and every industry dependant upon coal will be affected."

This was the explanation offered last night by T. L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America of a statement credited to him earlier to the effect that a strike was sure to follow the refusal of the coal mine owners of the central competitive field to meet the demands of the men. President Lewis declared that his remarks had been misconstrued.

Coming close upon the heels of the failure of the scale committee of the conference to reach an understanding, and the reference of the entire dispute to a sub-committee, the alleged threat of the miners' executive caused quite a flurry. The scale sub-committee will meet on Monday.

Queen's Own Pageant.

Toronto, March 14.—George I. Riddell, secretary of Queen's Own Reunion, received a communication on Saturday that Mr. Henderson of London, England, who is arranging the pageants for the reunion in June, will arrive in Toronto about the middle of April. Property Commissioner Harris has placed the north St. Lawrence market at the disposal of the regiment from May till June 17, for the holding of rehearsals. Four hundred children in uniform will take part in the program, and hundreds of ladies have signified their willingness to appear in the pageants.

Newspaper all over Canada have been enlisted in the work of promoting the celebration, and Secretary Riddell has many telegrams and letters from them asking for details.

Higher Pay for Fishermen.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 14.—The fish packers, allied with the International Longshoremen's Association, have signed a two-year wage agreement with the Lake Erie Fish Packers' and Producers' Association, calling for an increase in pay of $7.50 a month for licensed tugmen in the business. Fishermen get 25 cents additional a day.

Firemen Killed or Injured.

Boston, March 14.—One fireman was killed and one hurt by a falling wall, and $200,000 damage was done in a blaze which destroyed the workshop of the Boston Elevated Railway.

At Jamestown, N.Y., one fireman was burned to death and several others injured at a blaze which destroyed the Gorky shoe factory; loss $100,000.

Despondent, Slashes Throat.

Toronto, March 14.—After cutting his throat with a razor in his room, Andrew W. Roulston, aged 28, of 253 Borden street, walked to his brother's home at 210 Borden street, at 7.30 Saturday evening. He will probably live. Roulston had to walk almost a block and cross the street. As he was bleeding profusely from his wounds, he left a trail of blood.

He has been dispondent for some time. After he had inflicted the terrible injuries, he apparently repented and went out for help. The trachea, or windpipe, was cut and four stitches had to be put in to close it. Besides that, four arteries were severed. In all 21 stitches were necessary to close the gashes.

He was taken in Harry Ellis' ambulance to the Western Hospital, where Dr. H. A. Beatty attended him. He is married.

Four Saved From Wreck.

Seward, Alaska, March 14.—Worn and exhausted by almost incredible hardships and bearing the marks of weeks of battling with icy gales, four of six men who, on Jan. 7 left the wreck of the Farallon in Cook Inlet, and in a small rowboat undertook the desperate task of rowing to procure relief for their companions, were brought into Seward just before midnight Saturday night on the revenue cutter Tachoma, which for almost three weeks has been searching for them. The Tachoma also brings word that the other two men are alive and safe.

Why Run Risks?

A Canadian author wrote an anthem for a recent celebration in Toronto.

Toward the end of the exercises, when the people were going out a few at a time, the author rushed to the conductor and said:

"Is it over?"

"Practically."

"But, great Scott, man, they haven't sung my anthem!"

"Well," said the conductor, "so long as the people are going out peacefully and quietly, why sing it at all?"—Saturday Evening Post.

ult of the meeting that even- n outcome of views express- annual meeting of the Lib- ciation at Norwood. At the wish of the Liberal Association he had invited Mr. Clarke, K.C., of Ontario West, and Dr. Clarke, of the optimistic and breezy West, to address the electors of that vicinity, that evening, but unfortunately Dr. Clarke, from the Canadian West, was indisposed and unable to be with them. He regretted his inability to be present, because he was one of the cleverest speakers from the prairie provinces, and it would have been a pleasure to those present to have heard him, but Mr. O'Connell, of Peterborough, would take his place, and so far as oratory was concerned, nothing would be lost.

A Fortunate Country.

Canada was a very fortunate country. It had been blessed the past dozen years or more with the best government Canada had ever had, and the result was easily to be seen. In other words the proof of the pudding was in the eating. The population of Canada, during the Laurier administration had increased between two and one-half and three millions. The trade had increased three-fold, or from $240,000,000 to $700,000,000, and with the result that there was but little now heard of the question of protection. Only those who wanted some particular change in the tariff for their own selfish interests mooted the question at all, so that issue was practically a thing of the past. He himself, believed that the tariff should be dealt with by a commission. There was no doubt but that incongruities would arise from time to time in a growing country, and if dealt with by a commission the rights of the consumer and the rights of the manufacturer could be fully inquired into, and he believed a more intelligent consideration would be given to any amendment that might be required than could possibly be given by members of the Government as busily occupied as they usually were. He hoped some day that the tariff would be entirely removed from political discussion and that the amendments would be made by those who have no particular axe to grind, so that their decisions would be of a non-political character. He referred to the revenue of the country having trebled in the last twenty years, and doubled within the last twelve years. The revenue was just what the people make it. During the Conservative regime the revenue was small because the people did not have the money to spend. In those days neither the Government or the public had any money to spend. The public had no employment and hardly any wages. To-day there was plenty of employment at good wages, and the Government had money to expend to develop the great resources of the country. To-day the ladies did not have to wear one dress three or four seasons. There was hardly a sufficient number of dressmakers to make the dresses required. They do not need to wear a hat three seasons, and the money expended on "feathers and frippery" and similar luxuries gave to the government a surplus of round one hundred millions per year. The strings of trade had been loosened, the mouldering branches had been removed and prosperity prevailed form the Atlantic to the Pacific. There was some talk of trade relations being disturbed between Canada and the United States, but he hardly thought it possible although some times the unexpected happened. He referred to the importance of maintaining friendly trade relations with the United States without lowering our dignity. For himself he did not think that a country that sold to Canada last year 188 millions of dollars would want to quarrel with a country that was so good a customer. During the past year Canada had sold to the United States about 88 millions of dollars worth of goods, and usually the business of a country is the same as the business of an individual, and as a rule a good business man does not quarrel with one of his best customers and he thought the United States would find some way of averting a conflict that would just as seriously injure the United States as it would Canada.

Their opponents had charged them with increasing the expenditure. This was quite true. The expenditure had been increased. The great resources of Canada had to be developed. This could not be done without expenditure. The Canadian Pacific Railway cost Canada in the days when everything cost half as much as to-day, 100 millions in cash, land, and in constructed railway, and the Transcontinental from Monkton to Prince Rupert could not be built without increasing the expenditure. Each municipality, each county, each province, had increased its expenditure to meet the requirements and wants of each community, so with the Dominion, and if we got value for our expenditure, which he believed we did, we would have no reason to complain

Improvements in District.

"If we look around us," remarked Mr. Stratton, we will see an expenditure that has been made in our own locality. Take the new concrete dam at Buckhorn, and we have something to show for the $75,000 that has been expended in not only building a new concrete dam, but a concrete bridge as well. And if we look to Burleigh we will see a contract has been let for a new cement dam to replace the deceased wooden structure. And at Burleigh you will see a new dam and an iron bridge that will have cost the country about $75,000 as well, which will be a benefit to this community and a permanent structure that will last for ages. If we look to Young's Point we will see the dam, approach piers, and bridge that have cost about $30,000. If we look at Lakefield we will see new cement docks that have cost in the neighbourhood of $12,000, and there would have been a still further expenditure if there had been a settlement arrived at between the Government, G. T. R., and the village, all interested in the extension of the main wharf. If we take the lock houses that have been erected between Peterborough and Lovesick you will find an expenditure of about $10,000. If you take the expenditure that the Government relieved the county of in the taking over of the several bridges, we would find a capitalized expenditure of about $50,000, or $2,500 per annum for ever. If we take the new rest piers that had to be built there would be another $10,000, and it must be remembered that all these things had been done without any scandal arising, without any charges of wrong doing being made, and he believed that while Mr. McClellan was human and as liable to err as all humanity, he deserved credit for the way in which he managed the works that had been placed in his charge. He believed that the men under him tried to do the best they could, but errors of judgment would be made as much in Government work as in individual energy. These works had all been constructed without any charges of wrong doing insinuated, and he was glad to see it so. There was nothing to be gained for the Government or for their officials in allowing any wrong doing. The moneys expended in deepening the canals, in improving the harbours and constructing the railways, was all for the benefit of Canada. In 1896 there were only 17,000 miles of railways in Canada. In 1910 there were now 25,500, with thousands of miles projected and under construction.

We would soon have three transcontinental railways in the Canadian Pacific, in the Grand Trunk Pacific and in the Canadian Northern, and before the completion of the railways there would be sufficient traffic for them all. The transportation problem was a difficult problem, one of the most important that the Government had to deal with, and the expenditure necessary was great, and would be greater as the country advanced.

The Trent Canal.

He hoped to see the Trent Waterway completed shortly. Work was progressing on the eastern sections, and when the northern section was completed the long-talked-of Trent Canal would bear fruit. The expenditure under capital income and revenue for the Trent Canal from June 30, 1896, to March 1, 1910, had, under the Laurier administration, been $7,249,378.38, and there had been expended on this work, prior to confederation, $309,371.00, and since confederation to the advent of the Laurier government, about $1,229,408, and he contrasted the progress of the work during the past ten years to that made during the previous regimes.

A Tempest in a Tea Pot.

He then took up the charges that had been made in the House, and which had appeared in the papers that day, in which it was charged that Mr. Dickson, the Government commissioner in the settlement of drowned lands claims, had acted in connivance with the Government's agent, Mr. Clarry, at Hastings. Mr. Stratton said that he knew Mr. Dickson very well, and that he had called up Mr. Dickson at Fenelon Falls, and had asked him in regard to the truthfulness of the charges, and Mr. Dickson had replied that he courted the fullest inquiry, that his judgment, wherever he had settled a claim, had been his honest judgment, and in no single instance in the whole of his career had he ever connived with any one, or given a decision contray to his conscientious convictions. He wanted the fullest investigation into the whole matter and it would be found that in no single instance had he received one cent from any source other than his salary from the Government for doing his duty, which he had honestly performed. Mr. Dickson was a surveyor and was appointed to act as valuator of the damaged lands. He was a conscientious Scotchman and he believed an honest man. He, Mr. Stratton, would be greatly surprised from what he knew of him if it was found that he was in collusion with any body. However, an investigation would be made by the Government, which is courted by all parties concerned. Mr. Graham stated that an investigation would be proceeded with immediately, Mr. Stratton said that he had not any doubt that the headlines in the newspapers were of a sensational character, but there was no doubt in his mind that there had been an honest and straightforward adjustment by Mr. Dickson in all the cases that he knew anything of. He thought that many of the flood sufferers in Peterborough county were still suffering from Mr. Dickson's decisions, and he did not think that Mr. Dickson would ever die from enlargement of the heart in overpaying claims that he knew of, and he was satisfied there was no collusion between Mr. Dickson and anybody else. From what he knew about Mr. Clarry and Mr. Dickson, son, Mr. Stratton was confident that an investigation would show no wrong doing.

The Lumsden Inquiry.

There were also insinuations being made in connection with the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific. The facts as he could recollect were that Mr. Lumsden, who had been appointed chief engineer, resigned last summer on the alleged ground that he had lost faith in his subordinate engineers, in excessive classification for rock work excavation. Shortly after Parliament opened last November the matter was brought before it. A committee was appointed, composed of four Liberal and three Conservatives. The committee met and at its first meeting Mr. Lumsden disappointed the Conservative members of the committee when he stated "he had no charges to make of bad faith or wrong doing against any of the engineers." In this expression he spoilt the hope of the Conservatives in making a scandal and political capital out of the resignation. They, however, hoped to make political capital in another way. This time they wanted to appoint the counsel. In other words they desired minority control to name the lawyer who would act for the public, or they proposed not to act at all. The Liberal members of the committee nominated Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., ex-judge of the Supreme Court, and a Conservative. To this the Conservative members of the Committee refused assent, and then decided not to act at all, so that they would be able to say the investigation was conducted by Liberals alone; that it was a partizan finding of the committee, and hence unsatisfactory. No government responsible to the people in this country or any other country ever gave control of a committee to an opposition. It would be a farce, but how much greater farce was it in this case, when lawyers of such promise and prominence as Mr. Crothers, of West Elgin, Mr. Barker of East Hamilton, and Mr. Lennox, of South Simcoe, were tht Conservative members of the committee. The legal knowledge of these three Conservative lawyers and their partizan zeal for "digging and mud slinging" were well known, and all they desired, apparently, was to pose as martyrs, or as victims of the brute majority. The Conservative members of the committee had disobeyed the order of parliament to serve on the committee, and had thrown the whole onus on the Liberal members while they would endeavour to appear as martyrs. He, Mr. Stratton, thought that in the attitude they had taken in this matter they were poor watch dogs, as all that could be shown in any event was difference of opinion between engineers. The opinions of engineers, like the opinions of lawyers had differed in the past, and he believed there would be differences of opinion between them for all time.

Mr. Stratton said that he had not intended making his remarks so long, that he would leave the discussion of the naval question to Mr. Clarke and to Mr. O'Connell. The Government was justified in taking steps to protect Canada. They had had a surplus every year since the Laurier Government had been in power, with the exception of the first year, which they were not responsible for, as they had to assume the condition of things as the Conservative Government had left them. He was quite in accord with the Government's policy, by which we would be employing our own material, our own men, our own resources, and the skill of our own people, as Mr. Borden had put it, and that we would eventually lay the foundation to assist materially in the defence of the empire. As Mr. Borden had said before he changed his basis "that policy was truly national, and that there was something inspiring about it. It was businesslike and sounded well.

In conclusion, he said he was glad to see such a large gathering and apologized for taking up so much of the time of the meeting.

Mr. Clarke's Address.

On rising to speak, Mr. Clarke was given a most flattering reception. He was pleased to be present, the only hesitation he had being that he had never learned to like making a speech but there was no use trying to refuse Mr. Stratton; he simply had to come. "There are two Clarkes in the House," the speaker remarked. "I am the black Clarke. The other one's the red Clarke. The "red" Clarke is a man to be proud of." I am not altogether a stranger here. I originally belonged to Victoria County and I remember having to make portages at Buckhorn when making boat trips. I am glad to hear of the improvements made at that point." Mr. Clarke jocularly remarked that he now represented the banner riding of the Province. He saw before him one face that he remembered in years gone by. That was Mr. Hull, one of the oldest and best known residents of Lakefield. He was also delighted to see so many ladies present.

Speaking of the Lumsden inquiry, as chairman of the committee making the investigation, he did not think it propor to speak of the charges. However, he would say that they were not serious. Mr. Lumsden had been chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific, with numerous engineers under him. He lost confidence in the men and resigned. He did not lose confidence in the engineers' integrity, but it was simply a difference of opinion as to the classification of certain features of the work. It was not a matter of wrong doing.

The Naval Question.

The speaker went on to speak of the Navy Bill. The question of a Canadian navy was an important one, he said, and for two reasons. In the first place it was the launching of a scheme, incurring a considerable charge and a permanent and perpetual one. Too much time could not be given to its consideration. Secondly, Canada was growing very rapidly and its ports were becoming important. The question was, whether or not, these were to be protected. That was the colonial side. "The Canadian side," he said, "is whether, as loyal Canadians, are we going to help Great Britain, to whom we owe so much. We have a militia and we have our shipyards at Halifax where ships are built for the protection of our fisheries, but beyond that nothing has been spent on defences of a naval character. Canada should bear a portion of the expense of the Empire. Australia and Cape Colony both offered contributions. Canada has given nothing, save her militia. In 1902, at the conference in London, it was suggested that Canada make a contribution to the Old Land. Sir Wilfrid Laurier objected. He said the money should be under control of Canadians. In 1907 another conference was held at which it was suggested that Canada should do something to assist England in its naval defence. When there was a general fear of war last year, all parties in Canada endorsed the resolution to help in its own defence. Now the opposition says the government is not carrying out the resolution. Mr. Borden wants to send a contribution, sufficient to furnish two Dreadnoughts. It was agreed that two ministers should go to England in connection with the matter and Sir Frederick Borden and Mr. Brodeur went there for that purpose. It was pointed out that according to the resolution, Canada should provide means for her own defence, which would be a defence for Canada, and an adjunct to the British navy. Two schemes were suggested. The one, incurring a cost of $3,000,000 annually, providing eleven vessels, was the one chosen. With steel at our doors, a strong ship building industry could be built up. Mr. Fielding states that this amount can be raised without adding one cent to the public debt from the revenues of the country."

"Have we anything to defend?" the speaker asked. "If not it was foolish to go to the expense of a navy. If we have nothing to defend, there is no necessity of a navy. But man was made to fight and as long as he has that disposition, he must be prepared to defend himself. In days when land was less valuable, protection wasn't needed. It was, when the value of property increased that protection was required. Without England's navy, we wouldn't enjoy the privileges we now have, nor would we have the great British Empire. That great heritage of theirs is ours, all by reason of the protection of that Empire. We also have a great heritage here in the Dominion. We have fine provinces, inhabited by good people. No man can be born under better auspices than in Canada. We have a heritage and it is worth defending."

Speaking of the dangers that beset Canada, Mr. Clarke said, "The United States with her great expenditure on naval equipment is a menace. The most serious of all is Germany with its millions expended in building a navy. Germany sees England with her colonies loyal to her, while she, herself, is crowded with no place for the overflow. It is a wonderful tribute to England with its somewhat limited population and resources, that she holds the position she does."

Canada, the speaker believed, was taking a wise precaution, in doing something to help itself. Three millions was not too great an expenditure. With the ships manned by Canadians no better service could be given. Mr. Monk stated that a plebiscite should be taken. The time for that was the 29th of March last when all were unanimous that something should be done. The people were in accord with it. It was a reasonable beginning. Mr. Maclean, a Conservative member, suggested that a Dreadnought be built too. There was nothing to hinder that being done later on. He hoped that there would never be the necessity of firing a gun, save in practice, and he believed there was less likelihood when the Empire was found united and prepared.

Mr. Clarke stated that he wished to refute the statement of certain disreputable persons to the effect that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and French Canadians were disloyal to England. There was no time that the relation between the Motherland and Canada was so loyal as under Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The French Canadians were loyal to Great Britain and realized that the prosperity of Canada was best established by the building up of the British Empire. Every Liberal loved Sir Wilfrid and every Conservative respected him. No man was more honoured than the Premier of Canada and he hoped the people would not listen to insulting insinuations of certain disreputable persons.

Mr. O'Connell.

Mr. D. O'Connell, of Peterborough, the last speaker, after stating that he did not propose to take up the time of the audience very long and making a few jocular references to the previous speakers said that the people of Canada should be thankful for the liberty of speech and freedom of conscience that prevailed throughout the land. Mr. Stratton was enterprising. During the heat of an election campaign when men's minds were liable to be a little distorted was not the best time to discuss the political questions of the day. He believed that fair minded patriotic citizens wished to arrive at some solution of the problems that occurred and Mr. Stratton's plan was a good one.

There was a true dividing line, a line of cleavage and demarcation between the two parties. It was not a mere sordid thing of money. The great idea and ideal of the Liberal party was its absolute abiding faith in the people of Canada, in the country itself. In 1837 when the country stood on the threshhold of national existence Papineau and Mackenzie and others who had faith in the welfare of the Canadian people and believed that they should take responsible government depending upon their own resources and responsibilities had even to go to the extent of open rebellion to support their opinions. However, the brightest gem in the constitution was established. The great principle of the Liberal party was national autonomy, one imperial, with the only links those of love and attachment to the mother country.

Mr. O'Connell paid a stirring tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier for his work as prime minister and remarked that only one or two great men come to the fore in the life of a nation. Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier were the two who should be regarded as the master minds of Canadian history. No one had done more for his country than Sir Wilfrid had done and was doing for Canada.

The meeting was brought to a close with the usual cheers.

INVESTORS!!!

MONEY-MAKING OPPORTUNITIES

In our advertisement of last week we informed you that we were opening a department for the handling of syndicate accounts. By the word "syndicate" we mean the joining together of a number of small cash accounts and the utilization of the total sum for the investment of money in New York stocks. By this method the small investor obtains a footing equivalent to the man with a large bank account. For instance, if a man has $100 to invest, the least he could get would be ten shares of stock, and his $100 would protect him ten points. A market such as we have at present, is capable of moving as much as twenty-five points, although this seldom occurs. Therefore the small investor would be wiped out of his money and have nothing to show for it. By putting his $100 into a pool and operating the pool along conservative lines, large percentage profits can be made. This is what we are doing.

Send us what money you can spare, and we will look after it for you. We will do the buying and selling, notifying clients at the end of each week what has been done. Sometimes the markets are not active enough or are in an unsafe condition, in which case we may use our judgment and not operate. In this case we allow our clients 6 per cent. interest on the amount of money to their credit. This is better than you can do in any other line of business, and have your money available. Credit balances can always be withdrawn by making draft on us, by telephoning us or calling in and getting a cheque.

The following are a few instances of what money will do, operating in stocks, taking the range of prices of yesterday, the 11th inst., as an example, the amount of money in use being $500 in each case, the profits being for the day alone:—

By selling 20 Union Pacific ..... $60 could have been made
By selling 20 Reading .... 40 could have been made
By selling 20 United States Steel. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Southern Pacific .. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Smelters .... 40 could have been made

It will be seen that $40 is the lowest profit on any one of the above six mentioned stocks, and $40 in a day on a $500 investment means enormous profit. Figure it out for yourself. While this percentage cannot be made daily, yet an average of over 50 per cent. is assured on absolutely safe grounds.

Send us a deposit and let us show you how it will grow.

By having a large number of accounts, we will make a great deal of money for our clients, and by so doing will make a fair return on the work involved, out of our commissions. We charge the regular brokerage commission of one-eighth each way for buying and selling, that is for every 100 shares, $12.50 for buying and $12.50 for selling.

Put some of your money with us, and do it now. The market is in a splendid trading condition, and small amounts will grow very rapidly. You can, as we have pointed out before, always withdraw if you do not care to leave your bal All we ask you to do is to let us demonstrate to you be done in the money making line by conservative in New York stocks.

Write us and open an account to-day. You ca money faster in any other line of business. You your money out and have it placed at anything like ing power that you will have here.

COBALT STOCKS

Cobalt stocks show signs of greater activity. There traordinary demand for good Cobalt properties, and of Cobalt mining properties by American capitalists.

Temiskaming recently struck very rich ore at t level, demonstrating the fact that the Cobalt camp shallow one, and that this mining region is proving t one of the mining wonders of the world. The gold dis the Porcupine district are also turning out wonderfull strongly recommend the purchase of Temiskaming, Co Gifford and Beaver. We carry these on margin.

Write, telephone or wire us your orders. Let us money. We have done it for others.

A TALENTED WOMAN

A Short Story.

As she drew off her long coat she noticed that another rip had appeared in the fur, one whic hcould neither be concealed nor denied this time for it was exactly in the back. She stared at it, forgetting for the moment the greater calamity in the lesser. It was bitter finter weather and the coat was the only warm wrap she had. It had served well its time, it was true; she had bought it at the beginning of her career, when her purse was as well supplied with money as her heart was with hope. But now—how could she buy another? She laid the coat across a chair, drew another chair close to the radiator and sat down. The gas jet beside the bureau flared dismally upon the litter which had occasioned. It showed also a ragged crack in the wall-paper and a stain on the thread-bare carpet. She reached out shivering, and drew in her long red satiu train. She hated red, but they had told her at the shop where she bought this gown that it would show soil less than any other color. Besides it would look attractive on the stage.

The steam in the radiator was low an dthe room was growing colder every moment. Upon the other side of the wall she could hear somebody going noisily to bed. Outside the wind coming in from the prairie raced madly through the broad streets, threatening every brick and board with voilence. The papers predicted a storm on the morow—snow. How much snow? Enough perhaps to block the wheels of the train which would be taking them to their next stand. They must be on the move by seven o'clock, and it was after twelve now—less than seven hours hours in which to sleep and dress and breakfast and get to a train. Yet she could not go to bed just yet, tired and cold though she was. Her glance went to the fur coat on the chair beside her. Good old coat! It had stood between her and many a storm. She drew it to her and wrapped herself in it, and ceased to shiver. She was warmer so than she would be in that flat, thinly covered bed, whose pillows rustled horribly wit hmotha. Yet it was not the worst kind of a bed. Neither was this the worst kind of a hotel. She had been in poorer places. One got used to inconvenienecs after travelling about a couple of years. Used to them! She knew that she had not got used to them. A sob burst from her and she bowed her head on the back of the next chair. After all why shouldn't she cry if she wanted to? There was relief in' tears. Had she not proved it often? As she cried the pressure lifted from her brain and she was able to review the experiences of the evening just past. It was an evening simila to many of hers she had known—a drafty stage, an overcrowded pit and an old gran, piano which was a pitiful wreck of the instrument it had been when it was shipped from an eastern manufactory years before. She had sat down to that piano, with a sickening feeling of being unable to cope with tuneless keys and buzzing strings. She was nervous too, from a succession of failures in other towns. Of course the inevitable happened, she had never played so badly in her life and she had always played badly. Besides her music was over the heads of her audience. They wanted ragtime, and she gave them Chaminade. Her failure had reflected upon the others. The reader stumbled in her lines and the tenor, whose business it was to entrance the feminine part of the audience, contracted a sudden "frog in the throat" that no number of lozengers could dislodge.

"Holy Crow," the manager had groaned. "What ails you all? Call this a concert troupe!" He gnashed his teeth. He was beside himself with rage. For even the folk of the small western town have preferences and opinions and no satin gown, however glowing, can hide the defects that lurk in a musician's fingers.

"Now look!" said the soprano, adjusting a puff upon her peroxidized head, "don't you blame it on Helen, Mr. Simpkins. Take it out on that dinky old pian 'or thrash the 'com,' for not furnishing a better one. Don't you care, Helen," and she put her arms about Helen's disconsolate figure; "you'll do better next time. These mutts ain't got no call to expect moving-picture show music when your repertory's all classical.? See?"

But she played classical music so badly She played everything badly. And she alwas had, even from the beginning, when her confidence and bright dresses and fresh young face had helped her to some kind of success. To-night, after it was all over, she felt that she couldn't blame the manager. He had giver her an engagement because she looked her part. Then, too, she had one piece that she played fairly well. But one cannot be playing one piece all the while, and as for one's face—insuffiient sleep and poor food and the constant grind of travel will steal the color from the freshest pair of cheeks and she was one of those girls that depend a good deal it vanished one realised that her mouth was too large and her eyes too small and her nose not all it should be. Even the red satin dress failed to light her up. She was as insipid ta see as her music was to hear.

She was a failure! To-night, if never before ,she knew it. Sitting with her head bowed on the back of the next chair, with a lukewarm radiator beside her and an old fur coat across her shoulders, she thought of those two past years with dissatisfaction.

"I ought to have stayed home and taught music," she thought. "I'd have made a pretty good music teacher. Aunt Elinor and Percy both told me so. But I wouldn't believe them. I thought other people were right when they told me that I ought to do concernt work, and they were only flattering me. I let their foolish praise turn my head. 'You have wonderful talent,' they said. Oh, if only I had taken Aunt Elinor's advice and stayed home. She was my best friend—she and Percy. And I never knew!"

She knew now. What was the use in keeping up the pretense any longer? She had faile dand she saw it; they all saw it. It was on account of her faulty accompanying last year that Miss Minor, who really could sing, had suddenly left the company. And there was Lillian Moore back home who had tried for this very position and had been set aside and was eating her heart out and practising her fingers off for lack of an engagement. A telegram would bring her flying. And then she, Helen, could go home to Aunt Elinor and—and Percy and teach music and know what it was to be warm and well fed and rested all at one time. Yes, she was resolved. She would tell the manager the first thing in the morning that she must go home; she was ill and nervous and tired out and desperately homesick—

She had raised her head with a start. The radiator was working harder. A gray light was coming in at the windows. The gas flared feebly. She felt still and old and miserable. Somebody was pounding on the door. What did it mean. Good heavens, had she fallen asleep in her chair! She stared about her at the gray windows, at the bottom of each one was a greenish ridge of snow which had not been there when she entered the room. Then, as the knocking continued insistently she rose and went to the door and opened it in the astonished face of the manager.

"Haven't you been to bed?" he demanded. "It's 6 o'clock and the rest are eating breakfast."

She leaned against the door forlornly, trying to realize. What had happened last night? Ah, yes, another failure. It was not the piano; it was she. She was going to give up and he must know at once. She opened her lips to speak, but he forstalled her.

"Some friend of yours came in on the 2.2 0last night," he said. "He's waiting downstairs to see you. I've been talking to him. You better run down a minute just as you are—" He cast a curious glance up and down her red gown.

A friend! What friend? Yet the very sound of the word was heavenly to her. She drew her coat across her flaming dress and went downstairs. The door of the common sitting room was ajar. She pushed it wider open and entered. A man stood at the radiator with his back to her. He turned slowly as she entered.

"Percy," she cried, and stumbled toward him with her hands outheld. He took them in a warm clasp.

"I've come to take you home, dear," he said, calmly.

She looked up at him piteously.

"Mother is waiting for you," he went on, "and that fellow, Simpkins, your manager, who isn't after all a bad old lot, has promised to let you go. The company will leave without you this morning. You're going with me and the first train east, leaves at 10 o'clock.

Two hours later the east bound train was spinning forward over the frolen prairie. Side by side Helen and Percy sat, looking out at the snow.

"So you've had enough of this kind of a career, eh?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered unhesitatingly.

"Then," he said quietly, "perhaps you'll be willing to take up another kind—you know what I mean, Helen? We discussed it one summer—"

"Oh, Percy," Helen interrupted breathlessly, "you don't—you can't still—want to marry me."

He smiled at her and among the folds of the old fu coat she wore found her hand and squeezed it. "Why not?" he asked teasingly.

DELIVERED AN ELOQUENT SERMON ON PRESENT DAY JUDGMENT

Dr. Llywd, Vice-Provost of Trinity University, Preached at Both Services at St. John's Church Yesterday — The Book, "If Christ Came to Chicago" Referred To.

AN INTERESTING SPEAKER

Rev. Dr. Llywd, Vice-Provost of Trinity University, Toronto, assisted the rector of St. John's church yesterday morning and evening. At the morning service the distinguished visitor preached an intensely powerful sermon that claimed the undivided attention of his hearers. To say that he was eloquent would be but poor characterization of adiscourse that demonstrated a masterly understanding of theology in its application to present day needs, nationally and individually. His utterances rang with truth and a knowledge of human nature that to say the least were thrillingly convincing. Seldom has St. John's congregation been privileged to listen to a sermon teeming with such ideals and original thought as that of yesterday morning, and a full measure of good effect should result from the Vice-Provost's first visit to this parish.

Dr. Llywd's text was Revelation 1st verse, 7: "Behold He cometh with clouds and every eye shall see Him; and they also which pierced Him." His subject was really "Present Day Judgment," a judgment from which no man could escape. In a brief review of the book entitled, "If Christ Came to Chicago," published some years ago, and which created quite a sensation, the reverend gentleman pictured everyday Chicago life under normal conditions — with its busy streets thronging with life and activity. The mechanic at his bench, the labourer at his daily toil; millionaires being hurried to their offices in modern machines, and society members engaged in social duties. The whole town is absorbed in its daily routine of industry, toil, pleasure, joy, sorrow, suffering, sin and vice, when with a crash and a rending of the heavens, Christ descends from His unknown kingdom and stands in the midst of Chicago. The gifted preacher here went on to delineate the irresistible influence of Christ's personality that would compel men to recognize that they were exactly what they were in relation to Jesus Christ, and not what they appear to be to the world. It would urge them to line up in two forces, one for Christ and the other against Him. And what astounding revelations those two alignments would present! Here, in opposition to Christ would be found men who publicly paraded their Christianity, while there, within His own forces would be standing men who had been little suspected of Christian virtues.

Continuing, the speaker said judgment was not only necessarily a great assize at the end of the world, when all men would be judged. There was a judgment of the present; a thing that existed now; a judgment that came from consciousness of knowing what we were ourselves. It was man's preferences and tastes that ranked him in the scales of being and judgment. In science, art, literature, music, pleasures, according to man's judgment of what pleased him best, so will his individuality be guided,—for h degrading characteristic might be. In the fie there was present judgment of which depended lived and what our pr It is a string after this, sibilities th ranks m of being. Black on the rain-swept harbor hung the night,
But through the darkness, lamp by valiant lamp,
We saw the spectral glow where ran the bridge,
From gloom-encompassed mainland on to dim
Imagined mainland even more remote.
The lordly bridge of granite and of steel
We could not see, but light by serried light
We knew it lived and arched the emptiness.

And so it is with each faint gleam that man
Has known and nursed. Companioned by its kind,
There, light by light, across the frustrate tides
And o'er the undeciphered gloom they swing.
The towers of granite and the paths of steel
Our eyes have not beheld; but still we know
That out from mainland unto mainland swings
And stands and waits some undiscovered bridge.

SHE TAPPED THE KEG.

How a Backwoods Woman Got All the Beer She Wanted.

Verily truth is stranger than fiction, and often vastly more amusing. Here is a story which is true. That it was amusing to the Toronto man who heard it at first hand from an interested person, and who saw the proof of the incident it concerns, will readily be seen.

A well-known piano manufacturer of Toronto was in Muskoka during the recent deer-hunting season, and while there he became acquainted with an interesting backwoodsman. Incidentally, he learned something of the latter's home experiences. Now the settler's wife has an appetite which we do not like to associate with the fair sex, but which in this instance may be accounted for by the fact that backwoods women lead a most lonely life, a life which would drive a good many of us to drink. She dearly loves to assimilate fiery water, and her husband has had to resort to many schemes to keep her from getting gloriously drunk, while at the same time providing himself with a modest store of liquor for his own temperate use. Well, recently this man was offered a barrel of beer at a bargain at the nearest settlement—at all events he found himself in possession of a barrel, and then arose the problem of its safe disposal at home. He could not put it in the house, of course; so, after some careful planning, he smuggled the stuff into the barn, fixed up a block and tackle, and hoisted it to the roof, where he was sure his wife could not reach it if she discovered its whereabouts. Then he went off to work feeling quite pleased with himself. But on his return in the evening he found his wife in a condition variously described as "canned," "tanked," or "spifflicated." He himself for a moment was paralyzed with astonishment. Then he ran to the barn to see how she had managed to "get-next" to the contents of the barrel. He glanced up. It was up at the roof safe enough, but a close examination revealed the manner in which it had been tapped. His wife had located the liquor, taken his rifle, shot a hole in the bottom of the barrel, placed a pail underneath, and got all she wanted!

When the Toronto man heard the story, he could scarcely believe it until he had been shown the hole in the keg.

A Tribute From Harper's.

A traveler, returned from a journey to Seattle, which so many easterners have made to their profit, reports an interesting observation. He came back by way of British Columbia, and the Canadian Pacific Railroad. He reports being impressed with the different appearance of things north and south of the Canadian boundary, in that on the Canada side things were so much more shipshape. The houses to his eyes looked neater and better, the yards were neater, there were everywhere signs of greater effort among the Canadian settlers to secure comeliness in their surroundings; of more solicitude about the conditions of living and more ambition to maintain civilized standards.

We cannot verify these observations, but give them for what they are worth. Doubtless the far-western Canadian colonists are largely British and have carried with them dooryard and cottage traditions from the comely, cultivated islands which vagrant Americans love to visit and admire. An Englishman will have flowers in his dooryard if he can, and is apt to know how to have them, and to take the trouble to make them grow. That is one good fruit of training and long-standing civilization. It is by no means so common as yet in the United States as in England. The Englishman pays more attention to living and does not skip the details. The American's thoughts are apt to be too exclusively engaged in getting on in life. He is loath as yet to spend time and strength in beautifying life as he lives it.—Harper's Weekly.

Our Fisheries.

As to whether the Dominion should pay the province for what it gets in the way of property or revenue, or whether the province should pay the Dominion for the protection it affords a valuable industry, is not a matter, from this point of view, of very great importance. It is of far greater importance that the fisheries shall be so protected that they shall continue to be the valuable asset to the country that they are at the present time.—St. John Globe.

What a Boy Should Learn.

The boy is the father of the man. The boy that learns to be a gentleman in his sports, that can trust himself in a crowd, and that would scorn to win by unfair means, has already laid the foundations of good citizenship.—Sentinel-Review, Woodstock.

The original "greenroom" seems to have been painted green in order to relieve the eyes of actors dazzled by the glare of the footlights.

Mme. Thebes, the French seeress, declared that the world is to have a bad time in 1910. The home folks will now be ready to admit that she is a true prophet of evil, for the disastrous floods in France made the opening of this year memorable.

Flower and Tree.

Plants cannot live if deprived of their leaves.

The date palm requires a hot, dry air, but moisture about the roots, and plenty of it.

Palms never live more than 250 years. Ivy has been known to live 450, chestnut 800, oak 1,000 and yew 2,000.

Canada's total railway mileage last July was 30,330 miles. This means that there is one mile of railway for every 300 inhabitants.

Aptly Termed.

A farmer in a flood district, watching his mortgaged house and barn fall over and float down the river, remarked, "That represents my floating indebtedness."

Bed Feather Markets.

The plains of Hungary are well adapted for the raising of geese, and travelers in that country are often entertained by seeing from passing trains great flocks of geese feeding in the fields and watched by goose herds. So many feathers are yielded by these geese that four "bed feather markets" are held annually at Budapest, and at each market from 600,000 to 700,000 pounds of bed feathers are placed on sale.

Wild Ostrich Feathers.

The feathers of the wild ostrich are superior to those from farm birds.

Chinese Politeness.

A Chinaman who wears his spectacles in the presence of a guest or a social superior is held to be as rude as in this country we consider a man who fails to remove his hat when meeting women of his acquaintance.

Old Turnip Seeds.

Turnip seeds have been known to be dormant for seven years through being planted too deep and after that time to sprout.

Pleasure and Appetite.

The impulse to celebrate any joyful event or anniversary by a dinner is a rational one, physicians say, for pleasure excites hunger just as disagreeable sensations take the appetite away.

Wisdom in Fable.

Among the best things that have ever been written are the Aesop's fables, which date back to the sixth century B. C. They present human nature as it always has been, is and probably always will be. Take, for example, the story of "The Fox Without a Tail:"

"A fox was once caught in a trap by his tail and in order to get free was obliged to leave it behind. He knew that his fellows would make fun of his tailless condition, so he made up his mind to induce them all to part with their tails. At the next assemblage of foxes he made a speech on the uselessness of tails in general and the inconvenience of a fox's tail in particular, declaring that never in his whole life had he felt so comfortable as now in his tailless freedom. When he sat down a sly old fox rose and, waving his brush, said, with a sneer, that if he had lost his tail he would be convinced by the last speaker's arguments, but until such an accident occurred he fully intended to vote in favor of tails."

Peculiar Superstitions.

The people of Kulu are extremely superstitious and go in extensively for demonolatry. Many trees are held to be sacred and have tiny temples dedicated to them. The demons are popularly supposed to live at the tops of trees, and if a tree falls in such a way that it is possible to pass under it, as is often the case on the mountain sides, every man before going beneath the trunk will place on it a stick or stone to propitiate its guardian spirit. Certain streams are also sacred, and no one is allowed to wash dirty clothes in them. One year some strangers came into the valley and happened to pollute the water of a river in this manner. It chanced to be a year of extraordinary rainfall, and the people implicitly believe that the excessive rain was sent by the outraged "deota" of the stream as punishment.—Wide World Magazine.

Helping Hubby Out

"Your wife seems to be wonderfully interested in your business. Must be a source of great satisfaction to you."

"Yes, indeed. Do you know I used to think she cared nothing about it."

"Why the change?"

"I don't know. That's the funny part of it. I can't imagine what has changed her. A few nights ago I went home, tired most to death, and during the evening I casually remarked: 'Iole, my business is getting most too much for me to handle. I am thinking of employing a nice, steady stenographer and typewriter. Don't you think it would be a good idea?' From that moment the good little woman has been extremely anxious to assist me and make my lot easier in every way. I suppose it's her naturally sympathetic nature. It must be."—Boston Herald.

A Brilliant Judge.

Steady Baker was at one time mayor of Folkestone, England. Once a boy was brought before him for stealing gooseberries, and Steady, aware of the importance of the case, turned over the pages of the alphabetically arranged "Burn's Justice" for a precedent. Failing to find one, he turned to the culprit. "My lad," said he, "it's lucky for you that you were not brought here for stealing a goose instead of for stealing gooseberries. There is a statute against stealing geese, but I can't find anything about gooseberries in all 'Burn,' so let the prisoner be discharged, for I suppose it is no offense."

Was Honoured On Eve Of Departure From City

Mr. Harry T. Theobald, who, for the past three years, has been a member of the reportorial staff of the Examiner, left this morning for Toronto, where he has accepted a position on the staff of the Toronto News. Mr. Theobald has been a faithful and valued member of the Examiner staff of news gatherers, and will be greatly missed by his confreres in the office and by his many friends throughout the city, who will, however, commingle with their regret at his departure, fervent hopes for his success in his new position.

On Saturday afternoon the members of the business and editorial staffs of the Examiner said farewell to Mr. Theobald, and incidentally showed their regard for him by presenting him a handsome travelling bag and an address. The presentation was made by Mr. Jas. D. Clarke, of the business staff, while the following address was read by Mr. F. D. Craig, city editor of the Examiner:

Dear Harry,—We can hardly realize what it means to say good-bye to one who, like yourself, has been linked together with us so long in the bonds of good fellowship engendered by our common employment. Such partings have to take place, however, and in meeting to-day to bid you farewell, we ask your acceptance of this small token of your regard, trusting that you will see in it the great esteem which each and all of us have for you.

We know you will not forget your old friends on the staff and, needless to say, we shall not forget you.

Wishing you all prosperity and good luck in the broad field that you are now entering."

Mr. Theobald made a feeling reply, thanking his friends for their kindness and expressing regret at his departure from Peterborough, and at the severance of the friendly relations that had existed so long.

Mr. Egbert Kelly, of this city, is the newcomer on the Examiner staff and the Examiner bespeaks for him the same kindness and courtesy that was accorded to Mr. Theobald.

New England Tea On Friday Was A Success

The opportunity afforded of spending a New England evening with the ladies of Murray St. Baptist church was taken advantage of by a large and representative number of citizens last night, and the occasion was one of interest and enjoyment to all present, and those who were in charge of the affair are to be congratulated on the splendid success which attended their efforts. Every detail of the entertainment was in keeping with those days that have gone down in history as a result of the great men who figured in the early life of New England. The young ladies in charge of the tables were attired in the dress of the early Puritan girls, and in the addresses the speakers took for their subjects New England characters. The supper was an excellent one, both in quality and quantity, and the fact of the latter being taxed to its utmost, partly suggests the hearty manner in which the variety of edibles was received. Following the supper a particularly pleasing programme was given, during which Mr. T. F. Mat thews acted as chairman in his usual capable manner.

Programme.

Address—Rev. Mr. Webb.
Poem by Longfellow—Mrs. Morgan.
Song—Mr. W. McIlroy
Poem by Shortfellow—Gordon Matthews
Character Sketch—Mr. L. W. Pettitt.
Song—Mr. F. D. Kerr.
Song—Mr. H. Morphet.
Address—Judge Huycke.

Mr. Dunlop moved a vote of thanks to those instrumental in making the evening such a pleasant one. Mr. T. F. Matthews seconded the motion and Mr. Kerr replied. The benediction by Rev. Mr. Webb brought the affair to a close.

MARCH ROD AND GUN

Snow Trails, a story of a professional man spending some weeks trapping with an Indian in the Canadian backwoods, is the leading feature of the March issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont., and one that no sportsman should miss. Stories galore have been written of experiences in the backwoods in summer and fall, but not too many genuine instances of personal experiences by outsiders, in the woods in winter have been given to the world. Mr. Auer's narrative is full of interest and demonstrates the health and pleasure to be obtained from a visit to the winter woods. To penetrate too far is, as the author says, only for the strong, but there are few cases which would not be benefitted from following the author's advice and example. The time may come when winter visitors will only rank second in numbers to those enjoying summer outings. The difficulties of prospecting trips in Northern British Columbia are well brought out in the story of a Wild Goose Chase by Mr. F. Bullock-Webster. The experiences gained by fire ranging for two summers in the Metagami Forest Reserve are told in an interesting style by Mr. H. W. Lyons. These are supplemented by a full list of contents, dealing with big game hunting, woodcock shooting, fishing, protective work, mountaineering, and kindred subjects, the whole bringing with it the whiffs of the woodlands in very full measure and largely accounting for the wide spread influence the magazine has gained amongst sportsmen on both sides of the border.

WOMAN DROWNS AFTER A TERRIFIC STRUGGLE

Was Afloat on a Huge Piece of Ice in the Detroit River---Negro Jumped Into the Ice-Chilled River in at Attempt to Save Her But His Efforts Were Futile---Was Swept Into the Water.

Special to The Examiner.

Detroit, Mich., March 14.—A woman sank to her death in the river shortly after midnight Saturday, after a terrible struggle to keep afloat on a huge cake of ice.

Terrified shrieks coming from the blackness of the stream aroused those along the docks, and as they peered across the waters they saw the dim outline of a woman kneeling on the ice, waving one hand in a delirium of terror, her hair flying in the wintry blasts.

One man, Walter Hewlett, a Windsor negro, jumped from the first deck of the steamer Promise into the ice-chilled river, with almost certain death before him, and fought his way toward her.

He was working against the ice in inky darkness, guided only by the woman's shrieks, and half blinded by the icy spray, when the woman gave vent to one last awful yell of despair. The silence that followed told those who were on shore that Hewlett's mad attempt was futile.

Harry Stringer, a customs house inspector, had a long iron rod and reached for her as she was swept near the dock by the current, even after Hewlett had jumped and was working his way to her. She was seen through the darkness reaching for the rod, but could only lurch once—and then she missed it by a foot.

GREATNESS OF THE EMPIRE IMPRESSES A JOURNALIST

Mr. Frederick Wright, Who Has Been all Over the World in the Interest of London Papers, Tells of His Impressions.

INTERESTING LECTURE

Mr. Frederick Wright, B.A., of London, a well known English journalist, delivered a most instructive and interesting lecture last night in the Cold Springs Sunday school, on the subject of "The Rambles of a Journalist." The proceeds were devoted to the British and Foreign Bible Society and there was a very large attendance. The lecturer gave impressions of the different countries in Europe, Asia and Africa, which he had visited in the interests of his publication and remarked that the lessons that had come to him were, first the greatness of the British Empire, the reason of its greatness, the sense of justice and equality of all races under the law, and the responsibility of every individual member of the Empire.

Mr. Wright remarked that it was the duty of all to strengthen the bonds which bind scattered Britain beyond the seas to the people of the old country.

During his remarks he touched upon conditions in France, Italy, Germany, Russia, Palestine, India, Australia, China and Japan, and the Congo Free State.

Mr. Wright's lecture was closely followed and much appreciated by the large audience.

White Slaver Pleads For Light Sentence That He May Reform

Buffalo, March 14.—Buffalo's first white slave trial was closed this afternoon, when William Wilson (alias Emil Rosenberg, alias William Goldberg), of Toronto, was sentenced to one year and six months in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., for attempting to import an alien woman for immoral purposes. Wilson, with tears in his eyes, asked Judge Hazel to at least give him a light sentence in order that he might reform, and the effect of the plea was to secure the above sentence. That he was satisfied with the result may be gathered from the fact that upon taking his seat he remarked that he thought he would get five years.

Edward Armstrong, another Toronto man, who also had been jointly indicted with Wilson, but had pleaded guilty, was a good witness both for himself and Wilson. He testified that both intended to marry the girls they were bringing here, and that, so far as he was concerned he still held to that contention. Armstrong's girl, Agnes Fletcher, broke down completely when the prosecuting attorney called them "women of the street." She burst into tears and rushed screaming into the corridor.

The evidence brought out seemed to point to the fact that Armstrong, who is an "English remittance man," provided the money for the entire party. He paid the bills, and the receipts were made out in Wilson's name. He paid the railroad fare for both girls and furnished the flat.

Both men have records of convictions for larceny against them, and when in Toronto, where they met the girls, were both in trouble with the police. Wilson's last arrest was for street fighting, and at that time the Taylor girl paid his fine and got him out of prison.

Armstrong will be sentenced today. His lawyer yesterday made a plea for clemency, and he declared he would marry the Fletcher girl, "despite his brother-in-law in Toronto," who, he says, has already objected strenuously.

Special to The Examiner.

Edmonton, March 15.—The Rutherford government strengthened its position yesterday by taking steps to have a royal commission of investigation to ascertain whether any members of legislature or government were pecuniarily interested in the contract with Alberta and Great Waterways Railway. The resolution of which the premier gave notice calls for a commission of justices, Scott, Harvey and Beik.

MISSIONARY MEETING

A missionary meeting was held at Knox Church Young People's Guild last night. Miss Warren occupied the chair. A quartette by Misses E. Bartley, F. Chiles, and Messrs. Donaldson and Thompson was much appreciated. Mr. Sanderson spoke about the Mackay Hospital, Formosa. He said Dr. Mackay started his work in his private study. The Gospel went side by side with the medical attention. Love and sympathy is extended to the patient. To the out-patients, preaching is done, before their wants are attended to. Other members of the Guild gave short papers on the work in the hospital.

Next Monday, March 21st, is Literary evening, when Mr. H. J. Keith will speak on Lord Tennyson.

DIED IN CHURCH

Barrie Young Man Passed Away After Giving His Testimony.

Special to The Examiner.

Barrie, Ont., March 15.—Mr. R. E. Elliott died suddenly last night while attending revival services in the Collier St. Methodist church. Mr. Elliott had given his testimony a few minutes before and was singing when he fell over. Heart failure was the cause of death. Mr. Elliott's wife survives him, but there are no children.

THE WEATHER

As a gentle reminder that spring is not here yet, we had a little touch of winter weather this morning. At an early hour the mercury was only some 4 degrees above the zero mark. Present conditions, however, are very similar to other years. On referring to the month of March last year, and the preceding year, it was seen that bright sunshiny days alternated with boreal blasts and sprinklings of "the beautiful." Last spring the snow plows were out several weeks after this date.—W. P.

SPECTACLES
Should be Changed

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and then go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity for such be not apparent to them. As a general rule, spectacles for close work require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every 2 years.

OLD PEOPLE SUFFER TORTURES with their BACKS

Here is a Case in Point.

Of course you know a dull ache or sharp pains in the back come from sick Kidneys. Old age exacts its penalty. The kidneys become weak or strained through the hard work of a lifetime. Plasters, ointments and liniments only ease the pain—they can't reach the Kidneys. As soon as the effects of such remedies wear off the pain returns worse than ever because the Kidneys are worse.

West Fort William, Nov. 7th, 1908.

"I have been troubled with a Lame Back for the past twenty years and have used plasters and ointment without effect. At last I tried Gin Pills, which proved just the thing, and I would highly recommend them to anyone who has Strained or Lame Back."

H. HARKNESS.

Gin Pills, you see, act directly on the Kidneys—relieving the pain—giving them new strength—and neutralizing Uric Acid, which is generally formed when there is Kidney Trouble.

Try Gin Pills, yourself, before buying the regular 50c boxes. Write the National Drug & Chemical Co. Dept. B. Toronto, Ont., and they will send you a free sample of Gin Pills by return mail. 5

THE LAKEFIELD MEETING.

The second of the meetings, involving addresses to the electors, held in Lakefield on Saturday night, was a second vindication of the decision adopted at the annual meeting of the Liberal Association of East Peterborough Liberal Association, held at Norwood. Electors may read the papers and the comparatively meagre reports of parliamentary proceedings, but these do not appeal to them like the living voices of the prominent actors in the national drama at Ottawa. The speech given at Lakefield on Saturday night by Mr. Clark, of South Essex, gave an excellent idea of the oratorical calibre of the leading parliamentarians, and brought the people in touch with the temper of the occasion on the launching of one of the most notable enterprises in the life of Canada. Mr. Clark's address was confined almost solely to the naval bill. It was clear cut argumentation, logical and convincing, maintaining a high plane of reasoning and a temperate statement of fact and inference. Those who heard the address and carried away its spirit and meaning, will have a higher idea of what the naval bill means to Canada, than even the most omnivorous readers who had not been so favoured. Mr. Clark, by the way, was a former resident of Lindsay, and his association with this district lent an element of personal interest to the oratorical interest excited by his splendid address. The other addresses given by Mr. D. O'Connell and Hon. J. R. Stratton dealt largely with the same subject and were valuable contributors to a discussion that has been somewhat obscured in parliament by the "many words that darken speech." The addresses were attentively heard and heartily appreciated by the large audience present.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The supplementary estimates propose $7,500 to cover cost of extra jaw-wagging at Ottawa — to cover cost of debates.

The excellent address given at Lakefield on Saturday night by Mr. A. H. Clark, of South Essex, formerly of Lindsay, at once suggests and arouses the query, "Can any good thing come out of Lindsay?" Mr. Clark's survival and dominance of the influence of his one time environment, is a tribute at once to his staying powers and his ability.

PURE MILK.

It seems incongrous that in the land of plenty, like Ontario, with plentiful pastures, studded with sweet succulent grasses and well-watered and stocked with well-fed herds, we should hear a complaint of the impurity of milk. First we have the danger of lethal impurity at the fountain head, the udder of the cow, which, if tuberculous, favours the dissemination of the deadly consumption. Then we have the pollution resulting from unclean methods of harvesting, from filthy, ill-ventilated stables, badly washed and dirt incrusted vessels. Then we have adulteration by water. This is not bad, except from an economic point of view—the customer is buying water at the price of milk. But dilution of milk with water becomes serious when water like that of Toronto or Montreal, or Ottawa, is used. Colon bacilli in water will give to milk diluted with it, typhogenic qualities. This becomes especially dangerous because the popular view is open to the dangers of impure water, but there is no means of easily discovering if milk is diluted; or, if diluted, whether the dilution is made with good water or with water known to be bad, loaded with pathogenic germs. Very properly there is much attention attracted to the reputed impurity of the general milk supply and in passing, it is to be suggested that this does not generally, there is reason to believe, apply to Peterborough's milk supply, whose chief occasional defect—the too intrusive presence of water and a too retiring backwardness of cream to come out on top is sometimes in evidence. If a little extraneous liquid is added it is generally pure, clear water, whether from the farmer's well, or the city tap. We can congratulate ourselves on having a fairly good quality of milk supplied to our citizens. There is reason to believe that there is nothing added to it more noxious, from a sanitary regard, than pure water.

The Toronto Star is carrying on a crusade in favour of a pure and wholesome milk supply for infant nourishment, milk certified as to its purity. It is fathering a fund to permit certified milk, whose market price is 15 cents, to be supplied to the poor mothers of infants to which such a price would be prohibitory, at 8 cents per quart. This is a very laudable undertaking, especially as impure milk is credited with a considerable share of the deplorably prevalent infant mortality. But why should there be so insistent a demand for pure cow's milk for this purpose? Time was when, what Mr. Micawber call's "nature's fount," mother's milk, was generally all-sufficient. But in this generation motherhood seems to have gone out of fashion, not only physical motherhood, but the motherhood associated with infant nourishment, and the motherhood associated with infant training and the responsibility of moulding infant character and childhood training. The lure of society—bridge, dances, junketings, theatres, mothers meetings—everywhere except at home—ladies' aids, etc., claim and get precedence. All are excellent in themselves, but hardly fulfil in their monopolizing demands the larger responsibility of motherhood. The mania of race-suicide begets, if such a term can consistently be applied to what does not beget, a disposition where accident supervenes to circumvent its object, a disposition to regard with disfavour, if not repulsion, the primary duty of motherhood, personal nourishment of the infant. "It's too much bother"; "it interferes with social duties"—certainly a paramount consideration to the physical welfare health and even life of the mother's flesh and blood. It is a sad commentary on the all too-general decay of motherhood that the milk of human kindness in a journalist's breast, should become a compulsory substitute for material milk, that promiscuous charity should supplement the failure of mother's love, normally the most powerful instinct of the lowest forms of animal life.

These conditions only add emphasis to the necessity of providing a pure milk supply for infants, children of maturer age and adults in our towns and cities. A bill founded upon the report of the commission appointed to investigate the milk question has been introduced by the Minister of Agriculture into the local legislature. A summary of the bill will be of general interest:

The act is designed to secure pure milk for the consumers, and aims to remedy conditions which have more or less generally obtained, by giving the consuming municipalities the right to protect their citizens. The bill empowers cities and towns to license and regulate vendors and to inspect places where milk is produced or handled, whether in the municipality or elsewhere. It also gives power to revoke the license if the commodity is not handled under clean, suitable and sanitary conditions, or if the animals are not properly fed and cared for.

The measure, which was given a first reading, is believed to be initial legislation. Other enactments based on the report of the Commission will probably follow next year, when the Government has had sufficient time and opportunity to deal with all the points raised.

THE DOG PROBLEM

"Inquirer" Would Like to See the City Fathers Take Some Action.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The writer would like to know what steps our city aldermen are taking to protect the citizens of our fair city from the danger of being bitten by dogs running at large.

The other morning I counted seven dogs cross the lawn at one time, five of them big hounds and only two wearing a tag. (This is a common sight.)

Is this public nuisance to continue till some one is bitten by one of those curs before the men we have put into office to represent us (by our votes) wake up to the real danger our children are subjected to every day.

Other towns have had to compel citizens to tie their dogs up. Why not Peterborough?

Cases are being reported every day saying some one was badly bitten by what was considered a quiet dog. Only last week two cases were reported from Millbrook and Cavan only a few miles distant from us.

The only remedy possible is to issue a proclamation at once ordering every one to chain their dog up till the danger is passed. Failing to do so, all dogs found at large to be shot by policemen or persons appointed for this special work.

Hoping some other interested citizens will take this matter up and give the public the benefit of their views, I am, yours respectfully,

INQUIRER.

READERS OF THE EXAMINER SHOULD BE INTERESTED IN THIS

Relief from catarrh, coughs, colds, hay fever, asthma and bronchitis, can be had in five minutes simply by breathing the soothing, healing, balsamic air of Hyomei over the sore and raw membrane.

It acts like magic. When you breathe Hyomei you bring the air from the Australian forests of pine and eucalyptus to your home, and the curative power of both is so pronounced that all diseases of the nose, throat and lungs are unknown in inland Australia.

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is sold by Wm. Madill under a positive guarantee to cure any of the above named diseases or symptoms, or money back.

"I have used Hyomei for two weeks and have been relieved very much. I can certainly recommend it to any one suffering from catarrh, etc." — Fred Hyde, Jarvis, Ont.

The price for a complete outfit, including a hard rubber inhaler, is $1, and on the no cure, no pay plan, all sufferers should try it.

MI-O-NA Cures Dyspepsia.

Your money back if it don't. Gives immediate relief from heartburn, sour stomach, stomach distress and sick headache. 50 cents a large box at

Eccentric Millionaire Anxious to be Remembered—Wanted a Statut In City Park.

Detroit, Mich, March 14.—According to the provisions of his will, James Scott, a Detroit millionaire, who died last week, bequeathed the sum of $50,000 to the city of Detroit, the money to be used for the erection of a magnificent fountain on Belle Isle, a popular city park. The will also provides that a life-sized statue of the donor is to surmount the fountain.

But a storm of protest has arisen in certain quarters against the acceptance of the gift because, it is alleged, the dead millionaire was a one-time card sharp and professional gambler.

The Detroit Pastors' Union at its meeting to-day put itself on record as being unalterably opposed to the acceptance of the money by the city, on the ground that a monument in a public park to the memory of the donor would exercise an unhealthy influence upon the morals of children as "tending to immortalize a man whose wealth was gained by gambling."

Friends of the late Mr. Scott, while denying that he was ever anything but an eccentric business man, admit that he "might have played poker a few times," and it is practically upon this admission that the Detroit clergy oppose the acceptance of the gift.

In the event of the city refusing to accept the gift the fortune will revert to the State.

A peculiar phase of the whole affair is that the clergymen say they will not oppose the acceptance of the gift if Scott's statue is eliminated.

HELD "AT HOME"

Pleasant Evening Under Auspices of Lady Woodmen of the World.

An enjoyable "At Home" was held last night in the Sons of England hall under the auspices of the Lady Woodmen of the World and it was one of the most successful held this winter. The chair was occupied by Dr. Morgan and a short musical programme was given, including a recitation by Miss Montgomery, a vocal solo by Mr. Jos. Mercier, and an instrumental solo by Miss Heard. Following the musical numbers, progressive euchre was indulged in. The prizes were won by Mrs Young and Mr. J. Mercier. The proceeds will be devoted to some charitable organization.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 264 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"I am going to light a lamp, and if you move I will kill you," admonished the fellow, and Armitage heard his feet scraping over the brick floor of the kitchen as he backed toward a table that stood against the wall near the outer door.

Armitage stood perfectly still. The neighborhood and the house itself were quiet. The two men in the third story room were probably engrossed with the business at which Armitage had left them, and his immediate affair was with the Servian alone. The fellow continued to mumble his threats, but Armitage had resolved to play the part of an Englishman who understood no German, and he addressed the man sharply in English several times to signify that he did not understand.

"You will go to that corner."

The Servian half turned toward his prisoner, the revolver in his left hand, while with the fingers of his right he felt laboriously for a lamp that had been revealed by the fitful flashes of the matches. It is not an easy matter to light a lamp when you have only one hand to work with, particularly when you are obliged to keep an eye on a mysterious prisoner of whose character you are ignorant, and it was several minutes before the job was done.

"You will go to that corner," and the Servian translated for his prisoner's benefit with a gesture of the revolver.

"Anything to please you, worthy fellow," replied Armitage, and he obeyed with amiable alacrity. The man's object was to get him as far from the inner door as possible while he called help from above, which was, of course, the wise thing from his point of view, as Armitage recognized.

Armitage stood with his back against a rack of pots. The table was at his left and beyond it the door opening upon the court. A barred window was at his right. Opposite him was another door that communicated with the interior of the house and disclosed the lower steps of a rude stairway leading upward. The Servian now closed and locked the outer kitchen door with care.

Armitage had lost his hat in the area; his light walking stick lay in the middle of the floor; his inverness coat hung wet and bedraggled about him; his shirt was crumpled and soiled. But his air of good humor and his tame acceptance of capture seemed to increase the Servian's caution, and he backed away toward the inner door with his revolver still pointed at Armitage's head.

He began calling lustily up the narrow stairwell in Servian, changing in a moment to German. He made a ludicrous figure, as he held his revolver at arm's length, craning his neck into the passage and howling until he was red in the face. He paused to listen, then renewed his cries, while Armitage, with his back against the rack of pots, studied the room and made his plans.

"There is a thief here! I have caught a thief!" yelled the Servian, now exasperated by the silence above. Then, as he relaxed a moment and turned to make sure that his revolver still covered Armitage, there was a sudden sound of steps above, and a voice bawled angrily down the stairway:

"Zmai, stop your noise and tell me what's the trouble."

It was the voice of Durand speaking in the Servian dialect, and Zmai opened his mouth to explain.

As the big fellow roared his reply Armitage snatched from the rack a heavy iron boiling pot, swung it high by the bail with both hands and let it fly with all his might at the Servian's head, upturned in the earnestness of his bawling. On the instant the revolver roared loudly in the narrow kitchen, and Armitage seized the brass lamp and flung it from him upon the hearth, where it fell with a great clatter without exploding.

Armitage ran his hands through the pockets.

It was instantly pitch dark. The Servian had gone down like a felled ox, and Armitage, at the threshold, leaped over him into the hall past the rear stairs, down which the men were stumbling, cursing volubly as they came.

Armitage had assumed the existence of a front stairway, and now that he was launched upon an unexpected adventure he was in a humor to prolong it for a moment even at further risk. He crept along a dark passage to the front door, found and turned the key to provide himself with a ready exit, then, as he heard the men from above stumble over the prostrate Servian, he bounded up the front stairway, gained the second floor, then the third and readily found by its light the room that he had observed earlier from the outside.

Below there was smothered confusion and the crackling of matches as Durand and Chauvenet sought to grasp the unexpected situation that confronted them. The big servant, Armitage knew, would hardly be able to clear matters for them at once, and he hurriedly turned over the packets of papers that lay on the table. They were claims of one kind and another against several South and Central American republics, chiefly for naval and military supplies, and he merely noted their general character. They were, on the face of it, certified accounts in the usual manner of business. On the back of each had been printed with a rubber stamp the words: "Vienna, Paris, Washington. Chauvenet et Durand."

Armitage snatched up the coat which Chauvenet had so carefully placed on the back of his chair, ran his hands through the pockets, found them empty, then gathered the garment tightly in his hands, laughed a little to himself to feel the papers sewn into the lining and laughed again as he tore the lining loose and drew forth a flat linen envelope brilliant with three seals of red wax.

Steps sounded below. A man was running up the back stairs, and from the kitchen rose sounds of mighty groanings and cursings in the heavy gutturals of the Servian, as he regained his wits and sought to explain his plight.

Armitage picked up a chair, ran noiselessly to the head of the back stairs and looked down upon Chauvenet, who was hurrying up with a flaming candle held high above his head, its light showing anxiety and fear upon his face. He was halfway up the last flight, and Armitage stood in the dark, watching him with a mixture of curiosity and something, too, of humor.

Then he spoke—in French—in a tone that imitated the cool irony he had noted in Durand's tone:

"A few murders more or less! But Von Streebel was hardly a fair mark, dearest Jules!"

(To be continued.)

Could Not Sleep.

DOCTOR SAID HEART AND NERVES WERE RESPONSIBLE.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed.

Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted and causes nightmare, bad dreams, starting in the sleep, twitching of the muscles, restlessness, etc.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all people troubled in this way. They have a soothing and calming effect on the nervous system.

Mrs. Calvin Stark, Rosemont, Ont., writes:—"About two years ago I began to be troubled with a smothering sensation at night when I would lie down. I got so bad I could not sleep in the dark, and would have to sit up and rub my limbs, they would become so numb. My doctor said my heart and nerves were responsible. I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised and got a box to try them. I took three boxes and can now lie down and sleep without the light burning and can rest well. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women."

Price, 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BOARD OF TRADE

Annual Meeting Takes Place To-night—"Municipal Ownership" Will be Discussed.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade will be held to-night in the City Council Chambers, when the election of officers and reception of reports will take place. Afterwards there will be a discussion on the subject of "Municipal Ownership," a topic that is of the greatest importance and that should be of much interest. There should be a large attendance of members at to-night's meeting.

KEEPER WAS IN A DESTITUTE CONDITION

South Norwalk, Conn., March 14.—Abandoned, half-starved, exhausted, and almost crazy, Leroy C. Loughborough, assistant keeper of Norwalk Light, in Long Island Sound, was found by the lighthouse tender Pansy.

Deserted by the keeper, John M. Kiarkson, eleven days before, Loughborough had never wavered from his duty. For the greater part of this time he had lived on potatoes and dog biscuits; his only drink was salt water he boiled. He was almost continually on duty, running the two gasoline engines which sounded the fog horn and attending to the light.

When Keeper Kiarkson left for Norwalk Monday of last week it was for the purpose of getting provisions and the salary orders for himself and his assistant. Not only did he desert his associate, but he indorsed and cashed Loughborough's monthly cheque for $44.69 and went on a spree. He is in the local police station. He was found by the police of Bridgeport.

Come to St. Andrew's School Hall on March 17th—Irish supper from 6 to 8 o'clock. Good Irish programme. Admission, 20 cents. 2d-59

THE CAMPAIGN

The membership campaign in the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A., has been continued till the end of the week on account of a tie for first place and also that several boys may secure new members who could not join this week.

The gain in membership has been very satisfactory and it is thought that many more will be added before the contest closes. Those who lead are determined that no one shall catch them, since the prizes are so well worth an effort to win.

CRIPPLED WITH LAME BACK

THIS RESULT OF LONG STANDING KIDNEY DISEASE WAS OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

This letter gives you some idea of the definite and certain results you obtain by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for kidney disease.

This medicine is very prompt in action and very direct in effecting cure. You do not need to keep up the treatment long before you find most marked improvements.

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I want to tell you that I was cured of kidney disease of long standing by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. I used to suffer a great deal, not knowing just what was the cause of the trouble and got so bad that I was almost crippled with lame, sore back.

"Before I had used two boxes of these pills I found my back better and less than three boxes made the cure complete. I have never had a sore back since and believe the cure to be lasting."

Backache, headache, bodily pains, scanty, painful urination, deposits in urine after standing, fickle appetite, indigestion and irregularity of the bowels are among the symptoms which warn you of serious trouble from kidney disease.

You can be practically certain that Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills will help you and help you quickly. Make the test for yourself to-day. One pill a dose, 25 cts. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

ARMED ITALIANS

Police in Montreal Confiscate Sixty Stilettos and Forty Revolvers.

Montreal, March 15.—In a round-up of Italians on Saturday night by the provincial police, eleven arrests were made and sixty stilettos and forty revolvers confiscated.

At the opening of the present term of the Court of King's Bench, the grand jury recommended that on account of the number of Italians brought before the courts on charges of wounding, the authorities should take steps to arrest and disarm those found carrying weapons.

When the recommendation reached the Attorney-General he issued instructions that action be taken at once in the matter.

Chief McCaskill, of the provincial force, had a consultation with Chief Campeau on Saturday, with a result that a dozen members of the city police, in plain clothes, were detailed to assist the provincial men in rounding up the Italians. They made a tour of the city Saturday night and held up every Italian whom they suspected to be armed.

Those who gave up their weapons without resisting were allowed to go with a warning, but ten who insisted on retaining their stilettos and revolvers were taken into custody and locked up at police headquarters. They will be charged with carrying concealed weapons. Six had loaded revolvers and five carried stilettos.

The number of prisoners was increased to eleven when an Italian who went to headquarters to give bail for one of his countrymen was found to be armed with a stiletto, although he first denied that he had a weapon of any kind. Instead of getting his friend out, he went in to keep him company.

ANNUAL MEETING OF 57th REGT. MARKED BY GREAT ENTHUSIASM

Held Last Evening in Officers' Mess Rooms at the Armouries—Reports of the Committees Received and Adopted—Special One to Wait on City Council and Board of Education.

TO EQUIP RIFLE RANGE

The annual meeting of the 57th Regiment, held last evening in the officers' mess rooms, at the Armouries, was marked by great interest and enthusiasm. All the officers were present and the affairs of the regiment were interestingly discussed. Col. Stevenson the commanding officer, was in the chair. The reports of the various committees were presented and adopted. They were all of encouraging nature. A special committee, consisting of Captains McWilliams and V. Eastwood was appointed to communicate with the Board of Education and the City Council for arranging a systematic plan of beautifying Central Park. Upon the recommendation contained in the report of the Rifle Committee, it was decided to at once form a Garrison Shooting League, which would take up aiming drills, judging distances and other competitions. In this regard the importance of shooting was emphasized. The Garrison Athletic Association reported much enthusiasm in indoor baseball, bowling and tennis.

The Commanding Officer stated that he had received a communication from Kingston, informing him that an officer would be sent here for the purpose of examining all rifle ranges, with a view to equipping one at an early date. Col. Stevenson also read another communication from headquarters, applications to Lieuts. Higgins, Lech, Langford, and Cameron, to proceed to Toronto for the purpose of taking a special course at the Royal School of Instruction. The class will open on the 25th inst.

The appointment of committees resulted as follows:

Regiment Committee—Majors Clegg, Bennett, and Capt. Walker.
Band Committee — Major Mills, Captains Cluxton and Walker.
Rifle Committee — Major Bennett, and officers commanding each company.
Mess Committee—Majors Clegg, Hay and Capt. McLean.
Trip Committee — Captains McPherson and J. H. Eastwood and Lieut. Higgins.
Nominating Committee—Major Davidson, Capt. McWilliams and Lieuts. Cameron and Comstock.
Auditors — Capt McWilliams and Lieut. Clarke.
Secretary of Meetings—Lieut. Rackham.

Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment, the Annual Meeting of Which was Held at the Armouries Last Evening.

"SIAMESE TWINS" SECOND BIRTHDAY

Brighton's Freaks Healthy and Happy—Play Like Other Children.

London, March 14.—Brighton is proud of its "Siamese Twins," who have just celebrated their second birthday. Although they are united by an inseparable, they are as full of spirits and as healthy as most children of their age.

Dr. Booth, the local practitioner who attended them at birth, has sent an interesting reply to an inquiry on the subject. "The children are doing very well," he writes, and are quite up to the normal size for their age. They are showing signs of considerable intelligence, and can converse in a fashio with each other.

Play and Quarrel.

"They play and quarrel, and are always in good health. There is much more mobility than I expected there would ever be between them, but so far their efforts to stand have not been successful.

"They have a woden framework in which it is hoped later on that they will be able to learn to balance themselves; but I fear walking will always be a labour to them."

How Teddy Bears.

Violet and Daisy, as the twins have ben named, have developed a decided taste for the sweetmeats beloved of the normal child, and each has her Teddy-bear.

They have cut their teeth just as divided twins might have done, and although there are times when one annoys the other by a display of peevishness, they are in the main as contented as any other babies more fortunately circumstanced.

No man or woman here whose kidneys are out of order, or who suffers from backache or bladder misery, can afford to leave Pape's Diuretic untried.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, discoloured water and all bladder misery ends.

The moment you suspect the slightest kidney or bladder disorder, or feel rheumatism pains, don't continue to be miserable or worried, but get a fifty cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic from your druggist and start taking as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which is so harmless or will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Accept only Pape's Diuretic—fifty-cent treatment—from any drug store—anywhere in the world.

BETHANY TABERNACLE

The Meetings are Still Attracting Large Crowds.

The meetings in Bethany Tabernacle are still going on with increased interest and blessing. On Sunday the addresses given were deeply spiritual and heart searching. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Woodberry spoke on the Evangelizing of China and the Coming Again of Christ. In the evening Mr. Richards, whose messages were so much blessed to many who heard them, spoke on 'Ye Stiffnecked and Uncircumcized in Heart and Ears, Ye Do Always Resist the Holy Ghost." He spoke of many conditions and habits of life, which show that people are doing this continually, bringing everlasting sorrow and ruin upon themselves.

This evening Mr. Woodberry, who has spent fifteen years in China, and travelled in fifteen out of eighteen provinces, will speak of his work and experiences in that land. In writing of his work, some of the home papers have called it 'The Marvel of Missions". During his ministry in Tientsin, twenty-one graduates of the Medical College were converted, many of them being from official families. Many of these afterwards were engaged in evangelistic work, one of them, the late Mr. Y. S. Lee, being so much used of God that he was called "The Moody of China."

The Rev. H. L. Stephens of Toronto, is expected to speak to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Rev. Mr. Richards in the evening.

IS SOME LEMON

Mr. Frank Wise Has Grown One That Weighs No Less Than 19 Ounces.

Mr. Frank Wise, superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery Company called at the Examiner office last night with a decided curiosity in the lemon kingdom. Anything in the shape of a lemon is of course a curiosity around the Examiner office, but the particular specimen that Mr. Wise had in his possession would attract attention in places where lemons are not as scarce as around the sanctum sanctorum of this sheet. This lemon weighed no less than 19 ounces and measured twelve by fifteen inches. As some one sagely remarked after looking over the monster, "That would do a circus lemonade stand for the season." It was grown by Mr. Wise on a tree bought by him from the late Ben Cooney and is certainly a curiosity in point of size.

Consumptives should try Allen's Lung Balsam; it can be had of any Druggist.

The following officers were appointed:

Says That Advertising Signs Disfigure Landscape

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I see by an item in the "Examiner" that one of our enterprising firms has asked (and secured) permission from that august body of men who conduct the city's business, to erect a large sign on an island in the river. No doubt enterprise is to be commended and advertising (newspaper and other legitimate kinds) is one of the biggest factors in the commercial life of to-day. But no firm should be allowed to disfigure the landscape by the erection of huge signs, however artistic they may appear, or however trade-drawing they may apparently be. I say apparently. All along the lines of our leading railways there are numbers of those hideous, offensive to the sight of anyone with an eye to the beautiful, and provocative of a desire to boycott by everyone who reads them. These are in many of the larger American cities thousands of people who have pledged themselves not to patronize any article of any firm who thus violates the ethics of good taste, whether it is in the advertising of plug tobacco or a plug hat, and many on this side of the line hold the same views. Neither does it help any to be informed that the city is to be allowed space to exploit its advantages. It makes the good old city look "cheap."

Yours very truly,

A LOVER OF NATURE.

Peterborough, March 15, 1910.

CHAMPIONS HAD A SMALL SALARY LIST THIS SEASON

Renfrew has captured the scoring honours of the National League with one of the highest priced hockey teams that ever stepped on the ice, but it remained for Wanderers to land the championship and Stanley Cup with a team that is as cheaply paid an aggregation as there was in the National League. Renfrew had eleven players on its pay roll when the season closed last Friday night, all of them drawing at least $1,200 for the season. The Millionaires went as high as $3,000 for the scheduled games, and besides paying these big wages, carried their big retinue of players, etc., on all the trips that the club took to complete its schedule. This is a sharp contrast to the financial showing of the champions, who handled their team as close to the mark as possible throughout the whole season. Cecil Blatchford, who played two games with the Wanderers, was the highest paid athlete with the red-banded team. Blatchford received $1,350 for his services as a hockeyist and he was replaced later in the season by young Harry Hyland, a kid who drew about $600 for his playing, although he developed into one of the stars of the National League. Pud Glass more than earned the $1,200 which he was paid to stay by the Wanderers, while $1,100 was little enough to hand out to Ernie Russell, one of the shiftiest centre ice men in the game. Ernie Johnson was signed up for $1,000 dollars, while Jack Marshall, the former Shamrock veteran, went through the season for about $600. Riley Hern, the goal tend, drew a little less. Jimmie Gardner, the Wanderer manager, signed up for about $1,200, and there you have the entire salary list of the National League champions for 1910.

Pat Doran, the club owner, is said to be willing to dispose of his interests in the club, and the crafty Irish stevedore should be well satisfied with his efforts. He was "knocked" from the start when he bought up the Wanderer name, and it was even hinted that he had been handed a quince. However, results show that his success was the greatest that could be achieved in the hockey world. The Wanderers may move back to the Arena next year, and they may not, but they will miss the brains and leadership of one Pat Doran unless that gentleman can be induced to again take over the leadership of the world's champions.

PROBATION AND PAROLE SYSTEM AS IN USE AT ELMIRA INSTITUTION

Able and Eloquent Address Before the Canadian Club by Mr. J. P. Downey, M.P.P., of Guelph, on Subject of "Prison Reform."

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

An address teeming with suggestions of helpful encouragement to the unfortunates who make up the large number of inmates in the prisons and penitentiaries of the country, was that delivered last evening before the local Canadian Club by Mr. J. P. Downey, M.P.P., of Guelph. The third of the series of addresses to be given before the Canadian Club this year, took place last evening at the Hotel National. There was a large gathering of members who thoroughly enjoyed the instructive and interesting remarks of the speaker. Mr. Downey is a man of eloquence and power, and in beautiful language deals with his subject in a manner that is altogether pleasing to his hearers.

The menu at last night's dinner was up to the usual high standard provided by Mine Host Denison, and the catering was done very satisfactorily. The president, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, occupied the chair, and in fitting words introduced Mr. Downey, reading a poetical reference to the speaker, which recently appeared in a Canadian newspaper.

Prison Reform.

The above was the subject of the address by Mr. Downey, who, before coming to it, thanked the officers of the Club for the honour conferred upon him in asking him to speak. The presence of a Canadian Club in a place was an evidence of the interest taken in the progress of the country. He believed that men could best serve their country by their undying love. "We of Irish blood," he said, "rejoice in the improvements in the Motherland. We rejoice in the fact that the discordant element is passing away."

Returning to his subject, the speaker remarked that the question of prison reform gave no opportunities for flights of oratory. It was a simple problem. It was summed up in the question "Are we doing our duty to those who have not lived up to the highest standard of society?" It was not an agitation of faddists who were seized with an overflow of feeling for prisoners. Prison reform did not advocate the principles of wrongdoing. But it did mean that a man should be kept in custody, until he could contribute to the well being of society. Mr. Downey referred to the work of John Howard, the commoner, along the lines of prison reform. He began this great work, carrying as he did, into the dungeons, cheeriness and brightness. He laboured unceasingly in the great capitals of Europe, in his efforts to alleviate the sufferings of imprisoned persons. The eighteenth century was drawing to a close before any effort was put forth in this respect in Great Britain, and not until the early part of last century was anything done on this continent. He spoke of the steps leading to the formation of such an institution as that at Elmira, N.Y., but there were yet, he remarked, too many prisons where the hall and chain and the triangle were in use, leaving no hope whatever for the criminal. Prison reform punished a misdemeanant by sending him to prison and not while he was incarcerated. Society should see that every moment of a wrongdoer's incarceration should be taken up in improving himself and trying to live down the old life, that when the prison doors were opened to him he might come out a new man.

Mr. Downey, continuing, said that a prisoner entering an institution like that at Elmira was informed that his detention there depended on himself. The officials assure him of their willingness to help him. He was assigned to a workshop and entered the second grade. If his conduct merited it he was advanced to the first grade. If he continued to win the confidence of the officials he was brought before the Institutional Parole Board, who recommended him to be allowed the freedom of the farm of the institution. If he continued to be faithful and true the State Parole Board gave him his liberty on parole.

One of the essentials of prison reform was the indeterminate sentence. The determinate sentence carried with it no hope, the prisoner thought he was there for a certain number of years, no matter what his conduct was. With the indeterminate sentence his incarceration altogether depended on his own behaviour. The speaker referred to some objections which had risen against the indeterminate sentence. "We are told," he said, "that it shortens the period of confinement, but statistics have shown that it lengthened rather than diminished. Statistics further evidenced the fact that eighty per cent. of the criminals never returned to the prison. If we could bring about such results as that, would it not be to the economic betterment of the community?"

The speaker went on to remark that judges very often sentenced men according to how they felt when doing so. It has been said that the sentences were lenient when the judges were feeling all right. An instance of this inequality was cited in the case of a man being given seven years for burglary, while another guilty of assault and burglary only received five years. There should be no inequalities. When a man commits an offence he should know what he is going to get.

In conclusion, Mr. Downey said that he would like to see the adoption of the Probation and Parole system. If a boy could be given suspended sentence, surely it was not too much for a man.

"You will feel that you have not done your duty to these poor unfortunates until this is done. We are enjoying our liberty because we have not been tempted as they have. There are many men behind prison walls who are just as righteous as some walking the streets. Surely there was no more noble duty than to lift up these poor unfortunates."

A vote of thanks was tendered the speaker of the evning, Mr. J. H. Burnham making the motion, and Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., seconding it, in neat speeches. The gathering closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Chairman at Last Night's Very Successful Dinner of the Canadian Club.

HUSBAND AND WIFE END LIFE TOGETHER

Doctor and His Wife Take Poison—Leave a Pathetic Note.

Philadelphia, March 12.—Seated opposite each other at the breakfast table in their apartments on Filbert street, near 19th, to-day, Dr. Charles C. Benson, 73 years old, and his wife, Isabella, 67, drained two glasses containing poison and died soon after.

When the room of their apartments was entered, Dr. Benson and his wife were found seated face to face at the table, with their heads drooping. Two notes lay on the table, one of which read: "My dear wife and I have decided that we do not wish to longer live. We have committed suicide. We ask for decent attention and wish our bodies cremated and the ashes scattered in the air. To those who will attend to our funeral we will give all the property remaining to us. I have two patents pending in the patent office, and much medicine and drugs, also some little furniture."

Dr. Benson was an Englishman and had lived in this country for forty years. His wife came from Baltimore, and the couple at one time lived in that city.

The doctor was a candidate for a prize offered by the French Academy of Medicine for the discovery of a cure for tuberculosis.

HOT FIGHT OVER POWER

Hon. Mr. Emmerson Leads the Attack on Proposed International Scheme by Saying Canada Is Getting the Worst of It—Hon. Mr. Fielding Brings Down Some More Supplementary Estimates.

Ottawa, March 15.—There was a battle royal in the Commons last evening over the bill to incorporate the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Co.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson joined the ranks of the opponents of the bill, and gave E. F. Pardee (West Lambton) and Robert Smith (Stormont), the chief advocates of the applicant interests, a warm time. Talking of the bill Mr. Emmerson said: "I see lurking in it a menace and a danger to Canadian interests."

He understood that this bill was simply preliminary to another bill which would be brought to the attention of the House, and would be the counterpart of a bill passed by the New York State Legislature. Parliament had already given powers to a company in 1894 to dam the St. Lawrence. The present bill would supply the power for transmission, which the company now lacked.

When it was recognized, said Mr. Emmerson, that the State of New York insisted upon the new company, just incorporated, exercising its power only for a consideration, he wondered why this Parliament was willing to give this power for nothing. "It is time for this Parliament to halt," he insisted, "and to enquire fully how far the powers of this company of 1894 are to be used by this great American company."

Major Sharpe (North Ontario) opposed the bill strongly. Any policy that tended to detract from the hydro-electric policy of the Ontario Government, he said, should not be encouraged.

F. B. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.) said the Hydro-Electric Commission pretended to sell the people power for $20 per unit, when they really charged from $60 to $70.

J. E. Armstrong (East Lambton). "Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to give an instance?"

Mr. Carvell named Stratford, Ingersoll, Galt, "and lots more." Stratford would pay $65 to $75 per peak load, transforming and a hundred and one other things.

Andrew Broder (Dundas) believed the company was but the forerunner of a bigger project to come. He objected to the independent right the company would have to cross farms.

Mr. Armstrong defended the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission and its operations. Stratford would get a full amount of power for $20.48 per h.p., three-quarters for $21.48, and half for $24.04.

J. G. Turiff (Assiniboia) agreed with Major Sharpe that the bill should be referred back to the committee, in order to verify the statements made by Hon. H. R. Emmerson.

R. L. Borden said that the right of the people of Ontario to develop their own natural resources should not be interfered with in Parliament.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley supported the bill and declared that the Ontario Government had already encroached upon the rights of the Dominion. In this case, the Ontario Government had no privilege to develop power on the St. Lawrence, because it was a navigable river, and an international stream.

Mr. Pugsley said that the plans of the St. Lawrence Power Co. to dam the St. Lawrence had been submitted to his department. No plans would be approved which would not protect Canadian interests. Half of any power development must be conserved for Canada, and the Canadian Government would demand the same revenue from the company as is demanded by the State of New York.

Mr. Borden asked if he had any objections to tabling the plans.

Mr. Pugsley said he had not, but that they were not necessary to this bill.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson supported Mr. Borden's requests for plans, and Mr. Borden said he was astonished that Mr. Pugsley had gone so far. Big questions were opened up, and he suggested to the Finance Minister, who was leading the House, that the committee rise.

Supplementary estimates for the current year amounting to $2,362,177, were tabled in the Commons yesterday by Hon. W. S. Fielding. Of this, $1,718,650 is chargeable to consolidated fund, and $500,300 to capital, while the rest covers "unprovided items."

The votes include:

Experimental farms and additional branch stations $25,000.

Repairing Sault Ste. Marie Canal break, $135,000.

Had a Bad Cough For a Number of Years.

Was Afraid of Consumption.

Mrs. A. E. Brown, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I have had a very bad cough every winter for a number of years which I was afraid would turn into consumption. I tried a great many remedies but only received temporary relief until I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking two bottles my cough was cured. I am never without a bottle of Norway Pine Syrup."

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately or serious results may follow.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the medicine you need. It strikes at the foundation of all throat and lung complaints, relieving or curing all Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, etc., and preventing Pneumonia and Consumption.

So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it.

Don't be imposed upon but insist on getting "Dr. Wood's."

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WHAT WILL TAFT DO?

He Is Faced With Problem In Matter of Canada.

Washington, D.C., March 15.—At the end of a four-hour conference with his tariff advisers yesterday, President Taft had not arrived at a decision as to the action he will take with respect to extending to Canada and France the 25 per cent. reduction in tariff rates, which he is allowed to grant to nations that are shown to be not "unduly discriminatory" against the United States.

It is said that the situation with respect to Canada is all but hopeless, and the indications are that the biggest and nearest neighbor of the United States may be the one important country which the maximum rates of the Payne-Aldrich law will have to be applied.

Negotiations looking to a settlement with France are progressing satisfactorily. It is said a new proposal was received from France yesterday, and it was intimated that a settlement by which France may send its products to the United States under the 25 per cent. reduction clause is not unexpected. The negotiations are far from complete, however, and another hitch may occur at any time.

President Taft is charged with deciding from all the facts available just what nations unduly discriminate against the United States and may extend a 25 per cent. reduction in all rates to those nations not included in this unfavorable list.

Canada is said to have made no effort to secure this preferential treatment from the United States.

It is declared, in fact, that the Dominion Government has left no loophole for President Taft to do otherwise than allow the maximum rates automatically to go into effect against imports from that country.

Twenty-Seven Dreadnoughts by 1913.

London, March 15.—Introducing the navy estimates in the House of Commons yesterday, Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, expressed regret that he was unable to hold out any hope for the future of a decline of the estimates.

He defended the present large increase, which he said had been rendered necessary by th building program of foreign nations.

An expenditure of over $200,000,000 was imperative to properly safeguard the security of the country and to provide against contingencies.

Mr. McKenna explains that, counting the Australian and New Zealand ships, which would still be in British waters, Great Britain would have, in the summer of 1912, 22 Dreadnoughts, while in the following January five Dreadnoughts in addition to this year's program, would be added to the fleet, and thus Great Britain's security through this type of ship would be absolutely secure.

Railway Strike Delayed.

Washington, D.C., March 15.—The threatened strike of the 26,000 firemen and engineers of the railroads west of Chicago will not be called until after the federal authorities have been asked to mediate under the Erdman Act.

INVESTORS!!!

MONEY-MAKING OPPORTUNITIES

In our advertisement of last week we informed you that we were opening a department for the handling of syndicate accounts. By the word "syndicate" we mean the joining together of a number of small cash accounts and the utilization of the total sum for the investment of money in New York stocks. By this method the small investor obtains a footing equivalent to the man with a large bank account. For instance, if a man has $100 to invest, the least he could get would be ten shares of stock, and his $100 would protect him ten points. A market such as we have at present, is capable of moving as much as twenty-five points, although this seldom occurs. Therefore the small investor would be wiped out of his money and have nothing to show for it. By putting his $100 into a pool and operating the pool along conservative lines, large percentage profits can be made. This is what we are doing.

Send us what money you can spare, and we will look after it for you. We will do the buying and selling, notifying clients at the end of each week what has been done. Sometimes the markets are not active enough or are in an unsafe condition, in which case we may use our judgment and not operate. In this case we allow our clients 6 per cent. interest on the amount of money to their credit. This is better than you can do in any other line of business, and have your money available. Credit balances can always be withdrawn by making draft on us, by telephoning us or calling in and getting a cheque.

The following are a few instances of what money will do, operating in stocks, taking the range of prices of yesterday, the 11th inst., as an example, the amount of money in use being $600 in each case, the profits being for the day alone:—

By selling 20 Union Pacific.....$60 could have been made
By selling 20 Reading .... 40 could have been made
By selling 20 United States Steel. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Southern Pacific .. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Smelters .... 40 could have been made

It will be seen that $40 is the lowest profit on any one of the above six mentioned stocks, and $40 in a day on a $600 investment means enormous profit. Figure it out for yourself. While this percentage cannot be made daily, yet an average of over 50 per cent. is assured on absolutely safe grounds.

Send us a deposit and let us show you how it will grow.

By having a large number of accounts, we will make a great deal of money for our clients, and by so doing will make a fair return on the work involved, out of our commissions. We charge the regular brokerage commission of one-eighth each way for buying and selling, that is for every 100 shares, $12.50 for buying and $12.50 for selling.

Put some of your money with us, and do it now. The market is in a splendid trading condition, and small amounts will grow very rapidly. You can, as we have pointed out before, always withdraw if you do not care to leave your balance open. All we ask you to do is to let us demonstrate to you what can be done in the money making line by conservative investment in New York stocks.

Write us and open an account to-day. You cannot make money faster in any other line of business. You cannot put your money out and have it placed at anything like the earning power that you will have here.

COBALT STOCKS

Cobalt stocks show signs of greater activity. There is an extraordinary demand for good Cobalt properties, and the control of Cobalt mining properties by American capitalists.

Temiskaming recently struck very rich ore at the 425-foot level, demonstrating the fact that the Cobalt camp is not a shallow one, and that this mining region is proving itself to be one of the mining wonders of the world. The gold discoveries in the Porcupine district are also turning out wonderfully well. We strongly recommend the purchase of Temiskaming, Cobalt Lake, Gifford and Beaver. We carry these on margin.

Write, telephone or wire us your orders. Let us make you money. We have done it for others.

The sheep and lamb market was very firm at an advance in prices. Lambs sold at from $7.50 to $9 per cwt.; sheep, ewes, sold at from $5 to $6 per cwt.

Hogs.

Dealers quoted $9.65 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $9.40, f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 14.—(Special)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West-End Market the receipts for last week were 2005 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 1700 hogs and 900 calves. The supply this morning consisted of 1200 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 375 calves.

A feature was the stronger undertone for cattle, and prices for really choice Ontario stall-fed stock show an advance of 25c, due to limited offerings. Supplies of other grades were quite ample, with values unchanged from a week ago. Another feature was the display of some very choice bulls, from 1200 to 2000 lbs., for which demand was fair at 5½c to 6c. Notwithstanding stormy weather, the gathering of buyers was fairly large. A few extra choice stall-fed Ontario steers sold at $6.65 per cwt., while choice brought 6¼c to 6½c; good, 5¾c to 6c; fair, 5½c to 5¾c; medium, 5¼c to 5c; common, 4c to 4½c; cows, 3½c to 4½c, and ordinary bulls, 4c to 5c per lb.

Hog prices are still soaring, and where a further advance of 25c per 100 lbs. since this day week, and indications are that they will go still higher, on account of limited supplies. The demand from packers was fairly good, and sales of selected

Market Reports.

1078 were made at prices to range per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The foreign market for Canadian bacon is strong, and cables just to hand from Liverpool, London and Bristol note a further advance of 1s to 3s per cwt., making a net rise within the past two weeks of 4s to 7s.

A feature of the market for small meats is the keen demand from butchers for calves, and, altho supplies are steadily increasing, sales of some choice stock, from 150 to 175 lbs., dressed, were made at $15 to $22 each. Commoner ones sold from the inside figure down to $3.

The butchers complain very much about the system drovers have adopted in disposing of their calves. For instance, if a drover has a lot of fifty head, of which 25 per cent. are not fit for human food, he will not sell any unless the buyer takes the lot, with the chances of having probably half of them confiscated by the inspector.

The trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, and prices ruled firm. A few small lots of yearling lambs were sold at 7c to 7½c, and sheep at 4½c to 5c per lb.

CHAS. J. RAY,
Captain of the Strathconas, Who Were Banquetted by the City League last Evening.

MR. E. N. McWILLIAMS,
Vice-President of the City Hockey League, Who was Vice-Chairman at the Annual Banquet.

The City Hockey League of 1909-10 is now a thing of the past.

The climax of the most successful season in the history of the organization took place last evening at the Oriental Hotel when the champion Strathcona team were banqueted by the other league teams at a most enjoyable function at which were present over half a hundred hockey enthusiasts. The affair was a fitting ending of the season and the spirit of harmony and good fellowship which ran round the tables made the gathering one that was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. The menu left nothing to be desired and the programme was not too lengthy and varied enough to be always interesting. The result was a most successful function and President C. G. Graham, who was principally instrumental in the arrangements, is to be congratulated upon the happy results of his efforts.

All the champion team and their officers were present with the exception of Hugh Burritt, who is now in Toronto, and occupied seats together at the west side of the room. The other three league teams were well represented, while there was a good sized contingent of fans present as well. The Stratton Trophy, gaily decorated with red and white occupied a prominent position on the tables and the waitresses wore the same colours out of compliment to the champions.

Among those present were the following: Mr. C. G. Graham, president of the League, Mr. E. N. McWilliams, vice-president, of the League, Chas. J. Ray, Leo Derocher, Alan Campbell, Ira D. Moore, Fred B. Denison, Ben C. Dusty, Herb McMillan, P. A. Weatherstone, W. J. Metheral, Bert Parnell, Sam Thomas, Chas. E. Curtis, Fred D. During the repast an excellent programme was given by a large Victor Gramaphone, kindly loaned and operated by Mr. W. H. Freeland, of the Victor company, the selections adding considerably to the enjoyment of the occasion.

President C. G. Graham made a very efficient toast master and the programme was run off in a capital fashion.

The first toast that to His Majesty the King was heartily honoured, the gathering singing the National anthem.

Mr. W. McIlroy was called upon for a solo and sang "Come After Breakfast, Bring Round Your Lunch and Leave Before Supper Time," from "His Honour the Barber," in a manner that elicited repeated applause and called for an encore to which Mr. McIlroy responded with an effective rendition of the ballad, "Some Day When Dreams Come True."

The toast to the champions and presentation of the Examiner Trophy to the Strathconas followed. Before calling upon Mr. R. M. Glover to make the presentation, President Graham congratulated the Strathconas on their well earned victory and also the West Ends, upon the fine showing they had made. It was anybody's championship until the final game. Mr. Graham also extended congratulations to the T. A. S. and Keene Clubs on the manner in which they had played the game

Presentation of Trophy.

Mr. Glover in presenting the Trophy expressed his thanks to the officers of the League for the invitation to be present and the regret of Hon. J. R Stratton that he was unable to attend to present the cup of which he was the donor. Mr. Stratton always liked to be present upon such occasions, but had been called away that morning to Ottawa upon parliamentary business and had to forego the pleasure.

Mr. Glover stated that it gave him much pleasure to present the Stratton Trophy to the Strathconas who had played good hockey and had deserved to win. They were entitled to great credit for the manner in which they had played the game. Manager Metheral and his associates had seen the folly of playing rough hockey and had instructed their men to stay on the ice and play clean games and they had done so, with the result that they had won the championship for the third time.

The Peterborough Hockey Club was under a deep debt of gratitude to the Strathconas for the support they had given them during the past two or three years. Had it not been for their assistance it would hardly have been possible to carry on the Peterborough Club. They had always cheerfully and willingly given any of their men when called upon to do so, and in this way had been of great use. During the season just past this was true not only of the Commissioners but of the other teams of the League as well. All had united in helping the senior club and their assistance had been of much value. Every player called upon had done his part without any complaint.

The officials of the League were to be congratulated upon the manner in which they looked after the affairs of the organization. It had been characterized by some one as a fence corner league, but Mr. Glover was sure that other more pretentious leagues might profitably adopt the constitution and methods of the local league.

Speaking of hockey the speaker remarked that it was one of the best games a young man could take up, and if he got everything out of it that could be obtained it would be sure to help him. Mr. Glover then asked the Strathconas to accept the Stratton Trophy and the gathering to honour the toast to the champions.

The health of the Strathconas was honoured in a most hearty manner, the gathering singing "They are Jolly Good Fellows" and giving three cheers and a tiger for the Commissioners.

Manager Metheral of the Strathconas, was greeted with a chorus of "See Him Smiling" when he arose to reply to the toast. He thanked those present for the enjoyable banquet and the hearty manner in which they had done honour to the champion team.

He was sorry that Hon. Mr. Stratton, the donor of the Trophy, was unable to be present. He had always taken a keen interest in the affairs of the League and in sport generally and had thrown the columns of the Examiner open for the use of the sporting organizations of the city.

Mr. Metheral congratulated the other teams of the League on the brand of hockey they had shown during the season, especially the West End Club, which had put up a very hard fight. He hoped that all the teams would be in line next season and that the League would enjoy an even more successful campaign next year.

The speaker paid a tribute to the past president of the League, Mr. Fred A. Clarke, who, he said, had done more than anyone else who had ever been connected with the League, for the organization. Mr. Clarke was responsible for the iron bound constitution which the League enjoyed and against which there had never been a protest or a complaint.

The season just closed had been the most successful since the inception of the League, but there was every reason to expect a still better showing next season.

An instrumental duet by Mr. Frank Clarke on the banjo and Mr. J. C. Baisch on the mandolin was a pleasant interlude and the skill of the artists drew a hearty encore, to which a reply was as heartily given.

Sister Sports.

The next toast "Sister Sports," was neatly proposed by Mr. E. N. McWilliams, who in doing so, congratulated the champions on their success and also on the way in which they had stuck to the City League season after season. He expressed also congratulations to the West End Club for the gallant fight they had made.

Mr. W. O'Brien replied to the toast on behalf of the baseball community. He felicitated the Strathconas and regretted that such banquets did not come after the baseball season, the T.A.S. having won the City Baseball championship last season. He hoped the Baseball League would enjoy as successful a season as had the hockey association.

Mr. Jack Deannard upheld the dignity of the rugby enthusiasts in a neat speech and Mr. A. St. A. Smith, of Keene, on behalf of the curlers, congratulating the winners on their success and the West Ends on their fine showing. The Keene Club had enjoyed its first year and hoped to finish higher up next season.

Dr. Vic McWilliams, of Keene, also made a witty response to the toast 'The Keene Club.' He said he had enjoyed playing in the City Hockey League. They had tried to do their best and while the other teams were too strong for them, they had learned a good deal about hockey and that was what they wanted. Although it was only a small place they were a pretty good bunch of sports and took a defeat or a win with equal good

MR. C. G. GRAHAM,
President of the City Hockey League, Who Very Ably Fulfilled the Duties of Chairman at Last Night's Banquet.

grace. "If we could develop a team that could lift the Stanley Cup," remarked Dr. McWilliams amid much laughter, "we would be proud of them."

Keene had been represented by Mr Millar on the Edmonton Stanley Cup chasers and they were proud of that fact, and if they could turn out a man every few years who could play either with or against the Cup holders they would be satisfied. They would be glad to be back in the City League next season if it was agreeable to the officers of that organization.

Mr. Jas. Browne's splendid tenor voice was effectually displayed in a ballad, which was much appreciated, and as an encore he sang "Tipperary," the gathering joining in the chorus.

The Referees.

Mr. L. J. Picard proposed the next toast, that to the "Referee" and in doing so paid a tribute to the work of Messrs. Rose and McDougall, who he was sure had acted impartially and fairly in their work and there could be little complaint.

Mr. S. W. Rose in reply, after expressing his congratulations to the winners and runners up, thanked the players of the different teams for the manner in which they had complied with his decisions during the season.

Mr. Roy V. McDougall, of Keene, also made a suitable reply to the toast, remarking that he had only officiated in one game, and that very much against his will.

Mr. Baisch contributed a harmonica solo that was much appreciated and had to respond to an encore.

To the secretary of the League, Mr. F. D. Craig, fell the pleasant honour of proposing the toast to "The Ladies," and he did proper homage to the fair sex, the health being honoured heartily.

Messrs. B. Dusty and Leo Derocher made neat speeches in reply, their remarks indicating a careful and long pursued study of the characteristics and qualities of the ladies.

Before the gathering dispersed President Graham expressed the thanks of the City League to those who had so kindly taken part in the programme.

Secretary Craig proposed an impromptu toast to "Our Host," expressing the thanks of the gathering for the trouble which President Graham had gone to to make the event a success and the toast was honoured amid great applause.

Mr. Graham replied briefly and a most successful event was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

The officers of the League are as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses—Ex-Mayor and Mrs. Rush; Dr. and Mrs. Gibson, (Lakefield); Dr. and Mrs. Wightman, Dr. and Mrs. McWilliams, (Keene); Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Merrell.

Hon. President—Hon. J. R. Stratton, P.

Hon Vice-President—Mr R. A. Morrow.

President—C. G. Graham.

1st Vice President—E. N. McWilliams.

2nd Vice President—John Oldham.

Secretary-treasurer—Fred D. Craig.

Mr. Geo. Schneider added considerably to the pleasure of the evening by his splendid work as accompanist.

Sentenced To Three Months In County Jail For Stealing

The court session this morning lasted from ten o'clock until half past twelve. Many cases were tried, the largest one being that of a young man who stole money from Nelson Shaughnwhite, a boarder of the American hotel. Nelson Shaughnwhite has been in town for three weeks, coming from Nova Scotia.

It appears the informant, Nelson Shaughnwhite received a cheque for $17.32 from his employer at the Waterworks dam, and cashed it at the Bank of Toronto. He put the money in his pocket and returned to the hotel. Yesterday afternoon he was drinking in the American hotel bar when suddenly he felt some one putting his hand in his pocket. He immediately accused the young man of stealing six dollars from him. The accused offered himself to be searched, but the complainant thought it inexpedient as he might have passed it to some of his friends.

Sam Long, who is manager of the American hotel, said he was bartender yesterday afternoon and noticed the informant and defendant in there. Mr. Long was informed of the theft and promptly looked into the case, but couldn't find the money.

The next witness, Harry Flinders, who for the past two years had been working for Mr. S. Long, gave evidence that he had seen the defendant put his hand in Shaughnwhite's pocket and take some money from it, but he did not know how much.

Mr. A. J. Carroll gave evidence, which coincided with that given by Harry Flinders.

The accused and his brother gave evidence that he didn't take the money, while his brother swore that he was nearest to the accused and hadn't seen him take it.

The informant stated that he remained around the hotel for some time and then went to procure a policeman. P. C. McGinty responded to the call and secured the prisoner in the Grand Hotel. The accused while being taken to gaol escaped from custody but was rounded up later in the evening.

The magistrate told the prisoner that the evidence given by disinterested, independent witnesses was to be believed and he had no doubt that he was guilty.

After some hesitation his Worship sentenced him to three months in gaol.

The next charge was laid against George Garett for being a vagrant. George pleaded guilty and received fifteen days in gaol.

William White, a pal of George Garrett's, pleaded guilty to the same charge and received the regular period of time, two weeks.

FOUGHT IT OUT

Walter Smaill and Chief Jones Settled Their Differences in Hotel Rotunda.

Ottawa, March 14.—Hockey players are discussing these days an interesting story of a lively little bout between two well-known puckchasers. It appears that Walter Smaill and Chief Jones, while members of the Cobalt team, had a "run in," so to speak, in the Silver country. After the Ottawa-Cobalt game in this city, in which Smaill played for Ottawa and Jones for Cobalt, they met face to face in the Russell house. Jones threatened to "pulverize" Smaill and the Ottawa cover point, who is of a quiet and unassuming nature, refused to knock the chip off Jones' shoulder. Friends interfered and spoiled it.

At Montreal one day towards the close of last week Smaill and Jones met in the Queen's Hotel. Jones went at the Ottawa man as soon as he appeared, and Walter Smaill defended himself. Now, Tommie Hare is said to be willing to match Jones against Jack Johnson any day, and Smaill is also a classy little boxer. Jones qualifies himself for the heavyweight class, while Smaill could not make the middle-weight, but a battle royal followed in which honours ended about even. Herb Clarke and others separated the two before much damage was done.

Hostilities are understood to have been renewed at Montreal because Smaill made it clear that he could not conscientiously apologize for something concerning Jones that he had said while at Cobalt.

SMALLPOX OUTBREAK

Record Showing Made Of Grain Machinery

A grand showing of farm machinery, probably the biggest ever seen in this district is being made to-day by the International Harvester Company of Hamilton in the annual spring turnout of farm machinery sold to customers in this district. No less than ten car loads of harvesters, binders, rakes, etc., were shipped by the company into Peterborough and are on view to-day on Water St. outside the offices of Messrs. Young and McConkey, the local agents of the firm.

Mr. A. S. Allan, assistant manager of the International Harvester Company and Mr. Geo. S. Robson of the Gasoline Engine Department, are in charge of the distribution and superintended the distribution of the machinery. The firm entertained about eighty of their customers from this district at luncheon at the Munro House to-day and a very enjoyable time was spent by those present.

Some idea of the magnitude of the International Harvester Company, may be gained when it is said that the firm operate nineteen factories, own two timber limits and two iron mines and construct every part of their machinery including the wood work.

A large number of citizens viewed the display with interest to-day.

CHARMING SPRING MILLINERY

Messrs. Ennis and Armstrong invite the ladies of Peterboro' to their display of charming Spring millinery to be held on Thursday, March 17th and following days of this week. Show rooms corner of George and Sincoe Streets, Upstairs, over Payne's Drug Store. 2d-59

A GOOD TEAM

Onlooker in the Montreal Star, after taking little jibes at the Northern Crown bank hockey team previous to their visit east, has been finally forced to admit their greatness. Onlooker says: "It is now quite clear that the Winnipeg bank clerks knew what they were about when they set out to conquer the young Napoleons of finance of the east. They have moved on from victory to victory, and have now crowned their tour by winning the championship of the bank league of Canada. Perhaps now these Winnipeg financiers will give their ambition a higher flight and seek hockey honours in more conspicuous fields."

A POCKET WIRELESS

Priest Named Prof. Cerebotani Exhibits a Tiny Replica of the Marconi Instrument Which Will Revolutionize Communication—Invented & Simply to Vindicate Himself, He Says.

Berlin, March 16.—A pocket wireless telegraph apparatus was exhibited by the inventor, Prof. Cerebotani, the priest in charge of the Munich parish, during a scientific lecture before an audience of persons engaged in the various branches of scientific investigation, Monday night.

The instrument consists of a wooden base with the letters of the alphabet thereupon, arranged in a circle. A small metal indicator swings on a pivot in the centre, so adjusted as to respond to the wireless dot and dash currents, and spells out the message. The apparatus is very simple. It is somewhat larger than the ordinary card case.

Prof. Cerebotani declared that a French journalist had attributed to him erroneously the invention of a pocket wireless telegraph instrument some time ago. He wrote to the journalist denying the invention. However, his letter was not published, and, accordingly, nothing remained for him in the way of vindication except to invent the apparatus described, which he proceeded to do.

Big Fire at Elk Lake.

Haileybury, March 16.—The second fire in less than two months visited the Town of Elk Lake, when, yesterday morning, the town on the west side of the river was almost destroyed by fire.

The buildings include the King Edward Hotel, owned by George Fallenson; Woods' hardware store; Chanandy Bros.' general store, and other smaller buildings and businesses.

The part burned by the fire of several weeks ago destroyed the east side of the river, with a loss of $50,000. The present loss will be more than double that amount.

The town has now but one hotel, the Royal Alexandra, all the others having been destroyed by the two fires.

Killed at Crossing.

Hamilton, March 16.—Mrs. J. M. Mail of Stoney Creek, was struck by a Hamilton, Grimsby and Beamsville car yesterday morning at Battlefield Crossing near Stoney Creek and instantly killed.

The car was traveling at fifteen miles an hour. The woman was hurled against an embankment thirty feet from the crossing, where she was picked up, life was extinct. An inquest was opened at Stoney Creek yesterday afternoon.

Members Of The House Sat Up All Night

Argued for Twenty Hours on Power Bill Before a Compromise Was Reached---Mr. Pugsley Promises to Bring Down the Plans of the Long Sault Dam or Explain Their Absence if First Clause is Passed and Conservatives Agree.

Ottawa, March 16.—After a strenuous fight, waged with great determination for over twenty hours, against the St. Lawrence Power Transmission bill, the Opposition hoisted the white flag at four o'clock yesterday afternoon and allowed the first clause of the bill to go through on a promise by the Minister of Public Works that the plans of the St. Lawrence Power Co., which was incorporated nine years ago, and which, it is contended, is associated with the transmission company now seeking incorporation, will be tabled at the next hearing.

The struggle, which was precipitated during the debate Monday night, when Hon. Dr. Pugsley declined to accede to the Opposition demands to see certain plans which had been prepared by Government engineers in connection with the proposals to dam the Long Sault Rapids, came to a close at a quarter to four yesterday afternoon. The House did not rise, however, but proceeded with other business, just as if it had met at three o'clock. A curious result is that, officially, there will be no Tuesday sitting of the House this week. Monday's sitting continuing over the two days without an adjournment.

The breaking of the deadlock was the result of a compromise arrived at after nearly 17 hours of continuous discussion, commencing at 8 p.m. on Monday. It followed a motion to adjourn, made by Col. Sam Hughes, but which was rejected by a vote of 34 to 32.

Soon after the vote had been taken, Col. Hughes said that he thought he could speak for the Opposition leader in saying that, if Mr. Pugsley would promise the House to bring down the plans for the development of the Long Sault water-power, to which reference had been made during the previous night, that the Opposition would agree to pass one clause of the bill which would allow the committee to report progress.

Sir Frederick Borden, who was leading the House at the moment, said that he had not been in the House during the night, and therefore did not know as to the plans Mr. Pugsley had spoken of.

Col. Hughes said that they were plans which had been prepared by a Government board of engineers at the request of the Long Sault Development Co. The Minister, he added, had said that he had no objection to bringing down these plans if he could get them.

R. L. Borden claimed that the blame for the protracted debate was due to Hon. Mr. Fielding, who would not agree to the House rising. Then Dr. Black, of Hants, had declared that the Government would not give way if the House continued in session until Saturday night. This was not the way, he said, to deal with such a situation.

Meanwhile Mr. Pugsley came into the chamber and Sir Frederick, having explained to him the proposal made by Col. Hughes, on behalf of the Opposition, the Minister of Public Works said that he would be glad to lay the plans on the table.

He had made enquiry, and had found that the plans were not in the possession of his Department. He would endeavor to get them from the chairman of the International Waterways Commission.

Mr. Pugsley suggested that, as the House had settled down to a discussion of the bill, it would be wise to put through all the non-contentious. This was greeted with cries of "No," from the Opposition benches, and Mr. Pardee, the sponsor of the bill and chief Liberal whip, said he was willing to accept the Opposition proposal. He would produce the plans provided he could get them if the Opposition would allow a clause of the bill to go through. If he could not get them, he would give his reasons to the House.

Mr. Borden: "We will make it our duty to consider these reasons."

Mr. Pugsley: "I do not consider that the necessity for doing so will arise."

The first clause of the bill was then passed, and the committee reported progress. The bill is not likely to come up again until Monday next.

On the second reading of Hon. Mr. Oliver's bill to amend the Immigration Act, the Minister explained that the chief object of the bill is to apply to points along the boundary line the same regulations in respect to exclusion which apply at ocean ports of entry.

There were, Mr. Oliver said, many changes in detail, all important and calculated to carry out more effectively the policy of the Government. An important provision of the bill was one which, while fully establishing the right of an emigrant to show before the courts reasons why he should be allowed to enter the country, does not permit him to take full advantage of the protection of the courts until he has been accepted by the immigration officials.

Richard Blain asked if any demands had been made upon the Government to abolish assisted immigration.

Mr. Oliver said that in so far as the Government is concerned, there is no such thing as assisted immigration.

Glen Campbell is asking for information as to the cost of the Doukhobors to Canada. He said that these people were a disgrace to civilization, and to the Government which had brought them to Canada.

Walter Hulett, a Windsor negro, who jumped from the ferry boat early Sunday morning in a vain effort to save a drowning woman in the Detroit River, will receive a medal and address from Windsor Council.

The duke will visit Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls.

Peace Talk In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, March 16.—One of the chief difficulties to be overcome in bringing about an amicable adjustment of the car men's strike will be the placing of all the strikers. The company declared it will take back only such men as it needs, and will not dismiss men it has employed since the strike began.

While the air is full of peace talk, the committee of ten, having the general strike in charge is working every minute of the day to extend the walkout. There was no very material change in the situation.

The committee is not meeting with much success in forcing unions, that last week decided not to strike, to reconsider their action.

The Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. declares it is steadily increasing its working force.

Fort Erie For Progress.

Fort Erie, March 16.—A bylaw for the issue of $50,000 waterworks debentures was yesterday carried by 65 majority in a total vote of 121.

HAVE VOTE ALREADY.

U. S. Suffragists Can Vote If They Wish, Says Dr. Walker.

Albany, N.Y., March 16.—Dr. Mary Walker, in which she called a "constitutional argument" before the assembly judiciary committee yesterday, made a violent attack on the women who are advocating the women suffrage bill. The terms "grafter" and "fool" figured liberally in her remarks.

She was particularly severe in her criticism of Rev. Anna Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, whom she designated as a preacher who does not preach and followed woman suffrage advocacy for a living.

The speaker insisted that all laws such as proposed are in violation of the United States constitution, which, she claims to have discovered 38 years ago, contains authority for woman suffrage.

"There's no use of such silly rubbish as this bill," she exclaimed. "If women go to the polls in a body and demand their right to vote, the men won't dare to refuse them."

Says Wheels Slipped.

Toronto March 16.—On the charge of manslaughter William McLean, motorman, of 644 West Bloor street was arrested by Detectives Cronin and Sockett yesterday. He was driving the Bloor and McCaul car which ran into the rear of the Dundas car, fatally crushing Sammy Manaceveth Monday night.

Coroner George W. Graham opened an inquest yesterday afternoon. Medical evidence showed that death was caused by shock and hemorrhage. McLean said his car struck a slippery rail as he was applying the brakes to stop at the corner, and the car skidded, running into the other. The version of the affair on which McLean was arrested was that he was fooling with the two boys while going along the street. He would drive up close to them and scare them. The inquest was adjourned until March 23.

Will Indict Duez.

Paris, March 16.—The Public Prosecutor has decided to indict M. Duez, the former Liquidator of Church Properties, for forgery and breach of confidence, which charges involve criminal penalties. The trial will be in the Assize Court. Other arrests are anticipated.

Horseman Ends His Life.

Winnipeg, March 16.—James Dobie, half-owner of The Broncho, the famous pacing mare, and one of the best known sportsmen in Canada and the Western States, committed suicide on Monday night in his room in the Leland Hotel by blowing out his brains with a heavy Colt revolver. On May 15th last Mr. Dobie suffered a stroke of paralysis, which robbed him of his speech. This is thought to have been the reason for his act. Mr. Dobie was sixty years of age. His home was in Uxbridge, Ont., he coming West twenty years ago. He was unmarried, and leaves a brother in Uxbridge.

SPECTACLES
Should be Changed

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and then go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity for such be not apparent to them. As a general rule, spectacles for close work require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every 2 years.

HAVE EYES TESTED AT INTERVALS

When you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us.

Always glad to help you.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

With this he sent the chair clattering down the steps, where it struck Jules Chauvenet's legs with a force that carried him howling lustily backward to the second landing.

Armitage turned and sped down the front stairway, hearing renewed clamor from the rear and cries of rage and pain from the second story. In fumbling for the front door he found a hat and, having lost his own, placed it upon his head, drew his inverness about his shoulders and went quickly out. A moment later he slipped the catch in the wall door and stepped into the boulevard.

The stars were shining among the flying clouds overhead, and he drew deep breaths of the freshened air into his lungs as he walked back to the Monte Rosa. Occasionally he laughed quietly to himself, for he still grasped tightly in his hand, safe under his coat, the envelope which Chauvenet had carried so very carefully concealed, and several times Armitage muttered to himself:

"A few murders, more or less!"

At the hotel he changed his clothes, threw the things from his dressing table into a bag and announced his departure for Paris by the midnight express.

As he drove to the railway station he felt for his cigarette case and discovered that it was missing. The loss evidently gave him great concern, for he searched and researched his pockets and opened his bags at the station to see if he had by any chance overlooked it, but it was not to be found anywhere.

His annoyance at the loss was balanced, could he have known it, by the interest with which, almost before the wall door had closed upon him, two gentlemen, one of them still in his shirt sleeves and with a purple lump over his forehead, bent over a gold cigarette case in the dark house on the Boulevard Froissart. It was a pretty trinket and contained when found on the kitchen floor exactly four cigarettes of excellent Turkish tobacco. On one side of it was etched in shadings of blue and white enamel a helmet, surmounted by a falcon poised for flight, and beneath the motto "Fide Non Armis." The back bore in English script, written large, the letters "F. A."

"The emblem is unmistakable. Good God, look!"

The men stared at each other wonderingly for an instant, then both leaped to their feet.

"It isn't possible!" gasped Durand.

"It is quite possible," replied Chauvenet. "The emblem is unmistakable. Good God, look!"

The sweat had broken out on Chauvenet's face, and he leaped to the chair where his coat hung and caught up the garment with shaking hands. The silk lining fluttered loose where Armitage had roughly torn out the envelope.

"Who is he? Who is he?" whispered Durand, very white of face.

"It may be—it must be some one deeply concerned."

Chauvenet paused, drawing his hand across his forehead slowly. Then the color leaped back into his face, and he caught Durand's arm so tight that the man flinched.

"There has been a man following me about. I thought he was interested in the Claibornes. He's here. I am sure I saw him at the Monte Rosa tonight. God!"

He dropped his hand from Durand's arm and struck the table fiercely with his clinched hand.

"John Armitage—John Armitage! I heard his name in Florence."

His eyes were snapping with excitement, and amazement grew in his face.

"Who is John Armitage?" demanded Durand sharply, but Chauvenet stared at him in stupefaction for a tense moment, then muttered to himself:

"Is it possible? Is it possible?" And his voice was hoarse, and his hand trembled as he picked up the cigarette case.

"My dear Jules, you act as though you had seen a ghost. Who the devil is Armitage?"

Chauvenet glanced about the room cautiously, then bent forward and whispered very low close to Durand's ear:

"Suppose he were the son of the crazy Karl! Suppose he were Frederick Augustus!"

"Bah! It is impossible! What is your man Armitage like?" asked Durand irritably.

"He is the right age. He is a big fellow and has quite an air. He seems to be without occupation."

"Clearly so," remarked Durand ironically. "But he has evidently been watching us. Quite possibly the lamented Stroebel employed him. He may have seen Stroebel here"—

Chauvenet again struck the table smartly.

"Of course he would see Strobel! Strobel was the archduke's friend. Stroebel and this fellow between them"—

"Strobel is dead. The archduke is dead. There can be no matter of doubt of that," said Durand, but doubt was in his tone and in his eyes.

"Nothing is certain. It would be like Karl to turn up again with a son to back his claims. They may both be living. This Armitage is not the ordinary pig of a secret agent. We must find him."

"And quickly. There must be"—

"—another death added to our little list before we are quite masters of the situation in Vienna."

They gave Zmai orders to remain on guard at the house and went hurriedly out together.

Chapter VI

TOWARD THE WESTERN STARS.

GENEVA is a good point from which to plan flight to any part of the world, for there at the top of Europe the whole continental railway system is easily within your grasp, and you may make your choice of sailing ports. It is, to be sure, rather out of your way to seek a ship at Liverpool unless you expect to gain some particular advantage in doing so. Mr. John Armitage hurried thither in the most breathless haste to catch the King Edward, whereas he might have taken the Touraine at Cherbourg and saved himself a mad scamper, but his satisfaction in finding himself aboard the King Edward was supreme. He was and is, it may be said, a man who salutes the passing days right amiably, no matter how somber their colors.

Shirley Claiborne and Captain Richard Claiborne, her brother, were on deck watching the shipping in the Mersey as the big steamer swung into the channel.

"I hope," observed Dick, "that we have shaken off all your transatlantic suitors. That little Chauvenet died easier than I had expected. He never turned up after we left Florence, but I'm not wholly sure that we shan't find him at the dock in New York. And that mysterious Armitage, who spent so much railway fare following us about and who almost bought you a watch in Geneva, really disappoints me. His persistence had actually compelled my admiration. For a glass 'ower he was fairly decent, though. I better than a lot of these little toy men with imitation titles."

"Oh, my large brother, I have a confession to make," said Shirley. "Please don't indulge in great oaths or stamp a hole in this sturdy deck, but there are flowers in my stateroom"—

"Probably from the Liverpool consul. He's been pestering father to help him get a transfer to a less gloomy hole."

"Then I shall intercede myself with the president when I get home. They are orchids—from London—but—with Mr. Armitage's card. Wouldn't that excite you?"

"It makes me sick!" and Dick hung heavily on the rail and glared at a passing tug.

"They are beautiful orchids. I don't remember when orchids have happened to me before, Richard—in such quantities. Now, you really didn't disapprove of him so much, did you? This is probably goodby forever, but he wasn't so bad, and he may be an American, after all."

"A common adventurer! Such fellows are always turning up, like bad pennies or a one eyed dog. If I should see him again"—

"Yes, Richard, if you should meet again"—

"I'd ask him to be good enough to stop following us about, and if he persisted I should muss him up."

NA-DRU-CO

N D & C Co TRADE MARK

NA-DRU-CO

When you see this Trade Mark on any Medicinal or Toilet Preparation you purchase, it is an assurance to you that every ingredient entering into that preparation is of the highest quality that money can procure. What is even more important, it is an assurance that these ingredients have been compounded, according to the best formulæ known, by expert chemists of long experience, in the employ of one of the largest wholesale drug firms in the world, the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada.

As you have probably noticed, "NA-DRU-CO" is made up of the first parts of the words "National Drug Company". It is pronounced "NA-DROO-KO", with the accent on the second syllable.

Being aware of the extensive use in Canada of simple household remedies and toilet preparations, we felt certain that Canadians would welcome a line of these goods, sold under a distinctive trade mark, that they could be sure were not only of the highest standard and guaranteed purity, but were compounded by expert chemists, from formulæ that had been well tried out.

What The Laws Say

For the protection of the public the law of each Province in Canada states that only thoroughly qualified men are allowed to dispense prescriptions—these men being physicians or graduates of recognized Colleges of Pharmacy. Therefore if a doctor gives you a prescription the laws of Canada require that it be dispensed by a duly qualified druggist and not by a man ignorant of the action of drugs.

The logical conclusion is that as the laws are made by the representatives of the people, the people want protection, and should welcome the opportunity of being able to procure in any part of Canada medicinal and toilet preparations compounded by expert chemists and guaranteed by a firm of our standing.

When you see the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark you have this opportunity and the guarantee for which you are looking.

Source Of The NA-DRU-CO Formulae

The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, acquired the businesses and maintains the honorable traditions of 21 of the principal Wholesale Drug Houses in Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver.

All of these firms had long and successful careers, some of them for fifty to one hundred years, and during their existence they had accumulated a splendid lot of formulæ which all became the property of the "National". After giving these formulæ careful study and practical tests for several years we have now brought out, based on them, the NA-DRU-CO line of about 125 medicinal and toilet preparations. All the ingredients in these preparations are the best and purest that money can buy, and they are compounded by a staff of expert chemists, each of whom ranks high in his profession.

We have such implicit confidence in NA-DRU-CO Preparations that we offer them with

A Four-Fold Guarantee

is the firm behind the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, is one of the largest wholesale drug firms in the world, having a Paid-up Capital of over Five Million Dollars. We have wholesale branches in the principal distributing centres of Canada so that you can at all times satisfy yourself that there is such a firm. We are the largest buyers of drugs and do the greater part of the wholesale drug business in Canada. We employ a staff of about nine hundred people and distribute in salaries, dividends and other expenses over One Million Dollars annually. We carry a stock distributed among our Branches of about Two Million Dollars, and in addition we own real estate and buildings which are to-day worth about Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and other large assets. All this stands as a guarantee behind each package bearing the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

The Second Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is the NA-DRU-CO trademark itself.

If we put this Trade Mark on one article only and proceeded to advertise it, plain common sense would tell us that we must make that article good or we would lose out—for people will not keep on buying unreliable goods.

Multiply that necessity for quality by over one hundred and you have our position. On the quality of each NA-DRU-CO article is staked not only our investment in that article and our hope of trade in it, but our investment and our hope of trade in the whole NA-DRU-CO line.

We know that the quality of the first NA-DRU-CO preparation you buy will practically decide whether you become a regular user of NA-DRU-CO articles or not—and for that trial you may select any one of the 125 preparations. We welcome this because each article is fit to uphold the reputation of all.

The Third Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is the fact that NA-DRU-CO preparations are never, at any time or in any place, sold at cut prices.

NA-DRU-CO preparations are so much better than the preparations whose prices are cut that discerning people prefer to pay full prices for the NA-DRU-CO goods, because they have the guarantee that every NA-DRU-CO article is compounded by expert chemists from the very best ingredients.

The Fourth Guarantee

of NA-DRU-CO quality is short and very much to the point. If after trying any article bearing the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark you are not entirely satisfied, return it to the druggist from whom you bought it and he will hand back your money. He will do it willingly, too, because we guarantee to stand the loss and return to him every cent he gives back to you.

NA-DRU-CO Preparations Not "Cure-Alls"

There is no NA-DRU-CO preparation that will cure everything, and we don't ask you to believe that there is. But there is a separate NA-DRU-CO remedy for each common ailment—a remedy that will command the confidence of the public.

Consult Your Physician

NA-DRU-CO medicinal preparations are not intended to take the place of your physician's prescriptions—far from it. When you are ill you need the physician's skilful diagnosis and treatment, and it would be folly to depend on your own diagnosis and any household remedy.

But in emergencies when you cannot get the doctor quickly, and in many other cases, a reliable household remedy is a real blessing.

To put the absolute reliability of NA-DRU-CO preparations beyond doubt or question, we are prepared to furnish to your physician or your druggist, on request, a list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO preparation. Ask these men, who are men of standing in your community, and in whom you place implicit confidence, all about NA-DRU-CO remedies.

If your druggist has not the particular NA-DRU-CO preparation you ask for in stock, he can get it for you within two days from the nearest of our wholesale branches, listed below.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Sprinkle suet with flour before chopping it or running it through the food chopper. Then the task will be an easy one.

Some people put the meringue on a pie or pudding while it is still hot. This causes the eggs to liquify and quite spoils the dish.

Water that has stood for a little while in the sun is best for watering house plants; fresh cold water will retard their growth.

Never grate lemon rind, without first scrubbing well with a clean vegetable brush. The dirt that comes off will show the reason.

Fish cakes from the smoked Finnan haddie, slightly freshened, are delicious. They should be mixed with mashed potato, the same as codfish.

Peas and beans should never be swimming in water. They should be soaked with as little liquid as possible to retain the flavour of the vegetables.

Dont' leave a tin lid on the saucepan if you start the cereal in the evening for breakfast. It will rust and the moisture will drip into the food.

Turpentine will remove paint stains from all kinds of woollen cloths. If the stains are old it may be necessary to add a little ammonia to the turpentine.

A soft cloth wrung out in hot water and wrapped around a hot water bag will make the latter much more effective, as the steaming heat is better than the dry.

A pleasing dessert has canned peaches as a basis. Serve half a peach on a plate and top it generously with whipped cream, sprinkled with crumbled macaroons.

The careful cook always breaks each egg separately into a saucer or cup. Then, if perchance one is bad, it will not spoil the other ingredients in the dish she is making.

To remove grease from men's coat collars, rub with a cloth dampened in ammonia. This will sometimes remove the gloss from rubbed places, such as elbows and seams.

If cans of fruit are wrapped in old newspapers after they have cooled from the canning process, and placed in a cool, dry spot, the printers' ink and paper will prevent their moulding.

A stain remover that has proved successful with fruit and vegetable discolourations on the hands is made by adding four drops of carbolic acid to half a pint of glycerine and rosewater.

Flannel will not harden or shrink if when new it is put into clean, cold water frequently. Wash well in warm water, using a little soap to remove the oil. Flannel thus washed never hardens.

When baking a chicken pie, turn a teacup upside down right in the centre of it before putting on the top crust. This keeps it from getting dry and it is far more delicious baked in this way.

Old brass should be cleaned by pouring strong ammonia on it, and then scrubbing with a brush and rinsing in cold water. After it has been dried and polished, it will look quite beautiful.

HERE IS A NEW CURVE

Russell Ford of the New York Americans Discovers a "Slide" Ball.

Athens, Ga., March 14.—Russell Ford, with Jersey City last year, who will be a regular member of the Yankee pitching force next season, has a new kind of bender which he will introduce on the big league boys next season, and this is not one of those joke new curves you hear so much about in the spring, only to be put on the shelf when big league season rolls along. Ford worked it in the Eastern League last season, and Earl Gardner says it went along fine.

A group of Yankee players was watching Ford slamming this new one into the big mitt of Fred Mitchell, and were kicking each other in the legs to watch the way that ball broke in and out. Ford has a sore finger now and can't get it just right, but it's there just the same. The players have named it the "slide ball." Ford wets his third finger near the knuckle winds up, and lets the ball go. It floats up and breaks in and every time it did Mitchell would say: "Why that's a peach, Russell, let's have it again." Ford would then shift and wet the other way. He delivers this ball with the same motion as he does others he throws; and all of the Yankee players have brought in a verdict that this new one is a pretty fine thing for the big league.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS IN TURKEY ARE STRAINED

Young Turkish Party Seems to be Losing Its Grip on the Situation —Reactionaries are Busy.

REFORMS IN SIGHT

Constantinople, March 16. — Ominous indications are visible of probable trouble in Turkey, not only over internal reforms, but international relations. The Young Turkish party seems to be losing something of its grip on the situation, and the reactionaries are said to be preparing a movement for the spring which may involve the intervention of the powers.

I am told, meanwhile, by a prominent Turkish official, that the ministries of the interior and public works are to be reorganized and considerably enlarged. These measures are regarded as necessary because of the more careful supervision now being given provincial governments, both in Europe and Asia. It has been suggested that representatives of the two ministries concerned should visit London, Paris and Berlin—a suggestion likely to be acted upon.

Abdul Hamid's departure from Stamboul was greeted with a sense of relief, but the population of Constantinople now doubts the outcome of the secret miliary dictatorship exercised by the Young Turks. Many cautious Turks are moving their valuables and their families into Asia Minor, for the feeling is growing that March or April will bring fresh disorders in the capital.

These conditions are particularly favourable to the hotheads of Bulgaria and Greece to run their agitations. Intense irritation prevails in Sofia over the condemnation at Salonika of eight Bulgarians charged with murdering a school inspector, and no amount of clemency now will entirely obliterate it.

As to Greece, the only reason she does not become aggressive is that she has no surplus for war purposes, and, in spite of its bold front, the army is beneath contempt as a fighting force. There is every prospect of trouble enough for Greece at home in the near future, for, next to King Peter of Servia, King George of Greece has the shakiest throne in Europe.

With all these inflammable materials in the near east, it will be a miracle if the spring brings no bloodshed.

Sir William Willcocks, the British engineer, is about to begin the great engineering schemes for the restoration and improvement of the irrigation works in the Tigris-Euphrates delta. At present it is estimated that out of 12,000,000 acres, 9,000,000 are desert and 2,500,000 are fresh water swamps.

Surveys are being made for a great central canal, which will irrigate 3,000,000 acres of the best land in Mesopotamia. It is estimated this land will be capable of producing 1,000,000 tons of wheat and 100,000 tons of cotton a year, while it will also be possible to support enormous quantities of sheep and cattle.

This scheme is of especial interest in view of the success of a British and Turkish syndicate in securing the concession for the navigation of the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates.

Teachers For Canada.

London, March 15.—The secretary of the National Society has received an official letter from Canada, pointing out the advantages to teachers in Canada. The letter has been laid before the Association of Church School Magnates, who express approval of the object in view in sending it.

Pittsburg Car Men May Strike.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 15.—A vote on whether or not to strike in sympathy with the Philadelphia car men is being taken by Pittsburg's 2,100 street railway employes. The union is a member of the state federation. The local agreement expires April 1.

Is Your Flour Erratic, Madam?

Often a woman will talk like this:

"Pretty well all the flours I've tried are good once. But they're "not reliable. Every time I go to the grocer's I've got to change "my recipes. What's the matter? I don't want a better flour "under the same name; I don't want a worse flour. I want a "flour that's regular, so that I may know how to handle it all the "time".

Maybe, Madam, you think all milling is erratic, ununiform.

You have four kinds of irregularity to flirt with:

Strength, Color, Flavor, Yield.

It's conducive to sound sleep at night for a baker (of both sexes) to know in advance her times, temperatures and elbow drill.

Conducive to bad dreams on bakeday eve to find the morning batch galloping when you expect a trot, or walking when you expect a gallop.

Exasperating, you know, when you expect a Free Trade loaf to find a Tariff Reform one.

Positively insulting to expect 320 pounds of bread from your flour barrel and get 287.

* * * *

And so YOU say:

"If the miller can't maintain a regular "quality, then I'll select my own irregu- "larity by hopping from flour to flour".

But, Mistress Housewife, we who make FIVE ROSES have adopted the motto of the Derby family—"Sans Changer".

Meaning—"Absolute Uniformity".

So you can buy steady quality, if you really want to.

If you try FIVE ROSES, Madam, you'll keep to it.

* * * *

For there's nothing like system if you want regularity, and you'll find you can do your work much better and quicker when you know your flour and how it requires to be handled.

And you'll get identical results with every using.

Don't YOU want a dependable flour, a serviceable flour, true as steel?

Always the same, yesterday, to-day, next week?

Then get FIVE ROSES, Madam.

And get it NOW.

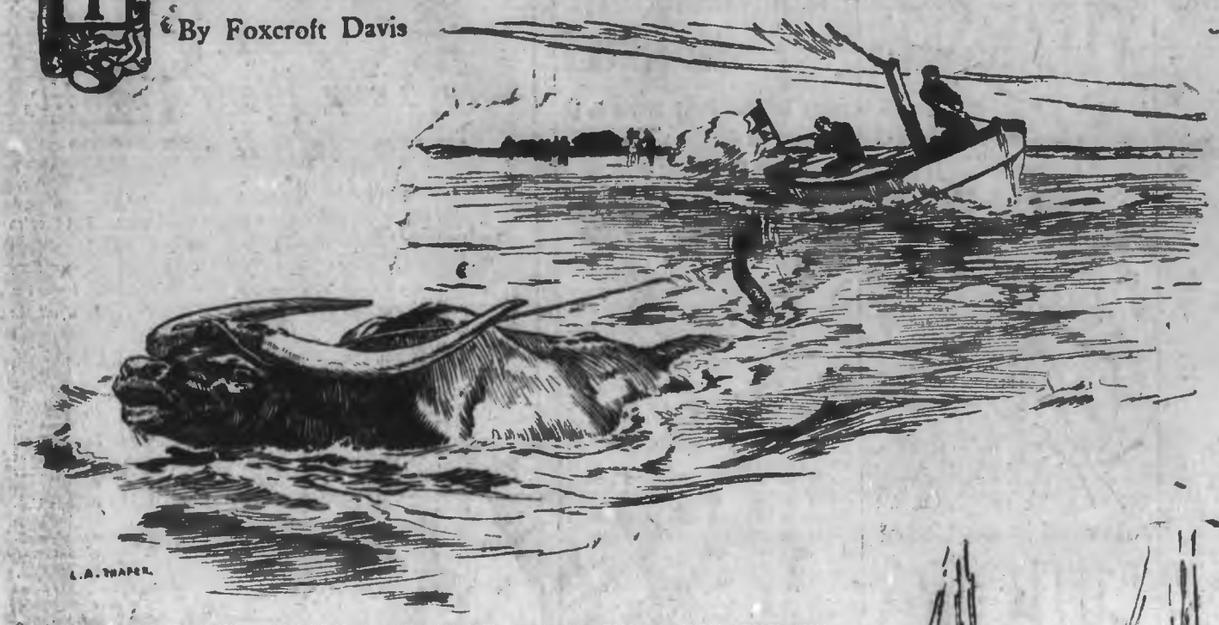
THE SON-OF-FURY-BORN-OF-A-TURTLE'S-EGG

By Foxcroft Davis



HE TURNED AND DASHED ACROSS THE WIDE WATER, TOWING THE LAUNCH AFTER HIM.

IN the treaty ports of China there is a song which is sung by certain fellows of the baser sort, and runs thus:—

"The English are at Wei-hai-wei,
The Germans are at Chao-Chau,
Now, will the Germans stay, stay?
And what will the English do, do?"

The raison d'être of the song is that some years ago a couple of German cruisers and a despatch boat or two were loafing in a casual sort of way about the Yellow Sea, in the neighborhood on Chao-Chau Bay.

Now, Chao-Chau is about a hundred miles from Wei-hai-wei, which is a British naval station, with all that that implies. The British, it may be said, are supposed in the East to represent the meek, as typified in the Fourth Beatitude, which says, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall possess the earth." These meek Britishers have made a point for many years of extending their possessions in the East at the rate of a thousand square miles of territory a week. They count that day lost when they don't advance the Union Jack at least a hundred square miles somewhere on this planet. Their methods are simple. There is a disturbance somewhere; the British land, claim ten square miles of territory as indemnity and security and ten square miles more as neutral territory, and there they stick like sticking plaster. The Germans, however, are finding out things all the time, so they have found out this little game of the British and are playing it themselves with great gusto.

One day, while the German cruisers were handy, there was a microscopic rumpus at Chao-Chau. The Germans landed a force, demanded several impossible things, and these not being forthcoming in a lightning flash the Teutons took possession of ten square miles, claimed ten square miles more as neutral territory, and a German naval base was established in about three shakes of a sheep's tail, and there they are to this day, in spite of the disgust of the British.

The monumental cheek of the Germans in doing this was under discussion one night on L'Hirondelle, that little French gunboat commanded by Tourneau, the young lieutenant who had aspirations to become the son-in-law of Vice Admiral Harbord, the British naval commander in those regions. Three young commanders sat around the table in the little cramped cabin of L'Hirondelle. One was Aylwin, the American lieutenant, who had a despatch boat, and the second guest was the Honorable Reginald Frederick Geoffery Hyde, R. N., who commanded H. M. S. torpedo boat Number Two. He was a little, pink-cheeked boy, and his vessel was not much bigger than himself. Hyde had everything against him in the eyes of the Vice Admiral—fortune, rank, and polo playing. He had, however, two transcendent merits. He thought all future wars would be decided by torpedoes, and he was the best rifle shot in the China Sea. Vice Admiral Harbord loved sport as only an Englishman can, and could easily hit a barn door at twenty paces.

Youngsters, like oldsters, when they sit around the cabin table and smoke after dinner, take their grievances to walk, and call attention to the defects of their commanding officers.

"The Germans caught us napping; there can be no doubt of that," said Hyde, disgustedly, knocking the ashes off his cigar. "The Admiralty was to blame in the first place, and everybody else in Wei-hai-wei in the second place. If we had old Harbord there at this time he would have got up a thundering big row two hours in advance of the Germans, and sent them all back, polite and dissatisfied, to their ships. It's the principle of the British navy never to let any row be settled by anybody except itself if it can help it, and it's worked beautifully in the East."

The View of Tourneau.

"And it's the policy of the French navy," said Tourneau, sipping his Château Yquem daintily, "to take care of the Catholic missionaries of all nations everywhere. You see, the Catholic missionaries are everywhere, and they do not run away; they 'stick' as you say, stick like the devil, and that gives us a chance to stick like the devil too. Whenever the natives get troublesome we send somebody to look after the dear missionaries, and so the natives are reminded that there is such a thing as a French navy."

"We Americans haven't any specific plan of butting in," said Aylwin, "but we manage one way or another to get in the game."

"It's a great game, this East," said Tourneau thoughtfully, "this awakening after two thousand years of slumber. It is no longer fashionable in China to bind the ladies' feet. It is no longer fashionable to kill foreigners. When it is done it is the act of the people not in the Chinese 'smart set,' as you say, and as for the Empress of China, not the most ardent suffragette, my dear Hyde, could ask for more than she has. When the mandarins enter her presence, they knock their heads nine times on the ground." At this Hyde hummed dolefully,

"The British are at Wei-hai-Wei,
The Germans are at Chao-Chau,
Now, will the Germans stay, stay?
And what will the English do, do?"

Then the talk turned upon a proposed expedition the next day and Tourneau was to be left out of it.

"You see," said Hyde, "Admiral Harbord hates me like the devil, but knows I can handle a rifle. As good luck would have it, a water buffalo has gone crazy about ten miles up the river, and is eating up Chinese like grains of rice. Now, the German officers have organized a hunt for that water buffalo, and they claim that it is the neutral zone which he is devastating. We claim it is our duty to kill that water buffalo, and the whole thing has resolved itself into a grave international question which has reached an acute stage. So, as it is well to do things modestly, I am to invite the Admiral to go on a shooting party up the river, after the water buffalo, and just to keep it from looking too British I am taking Aylwin along. He can shoot."

"I was born in the State of Kentucky," briefly responded Aylwin. This allusion was not in the least understood by either Hyde or Tourneau. But Aylwin often said strange things, like all Americans.

"I feel confoundedly sorry for you, old man," Hyde kept on, turning to Tourneau. Everybody knew all about that enterprising young officer and Clarice Harbord. "It seems as if I were playing a dirty game on you in asking Aylwin and leaving you out, but the launch won't hold another man besides the engineer, and Denson, the master at arms, two sailors, Aylwin, myself and Admiral Harbord, whom I count as two men—he is so big and makes such a noise."

"Do not distress yourself, my dear Hyde," replied Tourneau with a grin, and striking his short black beard, "I go down to Wei-hai-wei to-morrow at sunrise. There I shall find Miss Clarice Harbord visiting the family of an officer at Wei-hai-wei and I shall have three days' leave."

Then Tourneau begun an adaptation of his own,

"The Admiral is at Chao-Chau
His daughter is a Wei-hai-wei,
Now what will the Admiral do, do?
For Tourneau means to stay, stay."

Aylwin listened to these caitiff verses with disgust. "Well," he said presently, with grim philosophy, "something may be gained by being with the Admiral. He can get used to seeing me. That's a great deal."

Hyde smiled indulgently upon Aylwin and Tourneau.

"You fellows are in a tight box. I'll say, however, that the betting in the fleet is about two to one on your getting those charming young ladies, Admiral Harbord hasn't given his consent yet, I believe?"

Aylwin and Tourneau wagged their heads dolefully, like two dissenting mandarins.

"But he has not withheld it," said Tourneau.

The Water Buffalo.

"We are simply waiting for him to come off the perch," added Aylwin. "Miss Harbord means to stand by me. I don't know whether Miss Clarice means to desert Tourneau or not."

For answer Tourneau leaned back in his chair, smiled and sang softly,

"The Admiral is at Chao-Chau
His daughter is at Wei-hai-wei,
Now what will the Admiral do, do?
For Tourneau means to stay, stay."

Then the talk fell upon water buffalos in general—those patient beasts with great branching horns plodding through the overflowed paddy fields, with a Chinaman wading through the water after him. The water buffalo is a remarkably patient beast, but like all other patient creatures when he gets mad he is mad all through.

The one up the river, which had become a burning international issue, had not only got mad but had gone mad. The Chinese are very superstitious about animals that go mad, as Hyde explained.

"The Chinese have been beating tomtoms all over the place and burning paper prayers and letting off firecrackers with a view of soothing the buffalo, but, as you may imagine, it hasn't worked. The buffalo is not soothed."

"But he will be to-morrow," replied Aylwin rising, as a boy appeared at the cabin door and announced that a boat had come from the torpedo boat for her commander.

Tourneau bade his friends a cheerful goodby.

"Every one to his taste," he said, "you and Hyde like chasing wild buffaloes through the paddy fields, I prefer the society of my adored one at five o'clock in the afternoon in a drawing room at Wei-hai-Wei. Good luck to you, poor unfortunates that you are."

The next morning dawned fair and bright as if the British were not at Wei-hai-Wei and the Germans were not at Chao-Chau. Out beyond the mouth of the bay lay the Melampus, a light cruiser flying the broad pennant of an Admiral, and toward her steamed the torpedo boat Number Two cutting the blue water sharply and passing the French gunboat, with Tourneau on the bridge. He waved his cap at Number Two and Hyde and Aylwin waved theirs back at him.

As the torpedo boat came handily alongside the Melampus, Admiral Harbord put off in the cruiser's launch and boarded Number Two. With him was, as Hyde had said, Denson, the master at arms, a crack shot; two sailors and the engineer of the launch, which was towed behind the torpedo boat.

The Admiral greeted Aylwin coldly, but knowing his prowess with the rifle and also that the Germans were after the wild buffalo, was glad to have him along. Aylwin, like the Admiral, was in a seedy undress uniform and Hyde was arrayed likewise. Denson had charge of the gun cases. Conversation was slightly awkward on the part of the two young officers with the Admiral and referred solely to the wild buffalo. The natives had named him Wang-pa-tan, the Son of Fury, born of a turtle's egg and devoid of the eight virtues. Aylwin, who had some rudimentary knowledge of Chinese, laboriously explained to the Admiral that to call any creature the son of a turtle's egg was to say he had no ancestors and was without virtues. To this the Admiral responded that he thought the weather would change within twenty-four hours. Aylwin undaunted, continued, that a Chinaman wishing to offer the last insult to an enemy would draw a turtle on the enemy's back gate—which was not only to insult him, but the whole street. The Admiral replied that he once knew a great many of those silly things himself, but had found it useful to forget them. Aylwin subsided and Benson and the two sailors and the engineer, who had heard all about Aylwin's designs on the Admiral's daughter, grinned slyly behind the backs of their betters.

Just outside the alleged neutral zone of Chao-Chau Bay a little river runs up into the back country. Now it seemed from the spring overflow a great inland lake. Everywhere were human beings toiling, for nowhere in China can one escape the sight of men toiling for a pitiful wage. But great overflows make rich paddyfields and cheap rice, so that the gaunt bodies and thin legs of the yellow men and women will not be more gaunt and thin. This gave the toilers the heart to sing at their work and to encourage the water buffaloes with splendid promises of hay and fodder.

The party from Number Two were here transferred to the launch. The natives scarcely noticed the puffing launch more than did the water buffaloes. Nor did they stop one moment when they saw two beautiful white launches flying the German colors and full of nattily dressed German officers followed the British launch.

The rig of the German officers was a source of grim amusement to Admiral Harbord and even made Benson smile faintly, and a master at arms, vulgarly called "Jimmy Legs," is never supposed to smile at anything.

In Number Two's Boat.

Number Two's boat went dashing up the river, but soon had to slacken its pace. The stream grew so torturous that it became difficult to dodge the native craft coming down. Afar off could be heard across the overflowed fields the song of Chinese sailors towing from the shore their long junks, with the Chinese captain enthroned upon the poop and the Chinese pilot at the stern. They alone never leave the junk.

Hyde's engineer—a Scotchman, of course—had managed to avoid half a dozen of smaller junks crawling patiently seaward. But this was a huge junk, wider than usual, and just when it would meet the launch the river suddenly narrowed and turned. From her port side was the great tow rope, to which was harnessed, by Indian file on the shore, forty Chinese coolies. Barefooted and bare legged, they trudged along in the mud, their heads down and a big "chanty man" leading them and singing a cheerful song, which consisted of a recitative and the responses from the men. In the clear, bright June morning the loud, hoarse voices of the coolies, veiled by the distance, sounded sweet. And this was the song they sang.

The chanty man bawled out, "What will you do when you get to Tien-Tsin?" to which the coolies sang out in chorus as they trotted along, grinning, their shoulders humped up as they tugged at the rope:—

"When we get to Tien-Tsin we shall be happy;
We shall see our wives and our children
And the beautiful girls with little feet;
We shall beat the foreign devils and drink their rum;
We shall sit upon the graves of our ancestors."

Then the chanty man would ask melodiously:—

"What will you take to Tien-Tsin?"

Then the refrain echoed back from the shore:—

"We will take rice from the rich rice fields;
We will take seaweed and yet more seaweed;
We will take bricks to build palaces for the mandarins;
We will take ducks to be given as marriage portions for our daughters;
We will take the little lambs that bleat and are to be served up at the tables of the mandarins."

The chanty man had just inquired what they meant to bring back from Tien-Tsin when the junk came abreast of the launch. The big Chinese captain, with fangs for teeth, was standing on the poop, bellowing and gesticulating, and it looked as if what Stubbs called a collision was inevitable. Aylwin stood up in the launch in full view of the big Chinaman and rashly shouted:—

"Hello! Ah Fong! Lost your job as taipo?"

Ah Fong grinned and shook his head. None of the foreign devils would ever get a word of English out of Ah Fong.

As the launch scraped past the junk Aylwin told the Admiral that Captain Ah Fong was the gentleman who had got possession of the Admiral's uniform and had also been promised destruction by Tourneau if he did not give up the Christians in his town, and among those Christians was the Admiral's daughter and the French Lieutenant's sister.

"He ought to have been hanged," was the Admiral's response, in a loud voice, quite audible to Ah Fong. "No doubt he has gone back to pirating."

The German launches now had time to catch up and were so close behind that a general mixup came to pass in the narrow bend of the river. The engineer, who was also acting as pilot, managed to keep clear of both the Chinese and German craft, and those sitting behind him saw with unholy joy one of the German boats deliberately stick her nose in the mud, while the other scraped most of the paint off her sides against the junk. The Chinese coolies swarmed around screaming and chattering, the Germans swore and only the people in Number Two's launch remained cool and unembarrassed. Ah Fong jumped down from the poop and waded in and out, giving orders, while the Chinese pilot was heard to swear in English.

An inspiration came to Aylwin. He called to the pilot, holding up a silver piece:—

"Have you seen up the river the mad water buffalo that is driving away the laborers and frightening the women and children?"

The pilot turned to Ah Fong, who was stooping down in the water close to the stern of Number Two's launch, apparently measuring the depth of water with a stick. Some whispered words were exchanged, and then the pilot said:—

"The honorable gentlemen who seek the wild buffalo that frightens the miserable laborers and their worthless families can find him up the river where it divides into two legs like a man's legs. There we have just seen the beast, Wang-pa-tan, standing quietly in the mud. But he is possessed of eight devils, and the worthless people will be glad when he is sent to rejoin his ancestors, of which he has none. He stands in the left fork of the river," continued the pilot, catching the silver piece which Aylwin threw him.

"Whack her up!" cried Hyde to the engineer as the little engine began once more to snort. Then he added to the Admiral:—"We ought to do for the brute before the Germans arrive."

"Yes," said Aylwin, "provided that Chinese scoundrel was telling the truth."

The Sixth Shot.

Ah Fong's pilot, however, appeared to be telling the truth, for when the launch shot up the river and reached the place where it forked, there, in the left fork of the stream, stood knee deep in the water a huge buffalo. The paddyfields about seemed deserted, although there were many houses on the shore. Number Two's people did not know that the feast of lanterns was preparing.

The buffalo took no heed of the launch as it drew near. The Admiral, kneeling down with his rifle resting on the gunwale, fired the first shot. It was a long shot, but a good one, and struck the buffalo squarely on the side. He bellowed and dived under water, and it took several more to finish him up. Benson's fingers itched as he fingered his rifle and so did those of junior officers and an admiral are not arranged on democratic principles.

The sixth shot was enough for the buffalo. He staggered to the shore and fell to rise no more. The shots had brought out all the people from the neighboring houses, who swarmed around the dead buffalo. Shrieks and cries resounded and women and children threw themselves weeping on the great carcass. Then the people in the boat knew that they had killed, not the Son-of-Fury-Without-the-Eight-Virtues, but the sole fortune of a large family.

The launch was run ashore, and Aylwin and Hyde, jumping out, emptied their pockets on the ground. The result was money enough to buy two water buffaloes and the weeping and the wailing ceased. Behind them, though, they saw the two German launches going rapidly up the other fork of the river. A light dawned upon Aylwin.

"That scoundrel Ah Fong gave us false information," he cried. "The mad buffalo is on the other fork of the river."

As they tumbled into the launch Benson leaned over and pointed to the stern. There, rudely scrawled in charcoal, was the picture of a turtle.

"That story will be told all over Tien-tsin that a Chinaman drew a turtle on the stern of a British launch," said Benson, who knew something of most things, including Chinamen. "It will go down in Ah Fong's family as an honor, and may make him a pirate admiral."

The two sailors were already scouring the turtle's portrait off the boat's stern, but there was no scouring off the fact that the British launch, in the sight of the Germans from Chao-Chau, had made a blunder of gigantic proportions. Admiral Harbord's red face grew redder, and a sulphurous silence prevailed in the launch as she ran across the open water and took her way up the right fork of the river.

The launch was gaining on the Germans every minute, and afar off, above the churning of the engine in the water, could be heard a strange sound of roaring and bellowing. Then the narrow river suddenly widened into another great temporary lake made by the overflow and they saw unmistakably the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg and Devoid-of-the-Eight-Virtues. There was no doubt as to the wickedness and fury of the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg.

He was a huge beast with enormous branching horns, and plunged about the lake, keeping up a frenzied bellowing. So far from avoiding the launches, he came plunging toward them. The two German launches had the first volley at him, but the result seemed not to incommode the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg in the least. He suddenly dived just as the rifles of the British launch cracked out, and the next minute rose directly under them. The launch tipped over, throwing every man into the water except Benson and Admiral Harbord, and incidentally the box containing all the rifle cartridges. The beast's great horns locked somewhere with the machinery, and the engine suddenly stopped pulsating.

As the launch righted itself Benson seized a coil of rope and, making a lasso of it, threw it cleverly over the buffalo's horns and the noose knotted. That seemed to be just what the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg wanted. He turned and dashed across the wide water, towing the launch after him, with Benson vainly tugging at the rope. There were no more rifle cartridges, but the Admiral laid his hand promptly on some shot cartridges and in his Berserker madness began to blaze away with bird shot at the water buffalo.

Aylwin and Hyde, the engineer and the two sailors burst into a roar of laughter, which was likely to cost them dearly. But having laughed once they concluded they might as well do it again as the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg towed the launch straight toward the German launches. From them came the hoarse guffaws of the Teutons. Not for one moment did Benson cease his desperate tugging at the rope or the Admiral his volleys of bird shot. As they neared the German launches the Admiral, as wild as the buffalo, bawled to Benson:—"Look out for those damned Germans. They will fire at the buffalo and very likely pot us both."

His Bitterest Moment.

This speech, which was distinctly audible to the Germans, caused them to lower their rifles, and as the buffalo, snorting and bellowing, came within twenty yards of them a German sailor jumped overboard with a revolver in his hand. He dashed through the water, skillfully avoided the buffalo's horns and sent three bullets into the buffalo's head at point blank range. Half a dozen sailors drew the launch, not ashore, which they might have done, but alongside the German launches. The British boat was filling with water, and Admiral Harbord had to step aboard the German launch to keep from going down with his ship.

The buffalo had towed Number Two's boat across the wide water and a German launch had to tow it back to Chao-Chau. On the other German craft lay the great carcass of the Son-of-a-Turtle's-Egg and Devoid-of-the-Eight-Virtues.

The sun shone brightly still, but the fair day was dark to the Admiral and Benson. Nor was it altogether a halcyon time to Hyde. Aylwin, however, sat and chuckled inwardly. A scheme to profit himself was germinating in his mind.

The bitterest moment to the Admiral was when they reached Chao-Chau Bay, and all the ships in the harbor saw the melancholy plight of the British boat and her company. The Germans made straight for the Melampus and transferred the Admiral and his compatriots. Aylwin was taken to his own ship.

That evening Aylwin happened to have an engagement to dine on the Melampus. As he came over the side, Admiral Harbord was standing talking with the officer of the deck. Aylwin went up boldly and greeted him. There was no ignoring the events of the morning.

"Most embarrassing accident we had," said the Admiral, clearing his throat.

"What accident, may I ask?" replied Aylwin.

"The—the—accident, the most unfortunate accident, I should call it, with regard to the wild buffalo this morning."

"I think," responded Aylwin gently, "we had a most successful expedition. We went up the river, succeeded in killing the wild buffalo, while the Germans unfortunately killed one which was the support of a family of twenty-five persons."

Admiral Harbord, with a rudimentary grin upon his countenance, looked steadfastly at Aylwin.

"Of course, Admiral," continued Aylwin consequiously, "we did not wish to kill the buffalo which was brought down, and you merely peppered him with bird shot, knowing him to be a harmless creature; but in spite of our efforts to save his life, which is worth a fortune to his owners, the Germans slaughtered him in a most ruthless manner. But we paid for him, you will recall."

Admiral Harbord's rudimentary grin expanded into a large, substantial smile that went half around his head.

"Such is the account which I have given to several officers and it is generally believed among the ships here," continued Aylwin. "As for the accident to the launch, I have reported that it was very trifling and was incurred in our efforts to avoid killing the harmless domestic animal which the Germans shot and we paid for."

This caused the Admiral to clasp Aylwin by the hand in full view of everybody on the deck of the Melampus. Several officers had overheard what Aylwin was saying and a thrill of admiration went around for his able and intrepid lying.

"We go to Tien-Tsin next week," said Admiral Harbord. "My daughters will be there and will visit me on the ship. Shall be glad to have you dine with me."

The Admiral turned and went below and all the able and intrepid liars on the ship crowded around Aylwin and proclaimed him their king.

TWO BODIES NEEDED

Rosebery Scouts Idea of Abolishing Upper Chamber.

BUDGET TO COME FIRST

Premier Asquith Makes Important Announcement In the Commons—Lords Discuss Method of Reforming Themselves—Resolutions Declare That Time Has Come to Abolish Hereditary Rights.

London, Eng., March 15—The House of Lords entered upon a discussion yesterday of the ordinance proposed by Lord Rosebery preparatory to the radical reform of the Upper Chamber.

The great crowd present indicated the general interest in the subject. Not a seat in the Chamber was vacant when Lord Rosebery rose to move that the House resolve itself into a committee of the whole to consider the best means of reforming the existing organization so as to constitute itself a strong and efficient second chamber.

At the same time, he presented a set of resolutions to the effect that there was a necessity of a strong and efficient second chamber for the well being of the state; that such a chamber would be best obtainable by the reform and reconstitution of the House of Lords; and that a necessary preliminary to such reform and reconstitution was the acceptance of the principle that the possession of a peerage in itself should no longer afford the right to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

Lord Rosebery declared that the time had come for a reform from within without waiting for the Government to carry out its proposals to hamstring the peers and so emasculate the House of Lords that it would become no better than a painted chamber in which no self-respecting peer would care to sit.

He said that it was wished to establish the elective principle, but it must not be through popular elections, but by elections by associations, corporations and county councils.

Lord Rosebery poured scorn upon the suggestion of a single chamber, which he declared was a proposal to dig the grave of the Empire. In America, he said, the veto of the Senate was stronger than was ever the veto of a sovereign. He trembled at the scorn of the United States when contemplating Great Britain's one-eyed, one-legged search for a constitution.

The House of Lords adjourned the debate after a discussion which revealed marked difference of opinion as to the value of Lord Rosebery's proposal.

Viscount Morley expressed surprise that Lord Rosebery had not waited for the Government's proposals and pointed out that the Rosebery plan of reform would entirely fail to remove the possibility of future deadlocks arising between the two Houses, which was the real difficulty to be solved.

An interesting phase of the political situation yesterday was Premier Asquith's announcement in the House of Commons that the budget would be re-introduced and disposed of before the House rises for the spring recess.

This announcement revived political speculation in the lobbies. It is generally believed that the Nationalists will abstain from voting, in which case the budget will be passed. If the budget is defeated there is no doubt the Government will resign and go to the country again on the question of the budget and the reform of the House of Lords.

More Adventures With Dogs.

Woodstock, March 15.—A dog belonging to James Miners, concession 3, Dereham Township, suddenly turned savage, bit its owner, then escaped and ran to a neighboring farm, Austin Miller's, where it got among the cattle, chasing and biting at them. Leaving there the animal went to R. J. Mitchell's place, to whom Miller telephoned, and the hired man loaded a gun and went after the canine. On trying to shoot the gun hung fire, and the dog chased the man into a barn. He escaped, reloaded the gun and shot the dog. It had been frothing heavily at the mouth.

Japanese Navy Loan.

New York, March 15.—According to advices received here yesterday from Yokohama, the Japanese Government has announced the redemption of the entire outstanding balance of the navy loan; amounting to approximately $4,000,000, and a portion of the consolidated loan bonds to the amount of $21,500,000. The drawing of these, it was stated, will take place April 11, and redemptions will be made on and after April 30. Both were internal issues.

$10,000 Subsidy For Liners

Ottawa, March 15.—The contract with the New Zealand Shipping Co. of New Zealand for the steamship service between Canadian Atlantic ports and the Antipodes contains some unusual provisions.

The service, which will start this spring, provides for a monthly sailing from Montreal in summer and from St. John, N.B., in winter, with a call at Halifax in the latter case.

The subsidy is to be $10,000 a month. The freight rates from the Canadian Atlantic ports are not to exceed similar rates from Atlantic ports in the United States, and through rates from any interior point in Canada are not to be greater than from a corresponding point in the States. The company contracts, after the first sailing from St. John, N.B., next autumn, to carry at least 5,000 tons of cargo on each outward trip.

More Slides In Rockies.

Vancouver, B.C., March 15.—From early Sunday evening till noon yesterday, the main line of the C.P.R. was again blocked by snow slides at some half a dozen points, the principal avalanches having occurred at Rogers' Pass, Bear Creek, Cambie, Illecillewaet and Albert Canyon.

The largest slide was at Albert Canyon, where the tracks for some 200 feet were buried under 30 feet of snow and rock.

The train from Montreal, due in Vancouver at noon yesterday, was caught on the eastern side of the slide at Albert Canyon, and will not reach this city till 4 o'clock to-day.

Want to Be Incorporated.

Montreal, March 15.—The Christian Scientists are making a big fight to be incorporated in this province. Last session of the Legislature the Assembly passed the bill unanimously. But the council rejected it.

Adelard Turgeon was the champion of the bill, saying that the Catholics of the majority should not reject the bill. They must stand for religious liberty. They had received religious liberty at the hands of a Protestant majority. This year there is to be a bigger attempt and the fight is likely to be bitter.

A BOY'S STRUGGLE FOR LIFE

HAROLD NEW, Toronto

Mr. S. J. New, of 154 Baldwin St., Toronto, says: I can trace my son Harold's trouble to when he had the measles five years ago, from which he never really recovered. Some of the best physicians attended him, but with months of suffering he in turn contracted whooping cough, bronchitis, and then pneumonia. Month after month went by that we shall not soon forget; months of sleepless nights, fearful coughs, weakening night sweats, left my boy a mere shadow. He had no appetite, and my heart ached to see how he was wasting away. He spent one whole summer at the Lakeside Home for Sick Children, and came home greatly improved, but the cold winds of October took him off his feet again. The doctor advised me to send him to Muskoka, but heavy doctor's bills had depleted my financial resources, and such a step seemed out of the question.

"At this point we tried PSYCHINE, and human lips cannot describe the change that took place. No words can express the thankfulness of his mother and myself when we saw the crisis was over, and realized that our boy was fighting his way back to life and health. PSYCHINE had mastered that which all the doctor's prescriptions had failed to check. Day by day Harold grew stronger, and all through the winter, although continually out of doors, he failed to take cold, and he put on flesh very quickly. By the spring my son was completely cured, and developed into a strong, sturdy lad."

PSYCHINE is the Greatest Strength Restorer and System Builder known to medical science, and should be used for COUGHS, COLDS, WEAK LUNGS, LOSS OF APPETITE, WEARINESS.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

THE CLAUSE IS DEFENDED

Ontario Government Ordains That December 25th Will Henceforth Be a Closed One For the Hotel Bars —Premier Whitney and Mr. Hanna Declare That Three-Fifths Clause Is a Necessity.

Toronto, March 16.—Amendments to the license act formed the chief dict of the people's representatives elected to serve in the Legislative Assembly during yesterday's session.

The principle changes in the law are that Christmas becomes a "dry day," and raising the wholesale license fee from $350 to $500 all over the province. The three-fifths clause stands.

Mr. Hanna pointed out that it might be urged against his bill that it made no provision for the application of penalties for corrupt practices to local option contests, but this would be done in an amendment to the municipal amendments act.

The City of Toronto bill passed its second reading, and will furnish the opportunity for lively discussion in committee of the whole to-day.

Before adjourning the Premier stated that they had hoped to sit till they got through all the contentious measures, and finish up slowly to-day. This, however, had had to be abandoned, and he moved that the House meet at 2 p.m. to-day, as there were no committees in the morning. Formal prorogation, he said, would take place on Saturday morning.

The second annual appearance of the bill of W. Proudfoot (C. Huron), to amend the liquor license act by returning to a straight majority instead of three-fifths vote in local option contests, was given the six months' hoist on motion of Hon. W. J. Hanna.

"I think it is sufficient," declared Mr. Hanna, "to say that three years' experience of the three-fifths clause is that it has proved fully up to all that was expected of it.

"I think it sufficient, in view of the progress in local option in Ontario under the three-fifths clause, compared with the progress made prior to the passage of that clause. I say that apart from those who in conventions have passed resolutions against it, I think we might safely leave it to the temperance people themselves, how greatly that clause has contributed to the cause of temperance and certainly to its permanence."

"Some reference has been made," the Minister continued, "to a deputation which waited on the Government, and to what I said then in regard to the Town of Barrie. I wish to repeat here what I said on that occasion, that the mere passing of local option is a very small part in the work of enforcing it.

"I said that local option in Owen Sound was difficult to enforce, not because it was carried by a 50 per cent. vote, but because it was liable to be repealed by a 50 per cent. vote. That was the argument. In 1910 the Government spent $9,000 in enforcing local option in Owen Sound, while only $25 was spent by the province in another town similarly situated in every other respect to Owen Sound, but which carried local option by a three-fifths vote."

"Members of the Government," declared Sir James Whitney, "are in a position to know—not to guess, to know—that the atmosphere which surrounds the discussion of this three-fifths clause to-day is quite different from that which surrounded it on previous occasions.

"The three-fifths clause has become an integral part of the scheme and principle of local option."

GAS, INDIGESTION AND HEARTBURN GO

Makes Your Out-of-Order Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn. Sour risings, Gas on Stomach, or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent, case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

INVESTORS!!!

MONEY-MAKING OPPORTUNITIES

In our advertisement of last week we informed you that we were opening a department for the handling of syndicate accounts. By the word "syndicate" we mean the joining together of a number of small cash accounts and the utilization of the total sum for the investment of money in New York stocks. By this method the small investor obtains a footing equivalent to the man with a large bank account. For instance, if a man has $100 to invest, the least he could get would be ten shares of stock, and his $100 would protect him ten points. A market such as we have at present, is capable of moving as much as twenty-five points, although this seldom occurs. Therefore the small investor would be wiped out of his money and have nothing to show for it. By putting his $100 into a pool and operating the pool along conservative lines, large percentage profits can be made. This is what we are doing.

Send us what money you can spare, and we will look after it for you. We will do the buying and selling, notifying clients at the end of each week what has been done. Sometimes the markets are not active enough or are in an unsafe condition, in which case we may use our judgment and not operate. In this case we allow our clients 6 per cent. interest on the amount of money to their credit. This is better than you can do in any other line of business, and have your money available. Credit balances can always be withdrawn by making draft on us, by telephoning us or calling in and getting a cheque.

The following are a few instances of what money will do, operating in stocks, taking the range of prices of yesterday, the 11th inst., as an example, the amount of money in use being $500 in each case, the profits being for the day alone:—

By selling 20 Union Pacific.....$60 could have been made
By selling 20 Reading ..... 40 could have been made
By selling 20 United States Steel. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Southern Pacific .. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Smelters .... 40 could have been made

It will be seen that $40 is the lowest profit on any one of the above six mentioned stocks, and $40 in a day on a $500 investment means enormous profit. Figure it out for yourself. While this percentage cannot be made daily, yet an average of over 50 per cent. is assured on absolutely safe grounds.

Send us a deposit and let us show you how it will grow.

By having a large number of accounts, we will make a great deal of money for our clients, and by so doing will make a fair return on the work involved, out of our commissions. We charge the regular brokerage commission of one-eighth each way for buying and selling, that is for every 100 shares, $12.50 for buying and $12.50 for selling.

Put some of your money with us, and do it now. The market is in a splendid trading condition, and small amounts will grow very rapidly. You can, as we have pointed out before, always withdraw if you do not care to leave your balance open. All we ask you to do is to let us demonstrate to you what can be done in the money making line by conservative investment in New York stocks.

Write us and open an account to-day. You cannot make money faster in any other line of business. You cannot put your money out and have it placed at anything like the earning power that you will have here.

COBALT STOCKS

Cobalt stocks show signs of greater activity. There is an extraordinary demand for good Cobalt properties, and the control of Cobalt mining properties by American capitalists.

Temiskaming recently struck very rich ore at the 425-foot level, demonstrating the fact that the Cobalt camp is not a shallow one, and that this mining region is proving itself to be one of the mining wonders of the world. The gold discoveries in the Porcupine district are also turning out wonderfully well. We strongly recommend the purchase of Temiskaming, Cobalt Lake, Gifford and Beaver. We carry these on margin.

Write, telephone or wire us your orders. Let us make you money. We have done it for others.

Hon. Robert Rogers In Trouble.

Winnipeg, March 16.—Something of a sensation was caused in the Legislature by T. H. Johnson tabling the receipt of the Northern Pacific Express Co. for bonds to the value of $50,000 from New York, signed by Robt. Rogers. The receipt was dated Nov. 21, 1908.

In connection Mr. Rogers stated he had no recollection of the incident, but said he would give the opportunity for an investigation of either his private or official life.

Armstrong Gets One Year.

Buffalo, N.Y., March 16.—The fact that Edward Armstrong, charged with William Wilson with importing two Toronto girls for immoral purposes, made a pathetic appeal yesterday to Judge Hazel for leniency, promising to marry one of the young women if sentence was suspended, did not prevent the court from imposing a penalty. Armstrong was given one year in the Elmira Reformatory and fined $1. He wept when sentence was imposed.

Firemen Are Out.

Chicago, March 16.—At midnight W. S. Carter, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, announced that a strike of 25,000 firemen on practically all the western railroads had been called.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRADE MR. W. H. MOORE DISCUSSES PUBLIC UTILITIES

An Interesting Address Given on Municipal Ownership—Discussion Was Followed With Close Attention by Members Present.

OLD OFFICERS IN AGAIN

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade, held last evening in the City Council chamber, was featured by a good attendance, a display of enthusiastic interest on the part of the members, and by very able addresses by Messrs. W. H. Moore and T. F. Matthews, on Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities.

Encouraging reports were presented by the officers, indicating that the Board has been energetic and progressive during the year. The election of officers resulted in the unanimous re-election of last year's officers, a tribute to the effectiveness of the work done by them in the interests of the Board.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the Secretary and were adopted on motion of Messrs. Moore and Austin.

A communication was read from the Guelph Board of Trade, enclosing a resolution in regard to precaution to prevent accidents at level crossings, and asking the local Board to pass a similar resolution.

No action was taken in the matter, the communication being laid on the table for future reference.

On motion of Messrs. W. H. Moore and R. Fair, a vote of thanks was passed to the Mayor and Council for the use of the Council Chamber for meeting purposes during the year.

Messrs. Larmonth and McWilliams moved that Messrs. Crane and Wainwright be appointed auditors for the year.—Carried.

President Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie presented the following report:

Gentlemen,—In presenting to you my annual report for the season of 1909, I wish to thank most sincerely the officers and members for their hearty co-operation during the time I have had the honour of being your president and I heartily congratulate the Board on their good work in propagating the commercial and general welfare of Peterborough.

I note with pleasure the growing interest taken in the meetings, which were well attended, and the subjects, every one of which were on large questions, relating to the welfare of our city, well discussed.

As the Secretary has reported, the Board held eight meetings and the questions discussed were:

Water Works Dam; Purity Ware By-Law; Smith Street Bridge; Conserving the Waters in Trent Canal; Our Vanishing Forests; Power Question; Reduction in Freight Rates on Coal; Better Advertising the City.

With the results that by-laws have been enacted in accordance with the Board of Trade resolutions on the Water Works Dam, Purity Ware, and Smith Street bridge, and that in reference to the better advertising of the city, the City Council has voted $2,000, on condition that the Board of Trade raise a like amount. This question comes before you to-night.

In trade and commerce Peterborough has passed through a very successful year, despite the fact that in the early part of the season, business was, in other communities, at a standstill. The winter passed over was one of the best in the history of Peterborough, work being plentiful, there was practically no poverty in the city.

One of the drawbacks in this city in times passed, has been the lack of cheaper houses for the working class, and though building operations increased 44 per cent. over that of 1908, this fault is not yet remedied, and I trust the landowners in the City of Peterborough will, this coming season, see their way clear to build houses at such rental that will make it possible to reduce the price of living to the mechanic and the labourer.

As evidence of the extension of the city during the year 1909, I may state that the Board of Works have built 6,365 feet of sewers and six miles of cement walks. The City has now in use twenty-five miles of sewers, and forty-six and three-quarter miles of cement walks. The Water Commissioners have laid over three miles of water mains and placed 333 services to houses. They have now 33¾ miles of mains in use. The new water works dam is almost finished and we hope to have power developed before the year is out.

In bringing my presidential year to a close I would urge every member to do his best to keep up the traditions and standard of usefulness set us by our predecessors, by inducing every one who believes in Peterborough to become members, by threshing out questions and by working up reforms that affect the city. In this way the Board of Trade will be a force to conjure with, and be really effective. In this way our suggestions will have the greatest weight with the City Council in their making [illegible] touching the commercial [illegible] of the city.

[illegible] is now coming over Canada a [illegible] of prosperity, new capital is [illegible] in and new industries are [illegible] up every where, and surely [illegible] splendid water powers and [illegible] Peterborough should

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

(By Amadeus, O.S.F.)

We greet thee, St. Patrick, our glorious Apostle,
Our hearts filled with pride at the sound of thy name;
Though far from old Ireland, her vales and her mountains,
Our love and devotion are ever the same.
'Tis true, from the land of our birth we are exiles;
By Fate's stern decree we are destined to roam,
But though we may wander, our hearts but grow fonder,
When think we of Ireland, our love and our home!

We greet thee St. Patrick; to thee we are loyal,—
To thee and the Faith thou didst leave on our shore,—
Though poor we may be in the things that are passing,
Our wealth is the Faith that is ours evermore!
St. Patrick, watch over thy children, who love thee;
Protect them from dangers that round them may be,
And grant that their hearts, ever nobler and stronger,
May beat for their God, for their land, and for thee.

WANTS ALL THE DOGS EITHER TIED UP OR MUZZLED

John W. Hales Says it is up to the City Fathers to Take Action at Once in the Matter.

A SERIOUS CONDITION

Peterborough, March 15.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noticed an article in your paper to-night enquiring as to what steps should be taken to prevent dogs from running at large in our city, signed by an enquirer. Now, sir, the same problem has been before my mind ever since the mad dogs have been so frequent in other towns close to ours. Now, sir, it seems to me that the officers which we have appointed to do the business of the town, should take steps at once and not wait for some one to be bit first. This seems to me to be a very poor policy for city fathers to allow all dogs to go at large through the city without even a muzzle. Now, no longer than to-day I saw a delivery boy fighting two dogs, and I was afraid they would bite him. I hurried to help him, but he succeeded in getting into his waggon before I got to him, but the dogs were close after him. This should be stopped at a time like this, when dogs are going mad so often al lover the land. Now, i fthe officers of this city do not have the dogs either chained up or muzzled or shot (which would be the best in a great many cases) there should be some way of taking action against the said officers for neglect of their duty. This is a serious matter and should be looked into before it is too late. After the horse is stolen is a poor time to lock the stable. Hoping to hear from some more citizens on this subject, I will leave the matter in your hands for the present. I am, yours, etc.,

JOHN W. HALES.

BARGAIN SALE OF SUITS DREW RECORD CROWD

All records were broken by the crowd which thronged into Cressman's this morning, when wash suits were put on sale at 99c. The extraordinary bargain had been advertised widely through the press, but the results surprised every one. There were only two hundred suits advertised to be disposed of in the Annex to-day at that price, but before the store opened five hundred people, mostly of the feminine sex, were out in front. The rush that ensued when the doors were opened at 8.10 was worth seeing. The Annex was crowded in a minute and one hundred people were kept waiting on each of the other floors. The two hundred suits disappeared like snow before a January thaw, and two hundred more were put on sale and as quickly snapped up, the whole lot being disposed of in ten minutes.

FORTUNE CAME ALL TOO LATE

Eva Fox-Strangways Passed Away After an Adventurous Career—Learned of Fortune Left Her Shortly Before Her Death.

PASSED WORTHLESS CHEQUES

New York, March 15.—Mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Eva Fox Strangways, who died in Bellevue Hospital from a drug which she swallowed after being adopted for passing worthless checks, will probably be dispelled by an autopsy on the body, to be held to-day. A pathetic side of the tragedy has developed by the discovery that half an hour after the young woman's death the news of a fortune of $10,000 that she had been expecting arrived.

The news came to the office of her attorney, Mrs. Gabrielle S. Mulliner, of 320 Fifth avenue, in a letter requesting that Mrs. Strangways, or Helen Drummond, as she was sometimes known, call at the office of the British consul to sign the release and obtain her share of the fortune.

Was Expecting Fortune.

It was in anticipation of this money Mrs. Mulliner said, that the woman had sought credit at various places and obtained goods and accommodations without money. Only a few days ago Mrs. Mulliner received a letter from a woman in Canada saying the writer was a relative of Mrs. Strangways, and was prepared to do anything to rescue her from her unfortunate position.

CURED WHEN DOCTORS FAILED

Mr. Felix Villeneuve, Clarence Creek, Ont., writes: "I was a great sufferer from kidney disease, inflammation of the bowels and liver troubles, and doctors could not help me much. Could not sleep, water contained sediment, had frequent desire to urinate, and often passed blood. Had dreadful headaches, one side almost paralysed and was deaf in one year for eight years. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cured me, and I am very grateful. I want to thank you.

A Birthday Party will be held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) McClelland, Brock St. on Thursday, March 17th, from 4 to 7 o'clock, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of George Street Methodist Church. There will be a good programme, and refreshments will be served. Everybody welcome. Admission 15 cents. 3d58

ACTRESS STRUCK ACTOR

Adele Ritchie Punched Carter De Haven "Good and Plenty."

Chicago, March 15.—According to Carter De Haven, who is stage manager and leading man in the "Girl in the Taxi" show, playing at the Court Theatre, Miss Adele Ritchie, the actress gave him the beating of his life Saturday night just after the last curtain.

De Haven admits that he was put to rout by his fair adversary. He said in explanation:

"Miss Ritchie had purchased a box for the forthcoming actors' benefit and had posted a notice on the bulletin board asking the members of the company to come through with their prorata. I saw the notice and said to Miss Ritchie: 'Miss Ritchie, if any notices are to be posted up here I will do it,' and then I just ripped off that notice, crumpled it in my hands and dashed it to the floor.

"We went through the play in the role of lovers and the audience was all unknowing of the bitterness that lay between us. But at the fall of the final curtain Miss Ritchie flew at me in fury and passion and punched me in the face.

'No, I did not strike her—I could not do that—but she threw a silver vanity box at me and I grabbed it up. Then she set upon me with redoubled energy and I retreated. It was a case of retreat or fight, and I retreated."

Miss Ritchie said:

"That miserable little fellow is beneath my contempt—utterly beneath my notice. Let him talk. Why should I notice what he says? He has been talking ever since we struck Chicago. When he is through talking I will talk in a different way.

"I punched him all right, and I punched him good and plenty. When the curtain was rung up I went after him and slapped his face. Then the fellow grabbed my vanity box and broke it—my silver vanity box. Then I went after him again and punched his face good for him and he turned and ran."

THE PROVEN CURE FOR ECZEMA D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION

Many eczema sufferers have failed so utterly with salves and other "discoveries" that even the assurances of the best physician or druggist cannot induce them to invest another dollar in any remedy.

It is to these discouraged sufferers in particular that we now recommend a trial size bottle of the accepted standard eczema remedy, a simple wash known as D. D. D. Prescription.

The best skin specialists long ago, became convinced that this simple wash offered the only true cure for eczema, and the thousands of cures it has made prove that they were right.

Why shouldn't you get instant relief from that terrible itch, and a permanent cure, as so many others have done?

The first step is to write the D. D. D. Laboratories, Dept. P. E., 23 Jordan St., Toronto, for a free trial bottle. It will stop the awful itch instantly.

For sale by all druggists.

FOR TWELFTH TIME

Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine is Re-elected Secretary of the Board of Trade.

Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine was unanimously re-elected to the position of Secretary of the Peterborough Board of Trade at the annual meeting of that body in the Council Chamber last night. This makes the twelfth time in succession that Mr. Quartermaine has been chosen and his re-election without opposition, year by year, is a striking recognition of the effectiveness of his services to the Board, of which he has been such a faithful servant for so long a period.

THE APPOINTMENT OF A COMMISSIONER OF INDUSTRIES SEEMS TO BE ASSURED

ALD. W. H. BRADBURN,
Who Will be Vice-President of the Board of Trade for Another Year by Acclamation.

Mr. D. O'Connell Submits an Optimistic Report at the Meeting of the Board of Trade Last Night—Prospects are Bright.

WILL SECURE THE SUM

The outlook for the appointment of an industrial commissioner for Peterborough is very bright.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Trade Mr. D. O'Connell gave a most encouraging report from the Board's committee, which had in charge the matter of raising $2,000 by subscriptions to supplement the $2,000 voted by the city council to meet the expenses of such an appointment.

Mr. O'Connell related the different steps in the negotiations from the commencement of the scheme. The resolution passed by the Board had asked that $4,000 be set aside from the general taxes to pay the expenses of the project. Had the council acceded to this in its entirety they would have had control but under the plan of having the Board raise the amount by subscription the appointment would be in the hands of the Board.

The committee appointed by the Board had, with the power given, added to their numbers and formed sub-committees. The larger interests of the city had been interviewed and had viewed the proposal with a great deal of enthusiasm and had subscribed substantial amounts. There was every prospect of being able to raise not only $2,000 but a sum even higher than that. The committee, Mr. O'Connell stated, propose to start in to-day to wait upon the general public, and he asked the co-operation and assistance of the members of the Board.

TO BE OPENED ON MONDAY

The New Montgomery House on Simcoe Street is Now an Attractive Hostelry — A Complete Transformation Has Taken Place.

ONE OF THE FINEST

On Monday next the Montgomery Hotel will be opened to the travelling public. For the past few weeks this house has been undergoing extensive repairs. A complete transformation has taken place and one would hardly recognize it as being the same place, as it was before the painter and paper hanger got busy on it. It is surprisingly attractive and it now stands among the finest hotels that can be found in cities of similar size as Peterborough, and under the capable management of the proprietor, Mr. Frank Montgomery, it ought to prove exceedingly popular. A visitor to this hostelry is immediately struck by its bright, cheerful and yet homelike appearance. Every accommodation for the comfort and convenience of the guests is supplied and almost everything that a modern and up-to-date hotel can offer is here to be found. The house throughout is steam heated, assuring the comfort of the guests during the winter months, and bathrooms with hot and cold water are also convenient to the rooms.

The newest ideas of decorating have been carried out in the papering and painting of the various rooms. They are all extremely pretty. The dining room is panelled in two shades of green. It is large and spacious and the best service is assured. The buffet is completely renovated, having been modelled after those seen in the best hotels in the larger cities. The graining throughout is in oak.

A new feature that will be much enjoyed by the ladies is the enlargement of the ladies sitting room on the second floor. The furniture throughout the house is all new and the best that could be secured. All the bedrooms have been painted and papered very attractively.

Young People of St. Luke's Church Remember Mr. C. Crane on Eve of His Departure.

A number of the young people of St. Luke's church including those of Ald. Turner's Bible class and the members' of the Young People's Society met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher, Burnham St. last evening to say good-bye to Mr. Charlie Crane, who leaves to-morrow morning for Toronto, where he will in future reside. The evening was very pleasantly spent in progresive euchre, after which Ald. Turner addressed a few remarks in which he expressed regret at Mr. Crane's intended departure from the city. He called on Mr. Sam Whittaker to read an address, which in part referred to the great interest Mr. Crane had always taken in the vaious organizations of the church. As president of the A.Y.P.A. he had worked indefatigably in its behalf and his removal from St. Luke's activities would be a distinct loss. However, his many friends joined in wishing him much success in the future. The presentation of a handsome suit case was made by Miss Elsie Dawson. Mr. Crane made a fitting reply, assuring those present of his deep appreciation of their very kind thoughtfulness. He thanked them most heartily for the splendid gift.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt also made a few remarks, expressing his regret at Mr. Crane's departure, who, he said, had ever been ready to help in any way he could, the work of the church. He also extended his best wishes for the future. Refreshments were served at the conclusion and a social time spent.

DUBIOUS LOYALTY.

Our good Conservative friends are showing their loyalty to Canada by sneering, in cartoon and quip, at the proposed Canadian navy. It is called a "tin-pot" navy by those who may not unfairly, be described as peanut patriots and statesmen. The Canadian navy may not be as formidable as that of the great powers, but it is a beginning. There was a time when the British navy was not much to brag about; and twelve years ago Germany had no navy at all; it is only a few years that Japan has been a naval power. Even a "tin-pot navy" is better than none at all; and that is what a section of the Conservative party—eighteen out of eighty—wants. The other three score of Conservative representatives in the House don't want any navy either; they propose an expedient for a policy in the matter of sharing the duty of imperial defence. They want to send twenty or twenty-five millions of money to the mother country to build a couple of Dreadnoughts. What a drop in the bucket! What a "tin-pot" contribution! What will such a sum, even the larger, count for in Great Britain's tremendous expenditure of 203 million dollars this year, 27 millions more than last year? Great Britain does not want money; she wants the help, the sympathy, the co-operation of the self-governing Dominions. She wants it as an assertion of policy, as a recognition of the obligations of imperial copartnership. The Canadian naval policy is a policy, a permanency, a beginning, a foundation, on which will be built an enduring structure of imperial solidification. It is the only dignified position, much more so than borrowing twenty or twenty-five millions from Great Britain for her to spend—discharging our share of imperial defence obligation by paying the interest on it. By building a Canadian navy, by making a beginning, we are making one more advance in nationhood, and by building it at home we are making the beginnings of a mighty shipbuilding industry, for which we have all the elements, the coal, the iron, the steel, and the nickel, as well as the men to man it.

CANADIAN WHEAT PRODUCTION.

Canada is just coming into prominence among the great wheat producing countries of the world and the time does not seem to be far distant when this country will be in a position to be in fact, as she is in possibility, the granary of the Empire. The International Institute of Agriculture, Italy, has issued a bulletin giving figures relating to grain production of different countries, noting decreases and increases. The figures show that Canada is fifth among the great wheat-producing countries, these being, in order of production, Russia, United States, France, British India, then Canada. The table also shows that, while there has been a general all-round increase over 1908, the increase in Canada is twelve per cent. higher than the next highest, Russia. The average increase in the first four countries named, over 1908, was twenty-one per cent., while the increase in Canada's wheat production was fifty per cent. It may be interesting to note that the table mentioned gives the increase in the United States as only ten per cent. This indicates that the United States has about reached the limit of expansion of wheat production, and has lost the continental monopoly of wheat supply. If Canada can maintain her rate of increase—the probabilities are, judging by the activity in railway building and the inflow of immigration, that she will better it—it will only be a few years and Canada's annual yield of wheat will be 500 million bushels. The largest, at the average rate of increase, of other wheat producing nations, of any country in the world. If this state of things comes to pass we shall be deluged with wheat, choked with wheat, glutted with wheat. For there is no probability or even possibility that our transportation facilities will keep pace with our growth of wheat yield. Then, even as, in a measure, now every outlet of traffic will be needed. This indicates the necessity of urging forward the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the Canadian Northern Railway, the Hudson Bay Railway, the Trent Canal, the deepening of the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals, and even, if we could afford it, the building of the Georgian Bay Canal.

THE SALARY GRAB.

The members of the Ontario Legislature have, with the exception of the righteous five, signed a round robin for an increase of indemnity from $1,000 to $1,500, thinking, evidently, with trigonometrical contrariety, that a round robin in this case represents a square deal to themselves. The payment made to members is paid as an indemnity against loss in serving as statesmen. If it were paid as a reward for the distinguished services members render in devoting themselves to the arduous work of sending blue books and bills of cryptic phraseology to their constituents, a thousand dollars would, for a six weeks' session, be immensely inadequate. A thousand dollars for a six weeks' session is $166 per week, possibly as much as the average member would make if he continued his ordinary occupation instead of serving the country. But we cannot measure the value of public service by monetary appraisement, or debtor or creditor items. The honour of the position is one thing; the glory of serving one's country, of making its laws and making history, would have to be included in the credit columns. Politicians are only human beings after all. That is shown in their ever-readiness to look out for number one—of course in a legitimate way; and it is further shown by the fact that even the rigid lines of party politics give way to the personal consideration. Hence the struggle to get the round robin for an increase of indemnity unanimously signed, so that one party cannot hurl at another the accusation of salary grabbing. Some journalistic authorities insist that the question should be referred to the referendum of a general election, that the people should approve. Why should they be consulted? Parliament in the beginning fixed its own remuneration without consulting the people. Why should it not increase the indemnity of members without resort to a plebiscite?

NO SHORT SESSION.

Those who anticipated that the first of May would see the prorogation of the Dominion Parliament, must revise their calculations. The 24th of May or the first of June will be more probable dates. On Monday the whole day till six o'clock was taken up with the discussion of a private bill; and another private bill was responsible for a continuous sitting without the speaker, or rather deputy-speaker, leaving the chair, and Hon. W. S. Fielding making the record of leading the House for eighteen hours on end. At 8 o'clock on Monday evening the House went into committee on the bill to incorporate the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Company, having a relation to but not an organic connection with the project to dam the Long Sault rapids to develop electric energy. Though the bill had run the gauntlet of the Private Bills committee the Opposition set up a persistent system of objection, if not obstruction. This obstruction was made ostensibly in the public interests, but really in the interests of the Hydro-electric scheme of the Ontario government on the one hand and on the other, in the interests of Mr. Rodolphe Forget, Conservative M.P. for Charlevoix, otherwise the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company. The idea of competition with these interests though such competition might reasonably be expected to enure to the public advantage, was not for a moment to be entertained. The government's assurance that public rights would be protected, by the government retaining control of rates and by the requirement that one half of the power generated at the Long Sault must be distributed in Canada was ignored. The opposition continued the fight upon the general principle of antagonism to the bill, as was shown by the fact that when they were invited to put forward something tangible in the shape of an amendment, they declined to do so, preferring to talk, talk, talk, and on it went till four o'clock Monday afternoon, when a sort of compromise was effected by an agreement to pass the first clause of the bill. There had been twenty solid hours wasted in talk almost entirely irrelevant to the bill under discussion, under the plea that the transmission bill was really a bill in the interests of the Long Sault dam proposal, but really to block a transmission scheme that provided competition that would threaten two monopolies controlled by or in the interests of prominent Conservative interests.

SOUR STOMACH

Is An Almost Certain Sign of Acute Indigestion.

If you occasionally have a taste of sour food in your mouth, it surely shows that the food you are eating is not digested, but instead, is fermenting and giving out poisonous gases.

Belching of gas is a common symptom at such times, and also that lump of lead feeling, as if your stomach was carrying a much greater load than it could stand.

If you want prompt relief and permanent cure, go to Wm. Madill's and get a large tin box of Mi-o-na tablets for 50 cents.

Wm. Madill knows that Mi-o-na is a highly recommended scientific remedy, and that is why he is ready to return your money if it fails to cure acid stomach, belching of gas, dizziness, biliousness, sick headache, foul breath, and all stomach troubles.

LINDSAY DOGS GET ANOTHER CHANCE

Lindsay, March 15.—The dogs of Lindsay were granted one more day to live or run at large by the town council at the special meeting held last night. They were to have been tied up this morning, but owing to the "technicality" in the proclamation issued, the said proclamation was amended as follows:

"That section 12 of the said by-law be hereby amended, by striking out in the last line thereof the words, "Unless it be securely muzzled," and adding to the said section the following words, "and during the period mentioned in the said proclamation no person shall permit his dog or her dog or any dog or female dog possessed or harboured by him, or any such dog or female dog of the class mentioned in the proclamation to run at large within the municipality of the town of Lindsay."

According to the first proclamation issued the dogs could run at large if muzzled, but according to the amendment made last night the dogs will not be allowed to run at large at all. They must be kept on the premises of the owner and if they are taken out by the owners they must be on a string.

On motion the new regulations will come into force on the 16th day of March (to-morrow.)

It was also explained that taxes paid for the year 1909 were good until June 30, 1910, at which date the year ends.

Paid by the Day.

On motion Mr. Samuel McGill was appointed to act as dog catcher and he will be paid at the rate of $1.50 per day and will also be allowed 10 per cent. on all 1909 taxes collected.

FIVE PEOPLE SAY THEY SAW GHOST APPEAR IN CAVAN STABLE

Fascinating Story of the Apparition as Related to Reporter by Persons to Whom it Was Visible---Interesting Photographs of Persons and Scenes In Connection With the Affair That Has Caused a Great Sensation in the Neighbourhood.

The Examiner is indebted to the kindness of the Toronto Sunday World for the interesting photographs in connection with the "apparition" at Cavanville, which appear on this page to-day. The original story of the "ghost" appeared in the Examiner some weeks ago, and since that time the Toronto Sunday World, with its usual enterprise, despatched a reporter and a photographer to the scene of the visitation, with the result that one of the most interesting stories in the annals of Canadian journalism appeared in the Sunday World of March 13. It attracted much attention everywhere, and the Examiner is pleased to be able to reproduce the article and the illustrations, and at the same time to congratulate the Sunday World upon its enterprise.

The Toronto Sunday World on Sunday last gave considerable space and elaborated to a large extent on a story that was given prominence in the Examiner on Saturday, February 26th. It is in reference to the appearance of a ghost to five people in Cavan Township, members of the household of Mr. Wm. Johnston. At the time of the publication of the story in the Examiner the article aroused widespread interest and is still the subject of a great deal of comment. The story as it appeared in the Sunday World is as follows:

A profound sensation has been created in the northern section of the Township of Cavan, about 75 miles from Toronto, by the appearance on three different occasions of an apparition at the home of William Johnston, an aged farmer and a pioneer of the district.

The ghostly figure appeared each time in the stable and was seen by five members of Johnston's family, three of whom saw it on different nights. All the persons to whom it appeared are full grown and are able to describe in detail the aspect of the spectre.

On each occasion the unearthly visitant appeared in different physical form, the first time with a smiling face, about middle aged, the next time without a head, and the third time with long whiskers and long moustache heavily tinged with grey.

GHOST SPOKE

On the last occasion the ghost talked with the Johnston boys who were only a few feet away, but its words were merely mutterings and only three words were heard distinctly. The first one was "Crawford," the next one "land" and the third word "and." The rising inflection in the voice when the word "and" was spoken just as the figure was fading from view made the auditors practically certain that the spectre had used the conjunction and was proceeding to say something more when it vanished. They were sure it had not repeated the word "land."

None of the members of the Johnston family ever saw a spirit before and they affirm that they never believed there was such a thing as a ghost until the present.

DEATH OF A RELATIVE

A remarkable circumstance in connection with the appearance of the spectre, was the death of Thomas Crawford, a relative of the Johnstons', at the county poor house in Cobourg, on the day the figure made its first appearance. In fact a comparison of dates reveals that the mysterious visitor appeared to Hannah Pigott of the Johnston Household just about the time the breath was leaving the earthly frame of Thomas Crawford in Cobourg.

Crawford was the husband of William Johnston's sister, Ann, who died ten years ago last month. He owned a house and a quarter of an acre of land at Port Hope, but for a number of years lived in the House of Shelter in Cobourg town.

It is worthy of note that Crawford was a firm believer in ghosts and had often declared that he had received visits from them. The physical appearance of Thomas Crawford, who was over 70 years of age, was very dissimilar from that of any of the ghostly visitors, but in the absence of any other reasonable hypothesis the Johnstons are associating the spectre with their dead relative. They feel sure that he had longed to consult with them regarding the disposal of his house, and passing away before any of them reached his bedside his spirit had returned to carry out the mission which the hand of death had stayed. His last illness was but of two days' duration, and altho William Johnston had been summoned by long distance telephone when it was found that the illness was likely to be fatal, the old man died before the arrival of the relative. His remains were interred in Welcome Cemetery near Port Hope on February 23rd, the day following his death.

MAY BE A WARNING

The affair has completely unnerved Mrs. Johnston who for several nights since the ghost appeared on February 22, has refused to remain in an unlighted room. Mr. Johnston, who has already crossed the alloted span of years and has always enjoyed good health, half entertains the view that the apparition brought warning that some person near to him is fast approaching the great divide.

The entire neighborhood is greatly agitated and some of the cooler heads are talking of organizing a party to wait in the barn to see whether the spirit of Thomas Crawford or whosoever it may be, will make another effort to convey to the living the concerns which were agitating his mind at the close of his life.

The ghost appeared each time at about the hour of 9 o'clock in the evening, and since its third appearance members of the Johnston family have carefully avoided visiting the barn at that hour. They have, however, been in the stable since after dark, but saw nothing of the uncanny creature.

REPUTABLE FAMILY

The Johnston family is one of the best known and respected in the Township of Cavan. William Johnston, the head of the household, has lived for 75 years on the homestead, which his father took up in the pioneering days. He has five sons, all living, namely: William James, aged 30; Robert, 29; Albert, 26; Charles, 24; and Fred 20, and an adopted daughter, Hannah Pigott, aged about 20, who has lived with the Johnstons since she was 10 years old.

The farm is large and the buildings on the property were all erected in recent years. It is a common report in the district that William Johnston is in easy financial circumstances.

When two staff representatives of The World visited the Johnston house on Wednesday they found only Hannah Pigott at home. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston with three sons she said had gone to Peterborough seven miles away while Fred had taken his brother Robert to the station en route to Port Hope. Fred was however about due to return.

MISS PIGOTT'S STORY

To the newspapermen's inquiries Miss Pigott said that that was the place, an apparition had appeared and that she would not mind telling all about what she had seen.

Hannah is a short, plump girl, distinctly Irish in facial appearance and speech. She has large, inquiring eyes and talks with entire self-possession and confidence. After general remarks concerning the state in which the family had been since what had taken place she described what had appeared before her.

"I was in the cow stable milking about 9 o'clock," she continued, "when I heard the cow moan and looking up, I saw something white in the calf pen which is just off the cow stable. I was not frightened then because I thought it was only my imagination and I went on milking. Pretty soon I looked up again and saw it quite plain, and held up the lantern to get a better view when it disappeared. While I was wondering whether I could be brave enough to go into the calf pen with the lantern and see what was there, the figure appeared right near the boards which divide the calf pen from the cow stable.

A SMILING GHOST

"It was like a person with a lady's face, but I know it was a man because it had short, black, curly hair. It was looking right at me and smiling as if it wanted to say something nice to me. It had on what seemed like a long, white gown, low-cut about the shoulders and its neck was bare down to the top of the gown. It was only a few feet away from me and I saw it as plainly as I see you now.

'I was so badly scared that I ran out of the stable as fast as I could. When I got to the house, I told them what I had seen but they would not believe me.

"After a while, the boys went down to the stable to look but they did not see anything that night. The next night at about the same time the boys were in the stable and the ghost appeared again, and the third night they saw it again. I did not go near the barn after seeing the spirit the first time."

NO HUMAN BEING

Replying to questions Miss Pigott said that no person could have entered the cow stable door while she was milking without attracting her attention. She did not believe that the figure was that of a human being because a live person could not disappear so quickly. "Some people claim that there are no spirits, and I never thought so before, but I do now," she said.

CLOCK STOPPED

Miss Pigott then talked about the circumstances of Thomas Crawford's death, and imparted the startling information that the clock in the house had stopped on the night of his death which was also the date of the ghost's first appearance. They had tried several times to start the clock but without success until after he was buried when it was started and has since run without stopping. This fact was confirmed by Fred Johnston.

As Hannah Pigott was finishing her story Fred Johnston returned from the station. He consented to take the newspapermen out to the barn and show them the general lay of the building and also to relate his experience with the apparition.

SCEPTICAL AT FIRST

Fred is 20 years of age and a strapping youth with a bright, intelligent face. "We did not believe Hannah," he commenced, "when she rushed into the house that night and cried that she had seen a man dressed in white in the stable. I told her that it was all a scheme of her own to get rid of the milking but she seemed so worked up, that we decided to go out and look. Albert went with me and we looked all through the cow stable and the calf pen but saw nothing of any ghost. After completing the chores we went back to the house.

APPEARS AGAIN

"The next night Hannah refused to go near the stable so Albert went out to milk the cows. While he was milking I attended to the horses. A passageway leads from the horse stable to the cow stable along the western wall and immediately behind the cows is the calf pen. As I was coming through the passage with a fork of hay I caught sight of a figure dressed in white standing some distance back from the opening into the calf pen, and just behind the low partition which subdivides the pen.

"It seemed quite tall but had no head. I stopped still and called to Charley, wh owas in the horse stable,

A dim outline of the cow mentioned in the story can be seen on the left side of the picture.

FIVE PEOPLE SAY THEY SAW GHOST

saw the figure. While we were looking at it, the figure disappeared.

SEARCHING FOR THE GHOST

"We decided all three to go in and search the pen, which we did. We looked in every hole and corner and saw nothing. There is a small door in the north-east corner of the calf pen leading to the pig pen but this was fastened. The only other opening through which a person could escape was the one through which we have seen the apparition, a hole about four feet square. We were right at this opening all the time until we went in to search the pen. We saw nothing further that night.

A GLOOMY VIGIL

"The next night I milked the cows with the lantern near me, and while I milked I looked into the pen several times but saw nothing. When I had finished we decided to stay in the barn a while to see whether anything would happen, so Bill (Fred's eldest brother), and Charley and I sat down in the horse stable and waited.

"After we had been there about half an hour I looked into the cow stable, but could see nothing. Charley brought the lantern to the door and held it up so we could see in the cow stable, and even through the opening into the calf pen, but there was nothing unusual there.

GHOST'S THIRD APPEARANCE

"We went back into the horse stable and waited a few minutes longer and then we all went in together taking the lantern with us. I was in the lead with my brothers right behind me and as I reached the end of the passage the thing appeared standing just within the opening to the calf pen. We all saw it, and all stopped still except Bill, who ran back through the horse stable and out of the barn in fright.

PHYSICAL FORM DESCRIBED

"The figure was about six feet tall, and appeared in a white gown, which extended down below the boards behind which it stood. Its head would have reached the top of the opening if it had been standing erect but it was considerably stooped. The apparition had long whiskers and long moustache quite grey and the face was creased like that of an old man.

"It was staring straight at us, and we could see it as plain as in day. The eyes were blue and the white about the eyes was very prominent. A cap which looked very much like a night cap that old women wore in the old times was pulled down nearly to the eye brows. The cap was flat on top and had a band across the forehead near the edge. The whiskers were long and wavy. The neck seemed bare right down to the gown which was hung quite low across the breast and shoulders. The features were ghastly white.

SPOKE TO THE SPIRIT

"Bill's wife told me to speak to it when it appeared again so I decided to do so. I said, 'Hello' just as if I were talking to any other person. 'What brought you here,' "The Spirit muttered something in reply which we could not understand. Then I said, 'What do you want here?' The figure commenced talking at once, never taking its eyes off us all the time.

"The only words I understood were: 'Crawford,' 'land' and finally 'and.' We saw its lips moving and also saw its teeth. When it commenced talking it reached out one hand and rested it on the top board of the pen opening. The back of the hand was towards us. It looked like a human hand. I noticed the fingernails.

"When the spectre moved its arm I noticed the white folds about the arm move also. The sleeve seemed to be very big.

FORM VANISHED

"Just as the figure uttered the word 'and' it disappeared. It did not go down or up, back or to either side, but just seemed to fall to pieces.

"Charley was still beside me when the object disappeared. We immediately climbed into the pen with the lantern and thoroughly searched the pen but saw nothing again. I am sure it was no human being trying to frighten us, because there was no way a person could get out of the pen. The only other door from the pen led into the pig pen, but that was fastened, and anyway a man would not have had time to get across the partition to the door before we were in the pen and could have seen him.

"We heard no noise at any time except the voice of the ghost. I have several times since looked in the direction of the calf pen when in the stable, but have never seen anything."

The Sunday World cross-examined the young man at some length regarding the circumstances and he consistently stuck to his story. He was positive the figure was that of no living person, because no person could have escaped from the pen without being seen.

SPIRIT OF UNCLE

Questioned regarding his candid opinion of the apparition Fred Johnston said he believed it was the spirit of his uncle Tom Crawford, which had come back to tell them what to do with the property. His only reason for thinking that was the words spoken by the ghost. He had not seen his uncle for a number of years and remembered his appearance quite distinctly. The ghost did not look like him at all.

Fred affirmed to the newspapermen that he was enjoying the best of health, as indeed his appearance showed, that he had never been in a trance, had never walked in his sleep, nor suffered from fits. His brothers and the girl Hannah, he said were enjoying similar health.

"I think after all it will be a good thing for us as it may make us live better lives," Fred concluded.

Fred Johnston informed The Sunday World that his people are all on good social terms with the neighbours and he was not aware that any person would try to frighten them for any reason. The Johnston family is of Irish descent. They are members of the Presbyterian church. The boys have a good common school education.

PREMISES INSPECTED

William Eliott of Cavanville, who drove the newspaper men out to the Johnston home, a distance of eight miles, heard the two members of the family relate the stories with all the circumstantial detail and agreed that such stories could not be easily concocted. The party was taken on an inspection of the scene and the physical features of the barn were found to conform to the accounts given by the two parties.

While they were in the cow stable the very cow which the girl was milking when the ghost appeared, and which was said to have emitted a moan, and thereby caused Hannah to look up, gave vent to a doleful sound as if to substantiate the part she was said to have played in the episode.

It was noticed however, that she had a young calf with her, in whose behalf no doubt the moan was emitted. The cow-groan probably signified no more when it gave warning of the ghostly presence than when it was heard by the reporters.

Otherwise the circumstances stand unexplainable.

BOARD OF TRADE ANNUAL MEETING

loom up in the hrizon and so have a share in the general success.

Such is my wish and confidence in the future of this city, and in the prosperity of the Board of Trade, which has been evident in the past, and which I know will be in the future.

In the absence of the treasurer, Mr. P. Campbell, Secretary T. Q. Quartermaine read his report, which showed receipts of $419.85, and expenditures of $227.91.

T. Q. Quartermaine reported as follows:

Gentlemen,—I have the honour of presenting to you as Secretary, the 21st annual report of this Board.

This past year we have held eight meetings, viz., March 9th, May 18th, May 25th, July 20th, November 9th, November 16th, November 30th, and December 14th, 1909. We have also held several committee meetings.

The following subjects have been discussed at these meetings: "The Waterworks Dam; The Power Question"; Purity Ware By-law; Reduction of Freight Rates on Coal; Smith St. Bridge; To Formulate a policy for better advertising the City with a view of securing more manufacturing industries; Appropriation for Conservation of Trent Canal Waters to our North; Our Vanishing Forests, and Municipal Matters and By-laws.

The average attendance was 20 members, as against 14 members last year, showing an increase of six members on the average of each meeting.

The thanks of the Board of Trade are due to ex-Mayor Rush, his Worship Mayor Morrow, and the members of the Board of Aldermen for the use of the city council chamber during the past year.

Respectfully submitted,
T. Q. QUARTERMAINE,
Secretary.

Peterborough, March 15, 1910.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie.
Vice-President—Ald. W. H. Bradburn.
Treasurer—Peter Campbell.
Secretary—T. Q. Quartermaine.

Messrs. D. O'Connell, J. H. Larmonth and F. H. Dobbin were appointed a committee to strike the standing committee of the Board for the year.

Before the election of officers, Mr. Gillespie asked to be allowed to retire from the presidency, but the Board refused to consider his request Mr. O'Connell remarked that he had infused a remarkable spirit of progress into the Board during the past year and that it would be in the best interests of the organization to have him again fill the chair. Mr. Gillespie's re-election was greeted with much applause.

Mr. W. H. Moore opened the discussion on the subject of municipal ownership with an able address that was closely followed and was of the greatest interest to the members present.

After congratulating Mr. Gillespie upon his re-election and the Board upon having such an efficient officer at its head, Mr. Moore proceeded to enumerate what he considered the most important utilities in a city of Peterborough's size as follows:

1. Streets and sidewalks.
2. Water for domestic and fire protection.
3. Sewers.
4. Police protection.
5. Fire protection.
6. Gas for domestic use.
7. Power for public services.
8. Public light.
9. Local telephones.
10. Street railways.
11. Sewerage disposal works.

Mr. Moore next turned his attention to the city's power house scheme, which he contended to be a move in the right direction. All the squibs in the press in opposition to the by-law are written by people who oppose any and all public measures for fear of making a mistake. It will take $70,000 to equip a perfect power system, and to provide for the repayment of this a sinking fund of $5,000 a year would be needed. There are 118,000 cubic feet of water flowing down our river every minute at the present time, and this would produce 1700 horse power, net. Reserving 600 horse power for pumping purposes, in round numbers we would have 1000 h.p. for power supply. After paying all expenses, Mr. Moore estimated that, on a basis of $10 a h.p., the city should net $5,000 or $6,000 surplus revenue. He also strongly emphasized the fact that the dam is not being paid for by excessive water rates, and that when the debentures are met in 20 or 25 years from now it will be the property of all citizens alike.

As to police protection the speaker pointed out that in all large British, American and Canadian cities, the police number one to each 500 inhabitants. In Peterborough we have one to every 3000 citizens, and it is up to the council to see that our commissioners give this matter their earnest attention.

We have a splendid fire protection department, asserted the speaker, with a good head and a capable staff. They are doing good work, as evidenced in the considerably reduced insurance rates.

In public lighting the city is paying $50 a lamp per year, and it is a question for the council to consider whether it would be profitable to undertake municipal lighting or not. Local telephones, Mr. Moore barely touched upon, and admitted that municipal ownership of the street railway was past consideration, the present company enjoying a 25 years charter. Sewage disposal arrangements will have to come in time.

Peterborough had the advantage of a splendid situation with a salubrious atmosphere and a location at the foot of a strong water fall from Lakefield, affording splendid water powers.

Speaking of the first utility he had mentioned Mr. Moore said that he had thought Peterborough had pretty good ones until he had seen the thoroughfares in some of the Western Ontario towns, where they had good pavements. Here there were no pavements and dependence was placed on poor quality of macadam. There was considerable complaint against the operation of the city Council in connection with the Board of Works and Mr. Moore considered that if there was any department that required a commission government it was the Board of Works, which he thought should be replaced by a commission. Committees of a Council could not be independent and as a result the Council did some extremely foolish things. They had done so when he was in the Council and they still did so. Mr. Moore instanced the Romaine St. sewer and the sewer built on Downie St., north where there were no water mains and little likelihood of their being any as examples of this policy. The trouble was that the city fathers did not appoint the proper superintendents to look after the work of sewer construction and a blunder had been made when the water works had been taken over in not turning over the control of the sewers to the same commission.

Mr. Moore then devoted a few minutes to the discussion of "water for domestic use and fire protection. The taking over of the water system had cost the city $240,000 but in the eight years the rates had been lowered forty per cent., and had not it been necessary to erect a new dam there would have been a fifty per cent. reduction. There had been no increased assessment in any way, the surplus revenue being sufficient to meet the expenses. The water provided was good and there need be no hesitation in drinking it.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, was the next speaker. He had little to add to the remarks of Mr. Moore, he said, and agreed with him in the main but differed somewhat in his estimate of the streets of the city. The speaker had never been in a town where the streets and pavements were better taken care of than they are in Peterborough. In the Western Ontario towns mentioned by Mr. Moore it should be remembered that they were forced, through the nature of the soil, to pave the streets at considerable expense and to the neglect of other utilities.

Speaking of the water service Mr. Matthews agreed with his fellow commissioner that the water was safe now, but contended that the position would be precarious were a few cases of typhoid fever to break out in Lakefield. During the winter refuse is thrown out on the snow and when the thaw comes in the spring is carried by the melting snow into the river, and the result would be serious. "The sooner we adopt filtration methods," remarked Mr. Matthews, "the better it will be for Peterborough."

Mr. Matthews was of the opinion that any surplus from the development of a power system should be applied to the reduction of the water rates and when these are at a figure at which the water is cheap then they should be devoted to a reduction of the general taxes.

In conclusion Mr. Matthews argued that it would be a better policy to foster the manufactories we have than to spend money running after new ones.

SHIPPING HIGH GRADE ORE

The Boyd-Gordon Mining Company shipped a car of 35 tons very high grade ore on the 14th. The ore is consigned to the Perth Amboy smelter of New Jersey. The ore is expected to run in the neighbourhood of four thousand ounces per ton.

The Company have also another carload ready for shipment which will come out in the course of a few days.

They are at present bagging ore at the 40 and 75 foot levels at the rate of from 10 to 12 bags of high grade per day.

Sufficient provisions and supplies have been shipped to the camp to last for the coming year. The mine is fully equipped with everything necessary to carry on the work to the 150 foot level using a full force of men.

The road from Gow Ganda Junction is in excellent condition and has every appearance of remaining so for some time yet.

Peterborough, March 15.

Sir,—In reply to Enquirer a more important question than the dogs was introduced at the Manchester assizes by Mr. Justice Walton who said: This case has brought to my mind vividly that the gravest responsibility rests upon constables, etc., who put into force the machinery of the lunacy laws. It seems plain that a man or woman, not a pauper, but perfectly well able to maintain himself or herself, may be taken to the workhouse and shut up in an imbecile ward, declared to be insane, and shut up in a lunatic asylum without any public inquiry, without any hearing before a magistrate, without that person having any opportunity of putting forward what he or she may wish to say against the charge — indeed, without any notice of what was going on.

BOARD OF TRADE ANNUAL MEETING

of thanks to Mr. Moore for his splendid address, remarked that all reports brought into the Board should receive a practical application. Two such suggestions had been made and Mr. Matthews' remarks in regard to filtration should be acted upon. In connection with the power scheme Mr. O'Connell said that the question of what price the power was to be sold at would have to be considered. Power was needed here if manufactories were to be brought into the city. The value of power was what a manufacturer could afford to pay for it and still make a profit. The question was whether the power should be sold by the city at a profit or if it should be disposed of at about cost.

Mr. Austin seconded the vote of thanks to Mr. Moore, which was passed unanimously.

Children must have good blood, otherwise they will be puny, sickly and delicate. If your children are pale, easily exhausted, give them Ferrovim, the invigorating tonic, which is composed of fresh lean beef, Citrate of Iron and pure old Spanish Sherry Wine. Nothing could be more beneficial in such cases. $1 a bottle.

SPORTING NEWS

JACK TAIT WON RACE LAST NIGHT

New York, March 15.—Jack Tait, the famous runner of Toronto, took the measure of George Bonhag in the special one and a half mile race as the chief feature of the annual athletic carnival of the New York Athletic Club, held in Madison Square Garden to-night.

Bonhag, who holds the indoor records from two miles up to ten miles, left his class to-night and ran Tait at a distance best suited to his efforts, with the result that Tait won by a good margin. Tait drew the pole and led for the first lap, although thereafter they alternated freely enough until the fourth from the final one, each being willing, apparently, to let the other set the pace in the early and middle stages of the race. Frequently they ran stride for stride beside each other, or trailing by a scant two yards. It was the cleanest of races in the sportsmanship displayed by each runner, and the five thousand spectators frequently applauded this phase of the contest as much as the contest itself.

With the commencement of the last quarter-mile Tait, who was then in the lead, and had answered every one of Bonhag's spurts during the preceding quarter by one equally as fast, let loose in whirlwind fashion and fairly tore around the turn into the back stretch, opening up about five yards' lead almost before Bonhag realized what was up. Thereafter Tait continued to shoot away from the local runner and finished in front without being seriously challenged by almost twenty-five yards.

The full mile and a half was run by the winner in 6-52, five seconds better than all previous indoor figures for the distance, and only five and three-fifths seconds behind T. P. Conneff's world's outdoor record, made fifteen years ago.

An Associated Press despatch from New York says: John Tait, the crack middle-distance runner, of Toronto, Ont., simply romped away from Geo. Bonhag of the I. A. C. at the end of a special one and a half miles match race at the annual games of the New York Athletic Club at Madison Square Garden to-night. Tait won by thirty yards in the record time of 6.52. The former American indoor amateur record for the distance was 6.57.

WANDERERS BEAT THE OTTAWAS

New York, March 15.—If fourteen men were endowed with hockey ability those fourteen were on the ice at St. Nicholas Rink to-night, when the Wanderers and Ottawas, the two leading exponents of the Canadian game, played a match in which the final honours rested with the wearers of the red "W," by the margin of one point, the score being 4 to 3.

The match was the first of a series of two games, goals to count, for a purse of $1,500, the concluding instalment being on the schedule for Thursday night. At half-time the teams tied, but in the second half the Wanderers went into the lead on a goal by Glass and a few minutes later Hyland made the total 4to 2 in favour of the Wanderers. Ottawa sent in a tally near the close of the game. There have been good hockey matches at St. Nicholas Rink this season, games which would please the most exacting devotee of the ice sport, but there would hardly be any one who would not freely admit that the contest of to-night stood out as one of the first magnitude and it would be hard to pick a flaw in the playing of either team, for every minute of the match was fast with the fortunes of battle swinging from one end of the rink to the other with lightning rapidity. Each side presented a strong defence, and likewise there was the same aggressive attack. The line-up:

SOME BASEBALL NEWS OF INTEREST

KELLEY'S MEN SIGNING.

Baltimore, Md., March 15.—(Special).—Manager Kelley of the Toronto Club, returned to-day from New York, where he had a conference with President McCaffery. He had a talk with Keeler, but there is little hope for securing him for Toronto. Keeler, he said, has offers from Cincinnati, New York and Brooklyn, and it is the opinion of Kelley that the fleet outfielder will sign up with either of the latter teams, as his home is in Brooklyn.

"Keeler is too good a man for the big league clubs to let go," said Kelley, "though he told me that he did not know a club in the minors he would rather play with than Toronto. We have been great friends ever since we were together on the pennant-winning Baltimore team.

Kelley denied the rumours which have been extant here for several days among the ball players that his men were not signing up as well as expected. He said that practically every member of his team has now signed, including Grimshaw, MacDonald and Rudolph. He stated that the reason so few of the players' names had appeared in the reports was because he had not sent them to Pat Powers. He has now done so, however, and the next reports will show that all of the men have signed.

CATCHER'S SERIOUS PREDICAMENT.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—'Billy' Sullivan, catcher for the Chicago Americans, is suffering from blood-poisoning as a result of a wound inflicted in his left foot by a rusty nail. Sullivan's condition is said to be serious. He stepped on the nail while coming out of the grounds at Chutes Park after the game with Vernon last Saturday. He was taken to his room at the Elks' Club, where he now lies delirious from fever.

CAN'T GET KEELER.

New York, March 15—President McCaffery of the Toronto Eastern League Club held a conference at the Hotel Victoria to-day with his manager, Joe Kelley, and Willie Keeler. McCaffery wanted Keeler to sign a contract, but the former Highlander intimated he would accept the terms offered by Manager McGraw of the Giants. It was said Keeler had received a telegram from McGraw in the morning. McCaffery did not go away empty-handed however, for he signed Pitcher Rudolph and outfielder Grimshaw late in the afternoon. Manager Kelley said he had strengthened the Torontos since last season and expected them to make a strong bid for the pennant.

BILL O'HARA DISABLED.

Outfielder Bill O'Hara is laid up at the Hot Springs training camp of the St. Louis Nationals with a sprained ankle. His business partner, Jack White, of this city, received a letter from O'Hara yesterday, which was written in bed, the club surgeon having ordered the injured player not to attempt to walk for a week. The sprain was sustained when O'Hara slid to a base in a practice game.

Last spring when training with the Giants at Marlin Springs, Texas O'Hara sprained the same ankle and was on crutches for five weks. Before leaving this city a week ago the Toronto man wrenched his right shoulder and has been working out "under a pull." The last accident will give him a further setback in his training.

TEN SIGN CONTRACTS

The following wire was received by the Globe from President McCaffery, who is in New York, last night:

"Contracts of Fitzpatrick, Deal, Grimshaw, Vaughan, Caffyn, Mullin, Smith, Tonneman, Vandergrift and Rudolph are signed."

MARVELLOUS HEALING POWERS

The most severe test to which a healing ointment is ever put is the cure of eczema. So successful has Dr. Chase's Ointment proven in the cure of torturing itching eczema that many people refer to its effects as magical and marvellous. After the first few applications it positively stops the dreadful itching and then gradually and naturally heals up the sores.

OBITUARY.

The death of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Guy occurred yesterday afternoon at 331 Euclid Ave. The funeral took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The body of the late Mrs. Choate, of Lindsay, arrived on the 11.45 train. The remains were taken from the G. T. R. station to the Warsaw cemetery for burial.

MRS. GEO. T. TAYLOR.

The many friends of Harriet, wife of George H. Taylor and beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Whetung, of Chemong, will regret to learn that she passed away to her immortality on Thursday evening, March 10th, at the age of 34 years. Her death was very sudden and it was a great and sad shock to all the people of Chemong. The deceased was well and favourably esteemed throughout this district and by her consistent and lovely manners she won a host of friends, not only here, but wherever she was known and to whom she came in contact with. At home she was always diligent. One of the most conspicuous in social and religious circles, always taking an active part in every department of good work. She was one of the leading members of the Ladies' Aid Society and loved and was ready to do much good. A few moments before her death she sang one of her favourite hymns, "Fear Not, I Am With Thee."

As she breathed her last she said, "The Heaven is open." The writer can safely say that Harriet is now

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe in His gentle breast,
There by His love o'ershaded
Sweetly her soul shall rest.

The funeral took place Saturday afternoon folowed by a large concourse of friends from Smith and Ennismore townships and from a distance, to pay their last tribute to one they respected. She is survived, besides her husband and parents, by two little girls, Hazel and Stella, one sister, Daisy, two brothers, Albert and Daniel. All reside in Chemong.

MRS. ELIZA FRISE.

Mrs. Eliza Frise, widow of Henry Frise, passed away last night, after a long illness at the residence of her son, Mr. R. J. Frise, 478 Bonacord St.

The deceased was 67 years of age and was born in England, but lived the greater part of her life in Canada, coming here when quite young.

A family of three boys and three girls are left to mourn her loss, Richard, of this city, Robert, of Fenelon Falls, and Harry of Brighton, Mrs. Preston, of Lakefield, Mrs. John Robertson and Mrs. Hugh Robertson, both of this city. The deceased was highly esteemed by all who knew her.

The funeral will take place Friday at 2.30 o'clock from her son's residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

MISS S. PRESTON.

Miss S. Preston, who for many years taught on the Collegiate and Public school staffs of this city, passed away on Saturday last at the General hospital, Montreal.

The deceased, several years ago, went to British Columbia, when her teaching career was very successful. About a month ago Miss Preston became ill and returned to Montreal for treatment. There the deceased gradually sank until her death occurred. Miss Preston was greatly esteemed by all who knew her.

The remains were brought to the house o fher mother, Mrs. Porter Preston, Bethany, and the funeral took place on Tuesday to St. Mary's cemetery.

BRIDGET MENOGUE.

The death occurred at 12.30 o'clock to-day of Bridget Menogue, the daughter of ex-County Councillor John Menogue, of Otonabee. The deceased was sixteen years of age and was well and favourably known by a large circle of friends. She was born in Chandos. She is survived by her parents, five brothers, Messrs. Vincent, Michael, John, Stephen, and Patrick, and three sisters, Maggie, May and Josephine, all living at home.

The funeral announcement will be given later.

WEDDING BELLS

CLARKE—THEXTON.

A pretty wedding took place in Millbrook on the 10th inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Thexton, when their daughter, Luella, was united in marriage with Mr. R. Watson Clarke, of the town of Roland, Man., and the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Clarke, of Millbrook, Ontario.

The bride was given away by her father and wore her travelling suit of rose cloth with braid embroidery. Her picture hat was of black straw mohair with ostrich feather mounts and gold sequin trimming. The bridal bouquet was a shower of roses, carnations and maiden hair fern. Rev. Mr. Rogers, Methodist minister, performed the ceremony. The bride and groom were unattended. The decorations of the house for the occasion were of smilax and palms. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls. The high esteem in which the bride is held was shown by the number of presents which she received in silverware, cut glass, purse of gold and a handsome fur coat, the gift of her father. The young ladies of Miss Dean's Bible class, of which Miss Thexton was a member, presented her with a useful piece of silverware.

After the dejeuner was served Mr. and Mrs. Clarke left by G. T. R. train amid showers of rice and confetti for Toronto and Winnipeg en route for their new home in Roland, Man., followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Sidney Noftall Was Crossing George Street Last Evening and Did Not See Car Approaching—Not Seriously Injured.

CUT ABOUT HEAD

Little Sidney Noftall, the eight-year-old son of Mr. Wm. Noftall, 480 Aylmer street, was painfully injured last evening about five o'clock, at the corner of George and Hunter streets. The young fellow was crossing the street and he did not see a car approaching from the north. He was struck by the fender, fell on to it, and was thrown off to the other side. He was picked up and carried into McDonald's drug store, and Dr. McPherson was called in to attend him. He was cut about the head, but it was found that his injuries were not serious, and he will be able to be around again in a few days.

WELL KNOWN HERE

McCarthy, Former Port Hope and Goderich Player, is Dead.

Toornto, March 17.—T .W. McCarthy, a well-known hockey player of Goderich, Ont., died yesterday of pneumonia, McCarthy was the player successfully protested by London in the O.H.A. intermediate series this winter. The only game he played with Goderich this winter was against London, and his death yesterday was the direct result of over-exertion in that contest.

McCarthy played hockey in Port Hope the year Port Hope had such a good team, and was a member of Goderich's famous heavyweight team of 1905, which was nosed out for the championship by Stratford after Woodstock had been professionalized. In that year Goderich and Stratford tied up on the home and home round, and Stratford won by 5 to 4 in Berlin. McCarthy was a star in that year. He leaves a wife and family. The funeral will take place in Goderich to-morrow.

McCarthy is well known in Peterborough, having played here with the old Port Hope Victorias.

Conservative Members Try To Cover Their Retreat

Endeavour to Explain Their Quitting the Enquiry Board---Make Fierce Attack Upon the Chairman of the Lumsden Commission.

Ottawa, March 17—Since Messrs. Lennox, Barker and Crothers took the course of retiring from the committee on the Lumsden charges, to which they had been appointed by Parliament, they have been searching for a means of covering up their retreat. It may be remembered that on Friday Mr Lennox called attention to the omission of certain words from the report of the chairman of the committee, Mr. Geoffrion, and insinuated that the mistake had been deliberately made in order to prevent the retiring Conservative members of the Lumsden inquiry from explaining their conduct in the House. On that occasion Sir Wilfrid Laurier suggested that perhaps the mistake was a clerical or a typographical one, and promised to call the attention of the chairman to it. It so happened that Mr Geoffrion was called away from Ottawa on Friday and did not return until Tuesday night. The matter was reopened yesterday with a bitter onslaught on Mr Geoffrion.

Haughton Lennox (South Simcoe), opened the firing. He demanded to know why the terms of his resolution passed by the Lumsden committee had been changed. The original reading was that the evidence should be "reported to the House from day to day." It was altered to read "printed from day to day."

Until the proceedings of a committee are reported to the House, it is against the rules to make any reference to the proceedings of that committee, hence it is that the retirement of the three Conservatives from the Lumsden investigation has not come formally to the notice of Parliament. The report was held back, declares Mr. Lennox.

Mr. Lennox demanded "how, and by whose hand, and at whose instance, this avenue of information was so effectually blocked." He challenged Mr. Geoffrion, chairman of the committee, to get up and say he had no hand in the mutilation of the report.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, however, rose to his defence, and resented what he described as an unwarranted insinuation. Samuel Barker then asserted that the three Conservatives who had retired from the committee had waited twelve days to explain their position to the House. It was apparently intended to prevent them making an explanation. He ridiculed the enquiry conducted by four supporters of the Government, who had "appointed counsel to conduct a prosecution against their own friends."

E. M Macdonald (Pictou) described the Lennox motion as a catch motion, and characterized his procedure as "playing the baby act"

T W Crothers (West Elgin) told the House that Mr Geoffrion had read the resolution of Mr. Lennox to the committee.

Mr. Geoffrion interjected: "I did not read it," and Mr. Crothers replied: "According to the rules of the House, I must accept that statement, but I have stated what took place."

Mr. Crothers then turned his attention to the Premier, and asked him if the reports would be laid on the table, now that the alteration of the resolution had been exposed. He sat down to give the Premier an opportunity to reply, but Sir Wilfrid refused to answer.

"One of the most extraordinary incidents that has occurred in the history of Parliament," was R. L. Borden's description of the case. Mr. Geoffrion, he said, had placed himself in an unfortunate position, not conducive to the decency and dignity of Parliament. It would be well for him to resign the chairmanship of the committee.

Sir Wilfrid described Mr. Borden's speech as false heroics, and advised the mutinous Conservative members of the committee to return to it.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley laid on the table the papers for the development of the water power at the Long Sault Rapids, promised during the course of the long debate on the bill to incorporate the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Co. He also tabled a copy of the report of the engineers.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson said what they wanted was the original report of the Government engineers. Mr. Pugsley thought could be got.

The point at issue between H. D. Lumsden, C.E., and his subordinate engineers was further illustrated yesterday morning when the former chief engineer admitted once more that the question at issue is one of engineering differences of opinion rather than of bad faith on the part of the engineers.

R. C. Smith, K.C., counsel for the Transcontinental Commission, read opinion by Donald MacMaster, K.C., to the effect that rock found in ledges in masses of more than one cubic yard should be classed as solid rock when it had to be removed by blasting.

Mr. Lumsden said that if a contractor lost much in blasting it would not make the substance solid rock.

Mr. Smith next read an opinion from Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., to the effect that stones and boulders found in masses formed conglomerate and was more difficult to deal with than solid rock. Mr. Lumsden agreed that in such case it should be classed as solid rock. Mr. Nesbitt further expressed the view that solid rock in a commercial sense was material in mass which required blasting to be removed, but Mr. Lumsden declines to accept that definition.

FERRO BRUNO IS COMMITTED GOES TO TRIAL FOR STABBING

Evidence Heard in Case at This Morning's Session of the Police Court---Lasted Nearly Five Hours---Wounded Man Swears Italian Stabbed Him Three Times.

Evidence was taken this morning in the case of the stabbing affray, which took place on Friday last at the home of Roland Butcher, Bethune St.

The young man stabbed was the first to give evidence. He stated that he and his friend were going to Butcher's house to give him a bottle of liquor as his friend didn't wish to bring it home. His friend rapped at the door, but nobody responded. They waited for a few minutes and suddenly Butcher and Ferro Bruno ran out of the house and caught them. His friend kept Butcher from hitting him. In the meantime the Italian pulled him into the lane and stabbed him three times, twice in the right wrist and once in the back. Immediately after the stabbing the Italian escaped through the opening in the lane. The young man and his friend went to Dr. Leach's office and had the wounds dressed.

To Mr. Gordon, lawyer for the defendant, the young man stated that without any provocation the Italian stabbed him.

Dr. Leach stated that he dressed the wounds of the young man about half past twelve. There were three, each three quarters of an inch long and an eigth of an inch deep, exposing the bone. The wound in the back was of the same character as the wrist. He believed the wounds to be inflicted by the sharp edge of an instrument.

To Mr. Gordon the witness stated that he considered the young man quite sober.

The friend of the young man, the next witness, stated that they had several drinks before going home. The evidence given by the young man was similar to the evidence given by his friend. This witness swore that he didn't see the stabbing affray, but he heard the young man call for help.

Mr. Butcher's evidence was far from coinciding with that given by the informant and his friend. He gave evidence to the effect that he was struck when he came out of his house. He also said that the Italian remained in the house and he did not see him stab any one.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he saw the young man's friend staggering and the man himself had the symptoms of a "drunk."

After summing up the evidence Ferro Bruno was committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble.

Mr. and Mrs. Butcher will appear on Monday morning for keeping an improper house.

The session lasted from 11 o'clock till half-past two, during which time witness gave evidence.

WENT THROUGH THE ICE AND LOST A FINE TEAM

Fenelon Falls, March 16.—Yesterday afternoon Messrs. C. H. Davey and F. Alton, two young business men of Victoria Road, Ont., started to drive to this town across the ice of Cameron lake, about 14 miles from Victoria Road. The ice gave way, and the whole party, including the two men, cutter and team of horses, were submerged. The men were successful in getting to land, but one horse was drowned. The other horse, while rescued, died shortly after. The horses were a handsome pair of blacks, and their owner, Mr. Davey, valued them at four hundred and fifty dollars. The cutter and robe were saved.

NO CONCESSION BY CANADA.

Sydney Smith's remark that man and wife were like the blades of a pair of scissors—they might get very far apart at times, but woe to him that came between them—applies very aptly to the present position of parties in Canada in relation to the impending tariff war. The two great parties in Canada differ widely in matters of domestic policy—wrought mainly over matters of detail in regard to home politics, but the moment a foreign country menaces the interest of Canada, the two parties become one on the issue thus raised. The United States is swinging the maximum tariff of the Payne-Aldrich tariff club over the head of Canada with the object avowed or otherwise, of frightening Canada into making tariff concessions in favour of good neighbourly Uncle Sam, giving a quid without a quo. The Canadians do not recognize any responsibility from the present condition as created by the action of the United States. We are not responsible for the United States raising the tariff as it stood before the last revision in order to make the high tariff as it stood the minimum tariff. There is not justification in the plea that Canada discriminates against the United States in respect to the French treaty. That treaty was negotiated and concluded long before the Payne-Aldrich bill was passed We make similar concessions as involved in this treaty with twelve other countries because they are countries that come within the provisions of the favoured nation arrangement with Great Britain. If the United States had been in that class they would have come in with the others. They have, therefore, no cause of complaint upon that score. Canada feels and maintains that it is not responsible for the present situation. The United States has created it and it would be absurd generosity, not to say folly, or worse, to make expensive concessions to escape the penalty that the United States has, not perhaps without design, placed itself in a position to impose It is a little too much to ask Canada to regard with complacency or acceptance that the United States should create the crime and impose the penalty. By no reasonable interpretation of the facts can the United States claim that Canada has proposed or practised discrimination against the United States by virtue of adherence to the French treaty.

It is within the power and right of the United States to impose the maximum tariff penalty upon Canada. If Canada cannot avoid this penalty without making humiliating and impolitic concessions she is prepared to take the consequences. We can afford to regard the consequences without dismay. Of course the result of a tariff war such as our neighbours see into be precipitating would seriously, but not disastrously, disturb a trade exchange of about 240 million dollars a year. Whatever injury it would involve, the injury to the United States would be the greater for their sales to Canada are over 220 millions per year, while Canada only exports about 113 millions to the United States; and, while Canadian exports would be subjected to 25 per cent. additional duty the duty on imports from the United States into Canada would be automatically advanced by 33 1-3 per cent. The clause relating to the surtax seems to have been inserted in the Canadian tariff bill with regard to the present situation. It provides that "articles which are the produce of manufacture of any country which treats imports from Canada less favourably than those from other countries may be subject to a surtax over and above the duties specified in schedule A, such surtax to be in every case one-third of the duties specified.

Such retaliation, while it may not relieve Canada from the results of loss of trade upon fair terms with our neighbours, will impel us to seek new markets or further extend trade with the Motherland as we did when United States tariff hostility led to the British preference with very gratifying results. Another result of the preference was that Germany penalized Canada by imposing her maximum tariff on Canadian imports; a further result was Canada's surtax on German goods. Germany's trade with Canada fell off to so alarming an extent that Germany came as a suppliant to Canada praying that the surtax be removed in consideration of the concession of the minimum tariff in Canadian goods. If the United States maximum tariff club is used in Canada, the answer would assuredly be a 33 1-3 per cent surtax, plus no doubt an export duty, or its equivalent, or pulp wood, and we might reasonably anticipate that history would repeat itself and the United States, in imitation of Germany, seek the removal of the situation by restoring Canada to the minimum tariff schedule. To the surtax would, as intimated, doubtless be added, the prohibition of the export of Canadian pulp wood in an unmanufactured condition. The United States would, in that event, be compelled to enter upon the exhaustion of her already depleted pulp wood areas or come to Canada or go to the other side of the world for its pulp and paper.

A tariff war would be a little hard on Canada in the beginning; but it would throw her upon her own resources and in the end do her good. Canada is a country of great natural resources in minerals (with a practical monopoly in nickel), timber, fisheries and productive soil area. Canada has enterprise and courage. She has attacked and solved great problems; she has done more in overcoming geographical traffic disadvantage, by providing transcontinental routes and waterways than any other country in the world, with similar financial capabilities. And, especially, if the spur of necessity is applied, she will be capable of expanding in other directions, developing her manufacturing capacities, unearthing her minerals, peopling and bringing under cultivation our wilds, opening new trade routes and finding or making a way to that prosperity and growth which realization upon our resources and opportunities will create. Canada is now on the highway to success. Capital and population are flowing in; we are every day bulking more largely in the world's regard. We have every reason to be proud of our country and that pride forbids us to truckle or humiliate ourselves or sell our birthright for a mess of minimum tariff pottage. A tariff war will be, of course, disastrous, and regrettable; but if it is forced upon us we shall have to bravely accept the consequences and fight as best we may in self defence; and we have the weapons and the courage to use them. Every Canadian irrespective of party, will regret with scorn the idea of humiliating surrender and all will unite in taking a firm stand upon our rights and in the interest of our self respect.

IN A FALSE POSITION.

Just why there should have been an all-night session of the House of Commons over the bill of the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Company, is not quite apparent On the face of it, the unfortunate incident seems to have resulted from pigheadedness on both sides of the House.

The bill was a private one. There was no need for and there should never have been any mere party dispute over it.

In the first place, the Opposition might well have accepted the suggestion of Hon. Mr. Fielding, who was leading the House, that the non-contentious clauses of the measure be passed deferring those over which there was dispute to some later time.

In the second place, the discussion revealed that, despite the fact that the bill had been carefully revised by the PrivateBills committee, there were still doubtful features in connection with it, and there was considerable reason in the contention that the whole measure should be left over until these doubtful features had been cleared up.

But, instead of coming together, both sides assumed an unreasonable attitude — the Opposition wanted to boss the whole show, the Government refused to be bossed; the minority wanted to rule, the majority refused to be ruled. And for the obstinacy the House as a whole punished itself by a twenty-four hour session. The deadlock was broke finally by an arrangement that might well have been made before the all-night wrangle commenced.

What The Free Press regards as most unfortunate is the impression that has been created in the country that the Government and the Liberal party are backing this proposal to give a charter to a transmission company which there is good reason to believe intends to operate in conjunction with an American company that desires to dam the St. Lawrence at the Long Sault. That is an entirely wrong impression.

The damming of the St. Lawrence involves a very important point of public policy, upon which neither the Government nor the Liberal party has yet come to a decision and will not until there is much more information available.

The majority of Liberals will take second place to nobody in their desire to conserve the great water powers of Canada. For that reason, they will resent the false position in which they have been placed by Parliamentary tacticians who, however, unwittingly, seem to have played the game of men who are endeavouring to secure a monopoly of the water powers of the country.

These tactics, bred of sheer obstinacy, made the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Company bill a party question, when there should have been no party politics in it at all; they led a number of Liberal members, out of mere party loyalty, to stand up and vote for a bill about the advisability of passing which they were just as doubtful as Mr. Emmerson and other Liberals who voted against it.

The effect on the outside public may be gathered from the communication from a reader which we print in another column to-day. That reader has got a false impression of the attitude of the Liberal party in regard to water powers and there is reason to believe that the false impression is general.

Even so well informed a Liberal newspaper as the Toronto Star helps to spread this idea when it says in its report:

"The Liberals are trying to pass the St. Lawrence Power Company bill without putting the proposed plans for the damming of the St. Lawrence on the table. The Conservatives are bound that they will get those plans or make the House sit for the balance of the week.

Who wouldn't be mad to have a fool Opposition keep you out of bed just because they've got a crank idea that the Government is sacrificing something by allowing a bunch of Yankee capitalists to build a dam across the St Lawrence at Cornwall, just above the Long Sault Rapids and generate power?

Of course there was nothing in the bill permitting the construction of the dam, and neither the Government nor the Liberals in voting to give a charter for power transmission committed themselves to the granting of permission to build such a dam or develop any water power.

We repeat, the Liberal party has been placed in a false position.

PRINCE RUPERT A MINING CENTRE

There are few recorded instances of a railroad grade ever cutting a mineral vein of any value. So far the main line of the G. T. P. is no exception. but the district which it traverses is every day looming up into greater and greater importance. The coast formation has never proved very prolific of mineral wealth, but 100 miles from Prince Rupert the line enters a new field. A belt of mineralized rock, starting at the Portland Canal, running through the headwaters of the Naas, crosses the Skeena river about the Kitselas Canyon and extends into the interior through the hills at Hazelton and the Babines and Hudson Bay mountains. The extent of the zone is unknown. Prospectors have only touched it in spots, but these spots have shown wealth incalculable. The immense area of this ore body can only be appreciated by one who has travelled over it. The future of the Portland Canal is an assured thing now. The same is known to exist on the Naas, while late last fall discoveries were made in the vicinity of the Kitselas Canyon, which, when developed and explored farther, will no doubt show very considerable ore body. These discoveries were made too late in the season to prove much more than that ore of good quality existed in the district, covering considerable area. Silver, lead and copper are the chief minerals found: but all ores in the district carry good values, roughly speaking, of from $1 to $40. Some even go much higher than this.

At Hazelton, 180 miles from Prince Rupert, and on the line of the G. T. P. railway, the existence of a magnificent ore has been demonstrated by the strike on the Silver Cup, a property on Nine-Mile mountain. Ninety-six inches of solid steel galena ore is surely sufficient assurance that Nine-Mile at least will be productive of much wealth. Work on the Dibble group, owned by James Cronin, of Spokane, has progressed most favourably all winter. A tunnel of 325 feet has revealed a cross vein, which had itself attained 3 feet across. This tunnel was being run to tap the main vein, which was expected to be reached at 400 feet. The Law property has also surpassed early expectations.

On Hudson Bay mountain, which lies just across the Bulkley Valley from the Babine range, prospects have been struck and developed to the shipping point. The Lakeview group, overlooks the railroad, and only six miles distant from it, shows grey copper and free gold. This likewise is a silver-lead property. Five tons of galena ore were shipped from the Coronado group, which gave smelter returns of $100 per ton in gold, silver and lead. This was five years ago. With the shipping facilities the railroad will give, it is estimated by conservative mining men that much of this ore can be landed at the smelter at Prince Rupert for a cost of $4 per ton, approximately. It only requires the completion of the railroad to throw open a mining country of immense posibilities.—Prince Rupert Optimist.

FOR THE PUBLIC

New Formula Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Hoarseness in Five Hours.

Much is being done in these days to stop the ravages of consumption, but probably nothing has been so effective as teaching the public how to break up a cold and cure coughs, bronchitis, tonsilitis, etc., with simple home-mixed medicine. A laxative cough syrup, free from whiskey is the prime need. A cough indicates inflammation and congestion and these in turn are due to an excess of waste and poisons in the system. A tonic laxative cough syrup rids the system of congestion, while relieving the painful coughing. Get the following and mix at home: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less according to age. Cut this out and save it for some friend.

HOW THINGS ARE DONE IN ENGLAND

Eminent Scientists, the Leading Men of the Land, Take Deep Interest in the World's Great Manufactories of Food Products.

During the last 12 months there have been many interesting receptions at the model OXO factory in Southwark, London, but the one held on Wednesday by the Rt. Hon. Sir Henry E. Roscoe, and the Directors of the LEMCO and OXO Company was quite unique. Amongst a most distinguished gathering of eminent scientists, many of whom are Fellows of the Royal Society, were Sir Wm. Crookes, Sir Edward Thorpe, Sir Wm. Tilden, Professor Raphael Meldola, Dr. Hugo Muller, Dr. J. Emerson Reynolds, Dr. S. W. J. Smith, Dr. J. T. Hewitt, Dr. J. C. Cain, Dr. W. R. Cooper, M.A., Mr. Arthur Wm. Crossley, Mr. Martin Onslow Forster, Mr. C. E. Groves, Mr. Charles A. Keane, Mr. A. Greenaway, and many others.

Sir Henry Roscoe, assisted by Mr. Robert L. Gunther (vice-chairman of the Company) and Mr. Maurice Glyn, (a director), conducted the guests through the factory. The process of blending the nourishing fibrine of beef with the stimulating extract of beef to make OXO was fully explained, as also were the processes connected with the manufacturing of LEMCO, which is well known as the most highly concentrated form of beef in the world.

The processes of preparation in the over-sea factories and the vast cattle ranches owned by the Company were illustrated by cinematograph and explained by one of the managers. One interesting point was the striking improvement in the weight of the cattle through the introduction of British pedigree stock, and another their remarkable healthiness, due to the open-air life they lead. The Company's herds consume more than three million tons of grass per annum.

Sir Wm. Crookes, in proposing a vote of thanks to Sir Henry Roscoe and the directors, remarked that the factory impressed him very favourably indeed.

He had examined the different processes with profound interest and he was pleased to see the important part chemistry played in the scientific organization of this huge concern—not only in the laboratories here in London, where every batch of concentrated beef sent from the Argentine factories was carefully analysed and tested, but also on a much larger scale in the South American factories themselves.

Sir William Tilden, in seconding the resolution, expressed the hearty concurrence of himself and his fellow scientists in all that Sir Wm. Crookes had said. It was needless to wish the LEMCO and OXO Company success, for that success was already theirs and had been for many years past. Based, as it was, on the best scientific lines, it was bound to continue the commercial success which it had had from its very inception.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"Yes; I'm sure you would protect me from his importunities at any hazard," mocked Shirley, turning and leaning against the rail so that she looked along the deck beyond her brother's stalwart shoulders.

"Don't be silly," observed Dick, whose eyes were upon a trim yacht that was steaming slowly beneath them.

"I shan't, but please don't be violent! Do not murder the poor man, Dickie, dear"—and she took hold of his arm entreatingly—"for there he is—as tall and mysterious as ever—and me found guilty with a few of his orchids pinned to my jacket!"

"This is good fortune, indeed," said Armitage a moment later when they had shaken hands. "I finished my errand at Geneva unexpectedly, and here I am."

He smiled at the feebleness of his explanation and joined in their passing comment on the life of the harbor. He was not so dull but that he felt Dick Claiborne's resentment of his presence on board. He knew perfectly well that his acquaintance with the Claibornes was too slight to be severely strained, particularly where a fellow of Dick Claiborne's high spirit was concerned. He talked with them a few minutes longer, then took himself off, and they saw little of him the rest of the day.

Armitage did not share their distinction of a seat at the captain's table, and Dick found him late at night in the smoking saloon with pipe and book. Armitage nodded and asked him to sit down.

"You are a sailor as well as a soldier, captain. You are fortunate. I always sit up the first night to make sure the enemy doesn't lay hold of me in my sleep."

He tossed his book aside, had brandy and soda brought and offered Claiborne a cigar.

"This is not the most fortunate season for crossing. I am sure to fall tomorrow. My father and mother hate the sea particularly and have retired for three days. My sister is the only one of us who is perfectly immune."

Dick Claiborne was a good deal amused at finding himself sitting beside Armitage—enjoying, indeed, his fellow traveler's hospitality, but Armitage, he was forced to admit, bore all the marks of a gentleman. He had, to be sure, followed Shirley about, but even the young man's manner in this was hardly a matter at which he could cavil. And there was something altogether likable in Armitage. His very composure was attractive to Claiborne, and the bold lines of his figure were not wasted on the young officer.

Armitage was thinking rapidly of something he had suddenly resolved to say to Captain Claiborne. He knew that the Claibornes were a family of distinction. The father was an American diplomat and lawyer of wide reputation. The family stood for the best of which America is capable, and they were homeward bound to the American capital, where their social position and the father's fame made them conspicuous.

Armitage put down his cigar and bent toward Claiborne, speaking with quiet directness.

"Captain Claiborne, I was introduced to you at Geneva by Mr. Singleton. You may have observed me several times previously at Venice, Rome, Florence, Paris, Berlin. I certainly saw you. I shall not deny that I intentionally followed you, nor"—John Armitage smiled, then grew grave again—"can I make any adequate apology for doing so."

"Nor can I make any adequate apology."

Claiborne looked at Armitage wonderingly. The man's attitude and tone were wholly serious and compelled respect. Claiborne nodded and threw away his cigar that he might give his whole attention to what Armitage might have to say.

"A man does not like to have his sister forming the acquaintance of persons who are not properly vouched for. Except for Singleton you know nothing of me, and Singleton knows very little of me indeed."

Claiborne nodded. He felt the color creeping into his cheeks consciously as Armitage touched upon this matter.

"I speak to you as I do because it is your right to know who and what I am, for I am not on the King Edward by accident, but by intention, and I am going to Washington because your sister lives there."

Claiborne smiled in spite of himself.

"But, my dear sir, this is most extraordinary! I don't know that I care to hear any more. By listening I seem to be encouraging you to follow us. It's altogether too unusual. It's almost preposterous."

And Dick Claiborne frowned severely, but Armitage still met his eyes gravely.

"It's only decent for a man to give his references when it's natural for them to be required. I was educated at Trinity college, Toronto. I spent a year at the Harvard law school. And I am not a beggar utterly. I own a ranch in Montana that actually pays me! A thousand cattle at this hour, when land in Nebraska. At the Bronx Loan and Trust company in New York I have securities to a considerable amount—I am perfectly willing that any one who is at all interested should inquire of the trust company officers as to my standing with them. If I were asked to state my occupation, I should have to say that I am a cattle herder—what you call a cowboy. I can make my living in the practice of the business almost anywhere from New Mexico north to the Canadian line. I flatter myself that I am pretty good at it," and John Armitage smiled and took a cigarette from a box on the table and lighted it.

Dick Claiborne was greatly interested in what Armitage had said, and he struggled between an inclination to encourage further confidence and a feeling that he should, for Shirley's sake, make it clear to this young stranger that it was of no consequence to any member of the Claiborne family who he was or what might be the extent of his lands or the unimpeachable character of his investments. But it was not so easy to turn aside a fellow who was so big of frame and apparently so sane and so steady of purpose as this Armitage. And there was, too, the further consideration that while Armitage was volunteering gratuitous information and assuming an interest in his affairs by the Claibornes that was wholly unjustified, there was also the other side of the matter: that his explanations proceeded from motives of delicacy that were praiseworthy. Dick was puzzled and piqued besides to find that his resources as a big protecting brother were so soon exhausted. What Armitage was asking was the right to seek his sister Shirley's hand in marriage, and the thing was absurd. Moreover, who was John Armitage?

The question startled Claiborne into a realization of the fact that Armitage had volunteered considerable information without at all answering this question. Dick Claiborne was a human being and curious.

"Pardon me," he asked, "but are you an Englishman?"

"I am not," answered Armitage. "I have been so long in America that I feel as much at home there as anywhere—but I am neither English nor American by birth. I am, on the other hand"—

He hesitated for the barest second, and Claiborne was sensible of an intensification of interest. Now at last there was to be a revelation that amounted to something.

"On the other hand," Armitage repeated, "I was born at Fontainebleau, where my parents lived for only a few months, but I do not consider that that fact makes me a Frenchman. My mother is dead. My father died—very recently. I have been in America enough to know that a foreigner is often under suspicion—particularly if he have a title. My distinction is that I am a foreigner without one!" John Armitage laughed.

"It is, indeed, a real merit," declared Dick, who felt something was expected of him. In spite of himself he found much to like in John Armitage. He particularly despised sham and pretense, and he had been won by the evident sincerity of Armitage's wish to appear well in his eyes.

"And now," said Armitage, "I assure you that I am not in the habit of talking so much about myself—and if you will overlook this offense I promise not to bore you again."

"I have been interested," remarked Dick. "And," he added, "I cannot do less than thank you, Mr. Armitage."

Armitage began talking of the American army—its strength and weaknesses—with an intimate knowledge that greatly surprised and interested the young officer, and when they separated presently it was with a curious mixture of liking and mystification that Claiborne reviewed their talk.

German Invasion Begins.

Berlin, March 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Men familiar with the trade practices of the Dominion, especially in the rapidly developing communities of the middle and far west, are being engaged at fancy salaries and will be despatched to the field of operations equipped to conduct one of the most active business campaigns Germany ever waged on foreign soil.

The management of an aniline dye syndicate, Germany's most important chemical trade, says the new tariff conditions justify the hope for a heavy increase in the sale of the syndicate's products in Canada.

Herr Graumonn, proprietor of an important millinery establishment, says: "The settlement of the tariff war will certainly be of immense benefit to the entire German textile trade."

A leading manufacturer of overcoats and suits says: "Our branch has for a long time been magnificently organized in Canada. Our travelers cover the entire Dominion. Our exports are sure to increase extraordinarily henceforth, as the country's consuming power is enormous."

School Boy Burglars.

St. Mary's Ont., March 17.—Three St. Mary's school boys of respectable parentage, are charged with breaking into the stores of Parsons' Fair, and the St. Mary's Hardware Store, in January, and taking guns, traps, cutlery, and other things. One of the boys is in Stratford jail, the other two are out on bail of $500 each.

The lads, all under 16, will come before Magistrate Stanley to-day.

Two of the boys ran away from school last week and were caught at Breslau. One of the trio says they did their burglarizing in order to equip themselves for a Cobalt expedition.

Among the articles taken from Parson's Fair was a quantity of wool in the form of yarn.

"Well," the boys said, "we expected to walk a lot, and we wanted some yarn to darn the heels of our socks."

Pastor's Wife Seeks Divorce.

New York, March 17.—The five elders of the Church of the Redeemer, a fashionable Presbyterian Church in Paterson, N.J., are hunting for their pastor, Rev. B. Canfield Jones, who it was learned yesterday has been missing for five weeks. It is also reported that his wife has filed suit for divorce in Montreal, Que., where his parents live.

STORY NOT BELIEVED

Windsor, March 17.—Captain McDonnel, Chief of Detectives, declared this morning that there are a number of discrepancies in the story told by Arthur J. Best, the young Comber, (Ont.) tinsmith, whose bride of a month is believed to have been the woman who drowned off a cake of ice off the foot of Woodward Ave. early on Sunday morning.

The police have discovered that although Best arrived in Windsor on the ferry at 12.40 o'clock Sunday morning, it was 4 o'clock in the morning before he went to the British American Hotel and engaged a room.

When Best entered the hotel at 4 o'clock in the morning he told the clerk he saw a woman floating down the river on a cake of ice and yelling for help. To the police he denied that he recognized the voice as his wife's.

Water Bad for Eczema

MANY SUFFER DURING COLD WEATHER—GREAT RESULTS FROM

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Winter is dreaded by people who are subject to such skin affections as eczema and salt rheum and by others whose skin is easily irritated by cold and dampness.

There is nothing so bad for eczema as water and exposure to cold piercing winds. And there is nothing so effective in curing eczema as Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This has been proven in many thousands of cases such as the following:

Mrs. George A. Brewster, Millwood, Man., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for a skin trouble which used to return again and again and caused me much misery on account of the terrible itching. The Ointment entirely cured this disease and I have never since been troubled with it."

Mrs. John J. Delory, Linwood, Antigonish Co., N.S., writes: "I want to say that Dr. Chase's Ointment has proven a great blessing to me. I had salt rheum on one hand and could not get it healed up. The itching was most distressing at times. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured me completely and I gladly recommend it to every sufferer."

In scores of ways Dr. Chase's Ointment is of greatest value in the home, in curing pimples, blackheads, chapped skin, chilblains, frost bites, sores and burns and every form of itching skin disease.

60 cents a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's recipes.

MINISTER AND ZAM-BUK

Cured Him of a Bad Sore Which Defied All Other Remedies for Two Years.

Rev. Charles E. Stafford, of Bridgeburg, Ont., says: "I had been much troubled for over two years with a sore on my left cheek. I tried all kinds of salves and lotions, but nothing I procured seemed to have the least bit of effect towards healing the sore. Hearing of Zam-Buk, I decided to give it a trial, and see if it would bring about a cure, as so many other things had failed. I purchased a supply, and commenced with the treatment. After several applications, to my great joy, Zam-Buk has effected what for two years I tried in vain to bring about—a complete cure."

Case after case could be quoted, in which, as in the above instance, Zam-Buk has worked cures when everything else tried had failed. There is a reason for this. Away back in the days of Roman gladiators, secret balms were used for the healing of cuts and injuries sustained in the arena and in battle. Then came a period during which external balms were neglected, followed by a period in which all the salves and embrocations had as their base animal fats and oils. Zam-Buk marks a new epoch. It is absolutely devoid of all animal fats, all mineral colouring matters, and is composed entirely of rich medicinal herbal extracts.

Skin diseases, such as eczema, ringworm, salt rheum, and prairie itch, are speedily overcome by it. For piles it is fine—easing the pain and inflammation, and hastening a cure. It also cures burns, scalds, cuts, ulcers, children's sores and eruptions, blood-poisoning, scratches, old wounds, varicose ulcers, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free, for price, from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Six Wreck Survivors Went Through Terrible Experience

Men Were Drenched With Spray Which Froze Until They Resembled Icebergs---Were Afloat in Cook Inlet in a Small Boat, But Finally are Saved to Tell Their Adventures.

Special to The Examiner.

Seward, Alaska, March 16. — Exhausted by almost incredible hardships and bearing the marks of weeks of battling with icy gales, four of six men who on Jan. 7 left the wreck of the Farallon in Cook Inlet and in a small row boat undertook to procure relief for their companions, were brought into Seward last night on the revenue cutter Tahoma, which for almost three weeks has been searching for them. The Tahoma brings word that the two other men are safe.

The four on the Tahoma are Gus Swanson, second mate of the Farallon; Charles Peterson, seaman; Otto Nelson, seaman; Albert Bailey, passenger, en route to Kodiak. The two others are Charles Bourne of Afognak, who is now at Kafliar Bay, and Capt. Wedding of the launch Sea Wolf, who was left at Kaguak.

TERRIBLE HARDSHIPS

From the men brought to Seward, a story of suffering and dogged courage almost beyond belief is gathered. The party of six left the wreck Jan. 7 with a light wind blowing north by northwest. This increased during the night to a gale that compelled the men to camp at Ursus Cove until morning.

At daylight in a heavy snowstorm they left Ursus Cove only to have the wind suddenly veer around to the northwest and become a gale.

At every interval that could be snatched from the oars the men were compelled to keep bailing out the boat. With the heavy sea the craft was fast becoming a mass of ice and sinking under the weight.

HUMAN ICEBERGS

All six men were drenched with the spray, which froze, until they resembled icebergs. At sundown the boat reached a little shelter off Cape Douglas, but at the same time ran into a heavy pack of ice which soon had the boat in a sinking condition.

They managed to reach dry land at Cape Douglas, but not until the boat had sunk with nearly all the provisions. The water was shallow and they reached the shore ice. It had grown dark with a howling gale. At daylight the party managed to reach the cliff above the beach and a makeshift tent was rigged up and a fire kindled. All were terribly frostbitten. The wind increased to a blizzard, and huddled together, lying flat on the frozen ground, they passed the next 38 hours. When the wind moderated they set off down the beach and only two miles from where they had spent the night, found the camp of Michael Pablow, a trapper, with a schooner hauled on the beach.

DIVIDED PROVISIONS

No amount of persuasion would induce Pablow to attempt crossing the Straits. Two hundred dollars was offered him, but he declared the attempt meant certain death.

Pablow deprived himself of provisions to share with the men up to the time he left them. The party remained at the trapper's camp, stormbound, until Feb. 17, when all started out once more.

Bailey led the way to Kaguak along the beach, with Swanson, Peterson, Bourne and Wedding, who were unable to walk, following in a native bidarka. At Kaguak the party found an old skiff and in this they made their way to Kafliar Bay, living since leaving the old trapper's camp on whale oil and dried fish flour. At Kafliar Bay they killed seal, which was the first fresh meat they had had since leaving the Farallon.

Here they decided to make an attempt to cross the Straits and on Feb. 22, in a 16-foot boat, they started. Bourne refused to take the risk, and was left with the natives. The party just managed to make land at Cape Ugat, their boat being wrecked in a fierce gale.

Near where they made camp a native bidarka was found, and they made their way in this to Uganek village. There they remained storm-bound until March 5, when, in a dory with two natives they made Afognak, where the Tahoma found them.

Board Of Education And Friends Enjoyed Dinner Given By Pupils

The members of the Board of Education, with a number of friends, enjoyed a most sumptuous repast at the quarters of the Domestic Science Department in the old Collegiate building this week and are now more assured than ever of the benefits to be derived from the study of such a course. The girls of the first form of the Collegiate prepared the mid-day meal, under the direction of Miss Steinhoff, and that they have acquired considerable ability in the preparation of a full-course dinner was amply evidenced by the excellence of the meals provided on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The preparation of the food, and the service given by the young ladies, reflect great credit on the teacher, Miss Steinhoff. Many were the complimentary remarks made in reference to the meal. Six gentlemen attended each day, nine others, in addition to the members of the board, having been invited. These included Mr. T. F. Matthews, Principal Walker, of the Normal School, City Treasurer F. Adams, Mayor Morrow, Mr. D. O'Connell, Rev. Father McColl, His Honour Judge Huycke and Dr. McPherson.

At the conclusion of the meals neat speeches of a complimentary nature were made by those present.

American Girls Should Not Want To Marry Men With Worn Out Titles

Spokane, aWsh., March 15.—"I fully agree with Lady Laurier, wife of the Premier of Canada, that 'American girls should wed here. American girls possessing proper pride should not want to marry scions of worn out tottering monarchies."

Mrs. May Arkwright Hutton, of Spokane, president of the Equal Political League, of Washington, and wife of Levi W. Hutton, a millionaire mining man, says this in a signed statement in The Spokesman-Review. She adds:

"American girls who marry foreign titles are usually those whose ancestors came from the so-called common people of Europe, who have felt the iron heel of oppression. This class emigrating to America and amassing the wherewith to purchase such luxuries (?) as foreign titles, perhaps possess an innate desire to rule where they once served. This is the most charitable construction that self-respecting women can put upon the folly of "buying titles" as Lady Laurier puts it, "like buying a piece of goods in open market." Too much good American cash has already gone into the coffers of profligate nobility.

"I agree with Lady Laurier that the English suffragette movement is not womanly, and I earnestly hope that such militant tactics will never gain ascendancy over sane methods in America. Such measures are an insult to American manhood. American women will be given the franchise by a class of voters who realize that it is to their interest to do so.

"The honourable lady says that it is unheard of for women to compete with masculine superiority. She doubtless reasons according to her lights. Being of English extraction I can readily understand her deductions. The Church of England has been for centuries woman's mentor, teaching man's superiority and woman's subjection to his will. I also possessed a Holland-Dutch grandmother. I thank God daily for the heritage of common sense and energy bequeathed me from that source. I was enabled to steer my ship from the reefs and shoals of prejudice and superstition.

"Lady Laurier informs us that she is not a mother, but is a good wife, devoted to her husband as God ordained and predestined her to be. She feels that she is competent to speak as she does on woman's suffrage. The lady further states that there are only a few suffragettes in Canada, and those she saw in parade once were "ugly frights." Fie, fie lady, to thus herald abroad your nation's misfortune. The term "ugly frights" can not possibly apply to the younger set of American women in the suffrage ranks, who are skilled in the art of enhancing their natural beauty with the adornment of fine raiment. English women should learn valuable lessons from their American sisters as to the manner of wearing their clothes."

"CHRIST IN YOU THE HOPE OF GLORY"

Subject of Instructive Discourse by Rev. Mr. Barker of Bobcaygeon.

Rev. Mr. Barber, of Bobcaygeon, was the special preacher at the Wednesday evening Lenten service at St. John's church last night and he delivered a very able sermon from the words found in the first chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Colossians "Christ in you the hope of Glory."

Before beginning his discourse Mr. Barker said he was pleased to be present and took the opportunity of thanking, on behalf of St. John's church, Dunslow, the Girls' Guild of the local church for their beautiful gift of communion linen.

Referring to the words of his text the speaker remarked, what marvellous and yet mysterious words they were. He outlined the teachings the apostle wished to convey in certain groups of verses in the first chapter of this epistle. The apostle taught that it was not always wise to choose the less difficult way when the opportunity was given to decide on one of two ways. The difficult one was the more profitable. Continuing the speaker said in part that Christianity was a definite force in the world. The church was only strong as the individual members were. Christianity was a definite force in the world. The church was only strong as the individual members were. Christianity aimed at the regeneration of the will and at the curing of sin. Sentiment was the very foundation of the principles of those who would hope to be saints of God. It has been said that the gospel was the work of the moralist, but the reverent preacher did not believe so. It was marked by the feeling of the sentimentalist. "What we are is more important than what we do," he said. "If we fight and conquer the flesh and overcome trials and tribulations we know that it is Christ within us. Is Christ in you and what effect has it on your character? We must aim at perfection in Christ and that is possible to the meanest of His followers. In this season of Lent we should come back to the basic principles of our lives and begin as servants of Christ that His church might grow and develop."

NIP IT IN THE BUD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-up cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundancy.

Herpicide is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.

RECORD NUMBER OF ENGLISH SERVANTS IS COMING OVER

British Domestics Like the Labour Conditions Over Here — Are Better Treated.

HAVE MORE FREEDOM

Toronto, March 15.—During a discussion in the Ontario Legislature on farm labor and domestic service problems, the Premier, Sir James Whitney, intimated that the Government were considering a proposal to advance the whole or a portion of the passage money of immigrants coming to Ontario as domestic servants. —Reuter.

Canadian emigration authorities in London stated today that this year will see a record number of British women embark for domestic service in Canada.

The season is opening, and emigration societies and passage brokers are all very busy interviewing applicants for steamship and train tickets.

"English housewives," said one official, "even in their most unhappy moments with the servant, have no idea what the servant problem is. The most incompetent 'general' in the world would be snapped up at ten or fifteen shillings a week in the west of Canada, and the farmers' wives would compete for her brilliant services!"

"At present we are telling London girls that servants' wages are from £24 a year for the least skilled work in Eastern Canada, to £50 for ordinary housework in the West.

"But in single instances among the well-to-do farmers of the Northwest the pay for a really good girl may reach £100 and more a year. Then she is treated as a companion and an equal, and she has liberty to play the piano, read the family's books, and go out as much as she likes.

One of the Family.

"She is one of the guests at all dances to which the family goes, and sits at the same table as the rest for meals at home.

"London girls who went out one or two years ago have saved enough to pay their second-class passage home for a holiday. They all return to Canada. They dislike English conditions of labour afterwards as much as they dislike the wages—and the climate.

"Other girls pay their fares from one town to another in Canada and then United States out of their savings. This is a common practice—having escaped from town fetters in England, they go to the other extreme and get the travel fever.

"Girls who have been nurses, teachers, typists, and so on, in Great Britain take situations as waitresses or servants in each town they stop at for a few weeks, and are away again when they have saved a few pounds.

"Another aggravation of servant scarcity in Canada is the bachelor. No sooner has a girl come into a small Western town than the young men are waiting upon her with proposals of marriage.

"Out of seventeen London girls who were sent recently to a Manitoban town, in a party, as domestic servants, thirteen were engaged in a week or two—and engagements in Canada are customarily short.

"A girl who had been specially sent the five thousand-mile journey to Alberta as a waitress, at £3 a week, met one of the medical men of the place and was married two days after her arrival. She came home to her astounded parents for the honeymoon, with her husband.

"If we send girls to Ontario for domestic service, they are often immediately attracted by the 35s. a week offered in textile factories, and if they prefer to remain at housework they move West. There, though the work is hard, the freedom and the (to the girl's mind) fabulous wages, make her think she is in a domestic wonderland."

The British Women's Emigration Association, in the Imperial Institute, is sending out a large number of girls shortly.

SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR

A Simple Treatment That Will Make It Truly Fascinating—Wm. Madill Guarantees It.

Nowadays every up-to-date woman has radiant hair.

What a foolish creature a woman would be if she lost the opportunity to add to her attractions.

Yet in Canada to-day there are hundreds of thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair who do not make any attempt to improve it.

In Paris most women have beautiful hair, and in Canada all women who use Parisian Sage have lustrous and luxuriant hair.

And any woman reader of the Examiner can have attractive and lustrous hair in a few days' time by using this great hair rejuvenator, Parisian Sage.

Wm. Madill sells a large bottle for 50 cents and he guarantees it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is an ideal hair tonic not sticky or greasy.

SPREE COST $2

Hugh Gibbs Was Assessed That Amount and is Placed on the Blacklist

As a result of a little "spree" Hugh Gibbs pleaded guilty at the Police Court this morning to the charge of having assaulted Abraham Crouter at the former's house last evening.

It appears Mr. Gibbs returned home after every one had retired for the night and proceeded to raise a disturbance. Abraham Crouter interfered and as a result was assaulted.

The Magistrate imposed a fine of two dollars to be paid within ten days and had him put on the black list.

Fined $12.60.

For the past year Thomas Henry had lived up to the regulations of the black list, but the "root of all evil" at last got a hold on him and Thomas, consequently pleaded guilty this morning to being drunk on Tuesday last.

Henry told the Magistrate that he procured the liquor from a lady in a liquor store. A fine of $12.60 was imposed and in default of payment, 15 days in jail.

CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. William Ball, Bracebridge, Ont. writes: "My three boys had whooping cough and we could get nothing to help them until we used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It arrested the coughs at once and they kept on improving until they were cured at the cost of one dollar. This was not a large bill for so dangerous and distressing an ailment."

FORMER CURATE OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Entertained Royalty at His Rectory in London, England.

The London (Eng.) Daily Telegraph has the following to say regarding the visit of the Princess of Wales to the church and rectory of a former curate of St. John's Church, Peterborough:

"The Princess of Wales, who takes a deep interest in the architectural and sculptural details, and the historical associations of the city church es, paid a private visit to St. Andrew by-Wardrobe, Queen Victoria street, and spent an hour in the church and the rectory, being received by the Rector, (the Rev. P. Clementi-Smith) and Mrs. Clementi-Smith. The edifice, which is one of Wren's masterpieces, and has been sympathetically restored within the last twenty years, and beautified by the addition of eight very finely painted glass windows, was inspected by the Princess, who expressed pleasure with her visit. Her Royal Highness also looked over the old church plate and registers, the latter containing the records of five centuries."

BUNCH OF SHAMROCKS

Mrs. J. J. Shadgett Has Plant That Came From Emerald Isle.

The Examiner is indebted to Mrs. J. J. Shadgett, 466 George St., this morning for a beautiful bunch of Shamrocks which were sent in. The plant from which these were taken was sent out from Ireland four years ago and Mrs. Shadgett has kept and nurtured it every since. It is now a fine and very pretty plant.

BRIEF SKETCH OF IRELAND'S

March 17th is the day set ap the calendar as commemorative life and work of St. Patrick, th apostle of Ireland. People hav found rash enough to hint th such man ever existed and th honour of accomplishing the task of evangelization should be fully ascribed to Palladius, wh sent by Pope Celestine, as Bis Ireland in 431. But there were Patricks, the first, was undoub Palladius, who assumed the na Patrick or Patricius, but whos sion was a short and not a successful one, a second, th apostle whom all Irishmen rig honour, who followed in the st Palladius, and succeeded, if not tirely evangelizing the country tainly in doing marvellous wo that direction, and a third, wh cording to certain Irish writer the head of St. Patrick's comm or, according to others, St. Pa tutor.

We shall not attempt to ente the disputes and doubts enge by the mixing up of the doi these three separate entities. on the glorious 17th day of there is but one duty and tha plain one, to record the deeds one, legendary and otherwise by his life and teachings wrough a marvellous change in Erin dant isle. At the outset it m said and said with regret tha little that can be regarded as ab ly authentic history can be r of the life of Patrick. The date birth is enshrouded in mystery place it as in the year 396, ot 372, whilst Scotland, England, and Wales, all claim the hon having been his natal soil. H sionary labours are placed by as having commenced in 464; ers in 493. But surely these ar ters of minor importance. T salient fact is that he accom his task, and it is with that fa we chiefly have to do.

Descended from a Patrician F

It is now the generally accept lief that Patrick, or as his nam ginally was, Succat, came of aristocratic stock, and first saw the light somewhere in the neighbourhood of Dumbarton, in Scotland. At the age of fifteen he was carried off as a prisoner in one of the many incursions of the Picts upon the Roman Province, south of the Wall of Severus, and sold as a slave on the opposite coast of Ireland, in the Territory of the Irish Picts.

We learn from St. Patrick himself that he was the son of the deacon Calpurnius, who was the son of Potitus, a priest. Calpurnius was a decurio or magistrate, who on the withdrawal of the Roman garrisons from Britain, probably retired for safety south of the Wall of Severus. It was from a small country villa which his father owned near the town of Bannavem Tabernise that the lad was abducted. Bannavem Tabeberniae signifies literally, the military encampment at the river foot; and in all probability, before the withdrawal of the troops, this place had been an important military centre, as towards the end of the 4th century, the Romans had not less than 10,300 foot and 1,500 horse stationed along the great wall. Succat remained in hard slavery for six years tending cattle on Slemish mountain, in the county of Antrim. He was of an enthusiastic temperament, much given to prayer and meditation, and no doubt even at that sorrowful period of his life his thoughts often turned to the project of missionary work amongst his captors. The bays and creeks of the west and northwest of Ireland were in those days much frequented by sea-rovers, to whom they afforded safe retreats after an onslaught on the Romans in Britain, and probably it was on board of their barks that Succat, or Patrick, as we may as well call him, escaped to Britain.

Becomes a Missionary to the Irish.

During his residence in Ireland, he had acquired the Irish tongue, and become acquainted with manners, habits and customs of the people. He resolved to devote himself to the task of converting the Irish and for this purpose, after being ordained successively deacon, priest and bishop, with the authority of Pope Celestine, he returned to preach the Gospel to the heathen inhabitants of the country.

In regard to St. Patrick's labours in Ireland, we have to be contented in great part with what is simply legendary lore. His chief enemies were the Druids, who were of course bitterly opposed to any innovations on the practices observed in their ancient religion. We are told that they were great magicians, but that St. Patrick's powers were too much for them. Their antagonism was so great that in spite of his benevolent disposition he was obliged to curse their fertile land and render them dreary bogs; to curse their rivers, so that they produced no fish, to curse their kettles so that they could never boil; and finally, to curse the Druids themselves so that the earth opened and swallowed them up.

Another miracle recorded of the Saint is that he and his followers found themselves, one cold morning, on a mountain without a fire to cook their breakfast, or warm their limbs. A pile of ice and snowballs was collected together, and Patrick breathing upon it, instanteously changed it into burning coals. He is also said to have accomplished the marvellous feat of swimming across the Shannon with his head in his mouth.

Ireland Cleared of Snakes.

It is stated that he accomplished the feat of ridding Ireland of snakes, by beating a drum, which he struck with such fervour, however, that he knocked a hole in it, thereby endangering the success of the miracle One cunning old serpent resisted, but St. Patrick made a box and invited the serpent to enter it. The serpent insisted that it was too small; and so high the contention grew that he got into the box to prove that he was right whereupon St. Patrick slammed the lid tight and cast the box into the sea.

In 1831 an Irish gentleman, Mr.

Mrs. M. J. Cook of 494 Aylmer St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I always find quick relief in Booth's Kidney Pills. They strengthen and relieve my back of a dull, heavy pain that settles in the small of it, and extends into my shoulders. For years I had suffered with these symptoms of kidney trouble, and could find no relief. I had frequent spells of dizziness and headaches. I was restless and weak and would often awake more tired than on going to bed. I never found relief for these painful and weakening symptoms of kidney trouble until I used Booth's Kidney Pills, obtained at Madill's Pharmacy. I have had little trouble since as I use Booth's Kidney Pills occasionally and they keep me in the best of health."

MANY BILLS ARE PASSED

Sir James Adds to Powers of the Ontario Railway Board With Regard to Street Railways—Mr. Beck Puts Through Two Drastic Hydro-Electric Measures— Mr. MacKay on Technical Schools.

Toronto, March 17.—Some of the most important measures of the present or any other session were under discussion in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, on the next to the last day of the session.

Sir James Whitney's two bills dealing with "the intolerable state of affairs," with regard to the Toronto Street Railway situation, passed their third readings. Important amendments were made to each.

To the former a provision is added, constituting the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board the judge in case of dispute as to the existence of exclusive rights of radial railways in the annexed districts, in which the bill permits the city to build lines.

To the other bill a clause is added limiting the power of the Railway Board to order extensions and better equipment of street railways, to the City of Toronto.

The Toronto bill was put through committee without discussion or amendment, and after Sir James Whitney's street railway bills had been disposed of, was given its third reading without comment. Sam Charters' telephone bill was also given its third reading, and the license amendment act also passed the last stage.

In spite of the vigorous opposition of Liberal members of the House, Hon. Adam Beck's bill, which gives power to the Hydro-Electric Commission to regulate and inspect, under a penalty of $100 a day for non-compliance with their orders, the operation and equipment of the works of all municipalities and corporations supplying power and light, was passed through committee yesterday without amendment and given its third reading.

J. D. McDougal (East Ottawa) complained that this clause made the commission the judge over its own competitors. The railway board was the right tribunal.

Sir James Whitney: "The commission is not a competitor. It is the municipalities that compete."

Hon. A. G. MacKay: "Surely the hydro is an operating commission for the transmisaion of all power."

Among the other provisions of the bill, the question of compensation for easements is brought under the Public Works Act.

A motion of Hon. A. G. MacKay to refer back with instructions to strike out the clause objected to was defeated lost on division. The bill was given its third reading.

On a division of 59 to 17 Mr. Studholme voting with the Government, Hon. A. G. MacKay's bill amending the Hydro-Electric act to allow owners of easements to sue without a fiat and to collect damages, no matter how occasioned, was declared lost on its second reading.

Hon. A. G. MacKay made a strong plea for technical schools all over the province. He was not making a political question of it. Neither the present nor the old Government had been moving fast enough in the matter. He did not say the province should support these entirely. What was wanted was something in the shape of intelligent direction.

"This state cannot afford to drop the young man who has to go to the workshop at an early age," said Mr. MacKay. "That is where our educational system is weak, undeveloped and ill-balanced."

Col. Hendrie moved an amendment to Mr. MacKay's resolution, expressing appreciation of what had been already done and for the work of the Dominion commission, with a promise of something to be done in the near future.

The amendment carried on a division of 65 to 18.

The slate was cleared off, with the exception of Allan Studholme's eight hour day act, the statute law amendment act, the supply bill and the reception of the report of the public accounts committee.

New Hotels For Canada.

New York, March 17.—A chain of Carlton-Ritz hotels in this country and Canada, in practical business operation with the Carlton and Ritz hotels of London and the Ritz of Paris, is what William Harris says is being arranged. Mr. Harris is chairman of the Carlton and Ritz Hotel Company. He said:

"The first will be opened in Montreal, for which the capital is already subscribed, the enterprise having the financial and moral support of the best and most influential men in Canada. It is to contain 250 rooms, with restaurant, grill room, a grand ballroom and state banquet room. The hotel will be opened in about two years at a cost of from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000.

ily to accompany them across the river, as he expressed it, "to help clear this thing up right."

After he had been served with a substantial supper, Best was taken before Chief of Detectives McDonnell, and asked to explain his movements last Saturday night.

Carefully, as weighing every word, the suspect told of having spent the evening with his wife in walking about the city. About 11 p.m. she accompanied him to the Brush street depot, that he might catch a train for Comber. He put Mrs. Best on a street car for home and then went into the train shed.

On several unimportant instances Best contradicted himself, but the statement that he went to the Brush street depot to catch a train for Comber is the most damaging. No trains leave this station for Comber, and as Best had been in the habit of coming to Detroit at frequent intervals, he must have known the proper station to go to.

Best denied strenuously that he had walked out towards the dock at Brush street, and said he was of the opinion his wife had become despondent and had jumped into the river.

This Company Must Advertise.

Ottawa, March 17.—Because the Ottawa and Montreal Transmission Co., which seeks incorporation to construct a transmission line from Mattawa to Montreal, by the north shore of the Ottawa River, wants the right to cross the river into Ontario, it must advertise its application in all the Ontario municipalities affected.

This will probably prevent its doing anything at the present session of Parliament.

Royal Household Flour
The best for Bread and the best for Pastry

"The Little Brother of The Rich"

NOW, this is not a talk about money.

It isn't a contrast between the rich and the poor, for in some things we are all equally rich and there are no poor brothers.

The poorest woman in the land can have just as good bread as the richest. The children who walk can have just as delicious pies and cakes and "goodies" as the children who ride in carriages.

All the money in the world cannot buy better flour than "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD", for there isn't any better.

And the woman who does her own baking can have just as good bread as is served to the Royal Household of England, and that is made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR sent to England from Canada.

And then, a barrel of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" produces many more loaves than a barrel of ordinary flour. The bread is better—sweeter, nicer to eat—and more wholesome—has more health and strength in it.

Also, it makes more delicious pies, cakes, biscuits and doughnuts. Children, whose mothers use "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" at home, can have just as good baked things as the Princes and Princesses of England.

When it comes to "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" there are no rich or no poor. All can afford to buy the finest flour in the world, OGILVIE'S "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD".

For though "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" costs more per barrel than ordinary flour it contains so much more nourishment and makes so much more bread of superior quality it is in reality the most economical of all flours.

Had Heart Trouble.
Nerves Were All Unstrung.

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart or nerves, flagging energy or physical breakdown, the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will soon produce a healthy, strong system.

Can Do Her Own Work Now.

Mrs. M. McGann, Debes Junction, N.B., writes:—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

ST. MIKE'S ARE CHAMPIONS CAPTURE THE ALLAN CUP

Gallant O. H. A. Winners Defeat Queen's on Their On Ice by 5 to 4 and Wrest the Amateur Championship of the Dominion Away From Them.

Kingston, March 16.—(Special.)—There must be some class to that gallant little St. Michael's hockey team and the O. H. A. To-night they are the amateur champions of Canada, holders of the Sir Montagu Allan Cup and the most admired little band of hockey warriors in the broad land of the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They came to Kingston and fought and won a stubborn battle with Queen's University by 5 to 4. The O. H. A. senior champions duplicated the trick of the Kingston Frontenacs, winners of the junior championship, by coming from behind, and they consistently outplayed the great Queen's team throughout the entire second half. When the interval was called Queen's led by 4 to 2, but St. Michael's battled them to a standstill in the second half, scoring three goals and holding the Presbyterians absolutely scoreless.

The game was played on fast ice, which was exactly suited to the best efforts of the brilliant Queen's forward line, the quartette which set Ottawa by the ears when they downed the McGill seven in the final game for the intercollegiate championship and took the Allan Cup away from the champion Cliffsides of the Interprovincial League in this city. There is no denying that Queen's had both weight and speed on the St. Michael's line, but it was hockey, hockey in the best acceptance of the term, that the Irish showed the big crowd in the Kingston Rink to-night and that is why they won. Gloom pervades Queen's camp to-night, but a faithful little handful of St. Michael's rooters have yelled themselves hoarse to a whisper and their antics surely qualify them for the insane ward. "Will we celebrate the seventeenth of Ireland to-morrow? You bet we will. Oh, you little St. Mike's ponies of the O.H.A.!"

That and similar sayings are dinned into the ears of the Queen's supporters by the wildly hilarious Irish rooters. Queen's started like the champions they were when the Toronto champions arrived here to-day. The Presbyterians notched the first goal, only to have it tied up a few minutes later. St. Michael's then drew ahead and made the score 2 to 1. The once-feared Dobson - Crawford - Campbell combination of weight, speed and shooting ability ran in two goals on the Murphy-Dissette septette and the score sheet read 4 to 2 at the half.

Then came St. Michael's with a swoop. Every man on that little team worked as though his life and honour depended upon the result. From goal out to centre, and the wings, they showed magnificent hockey. They did everything there was to do—checking, bodying, shooting and scintillating generally until they made the spectators gasp. They made the score 4 to 3, and kept tearing into Queen's until it was 4 to 4. At this stage the Kingston students worked with the energy of despair, hoping to hold the score a tie, and thus, under the rules of Allan Cup contests retain the trophy.

The deciding goal was scored with about four minutes to play, and that four short minutes seemed like fourteen to the St. Michael's followers, who were returning cheer for cheer with the frantic Queen's rooters.

WANDERERS ONCE MORE TRIMMED OTTAWA TEAM

New York, March 16.—(Special.)—While the first of the matches last night at St. Nicholas Rink between the Wanderers of Montreal and the Ottawa hockey team for a purse of $1,500 was a brilliant exhibition of the Canadian game, the second instalment played to-night far eclipsed it. When the final whistle had sounded the Wanderers had beaten their rivals by a total of 8 to 6, as a result of the two games. The first match of the two ended with the Wanderers in the lead by four to three, and this evening the count was exactly duplicated.

It was a furious flash of speed from beginning to end, in which all the art that should belong to the perfected hockey player was exhibited by the members of both sevens. There were those to be sure who stood out above their rivals, such as Johnston, the point of the Wanderers' combination, but every one of the fourteen men knew the inside of combining brilliancy with team play. Hard body checks there were in plenty and an attempt to check a Wanderer led to Smaill having to leave the game. He came into an opponent rushing down the ice and was thrown so that his head came down with a resounding crack. A bad cut resulted and he left the game and the Wanderers dropped Blatchford to even things.

Shore, who had played for Ottawa in the first game was replaced by Roberts and the line-up was changed about a bit and Glass was out of the game for the Wanderers as a result of an accident Thursday night, his place being filled by Campbell. The teams:

Referee, W. Russell, hockey club; assistant referee Howard Brakeley; goal umpires H. Shore, Ottawa, and R. Garon, Wanderers of New York.

Many Wise Ones Fall For A Crooked Racing Game

Special to The Examiner.

Council Bluffs, Ia., March 16.—The government continues to introduce evidence against John C. Maybray and his 18 alleged associates, who are on trial before United States Judge Smith McPherson for alleged conspiracy to defraud by means of illegal use of the mails in promoting fixed sporting events.

J. H. Secrest, 65 years old, a retired farmer of Iowa City, gave an account of his experiences with the defendants. He first lost $3,000 to the Millionaire's Club, as the defendants it is alleged, were known, but still satisfied with the honesty of the promoters, returned from New Orleans to his Iowa home and procured $6,000 more which he lost. Both sums went into pools on fixed horse races. The first race was lost because the jockey on the "sure winner" had a fit and fell from the horse.

The men who enticed him to put up the $3,000 said it was not fair to take the money and said that if he would put up $7,500 forfeit they would give him another chance in a week. He wanted his $3,000 back, so he went home and raised $6,000 and one of the steerers made up the rest of the forfeit. Another race was arranged and Secrest kept the betting sheet. Nearly $50,000 was bet on that race and Secrest's $6,000 was in the pool.

The jockey had another fit and feigned dead. Secrest thought he was. One of the promoters of the pool told Secrest that all would be arrested. Secrest, frightened, returned home.

Secrest pointed out Maybrey as one of the "millionaires."

Samuel Sutor of Cass Lake, Minn., explained his loss of $5,000 and Alex. Delain of Green Bay, Wis., told of losing $2,500. Zachariah Pierport of Pawnee, Okla., said he lost $3,000 on a fixed wrestling match.

Present failures soon outdo shadow past successes. Two or poor plays that lose games can mored stroy a reputation that hundred l for brilliant plays built up. great

The task of the veteran is equ as hard as that of the youngster, although his existence often helps him out of ight holes that would have proven extremely embarrassing to the ne wrecruit. In these days of modern baseball a player can't hold down a berth in the big league very long on his past reputation. He may hang on for a year or two, because the club owner employing him insists in hoping against hope that he will come back to his old time form, that the inability to deliver is only temporary.

As in every other business, the men connected with the game, the players in particular, are always aspiring to be regarded as the best at their espective position. They do this because they ealize that their chance to increase their early stipend depends altogether on the form they show.

Move Helped Game.

The abolition of the salary limit was one of the very ebst moves ever made for the good of the game. In the old days when the major league players were limited to a salary of $2,400 for their six months' work, there ws little to strive fo. After a player reached such a figure because of marked ability, there was no inducement to try to improve, except that of personal pride. It's a cinch that Tyrus Cobb would not take the chances on the bases he does if he knew the taking of such chances wouldn't help his standing as a player, and incidentally increase his salary.

Pennants are impossible with a lot of dead timber. Championships demand high class players in all departments of the game. Club owners and managers are always on the alert for men who can deliver the goods just a little better than any of their rivals on the other clubs. Baseball is truly a survival of the fittest.

When a youngster breaks into the big league from the bushes, the first thing the opposing players on every other team do is to try and discover his weakness, if he has any. Old players realize their success depends on their ability to outguess and outplay the newcomers. The youngsters realize they must show to as good, if not better, advantage than the veterans, provided they care to remain in fast company.

Any time a minor leaguer breaks into the majors with a batting average that threatens to drive all the star twirlers out of the organization, the pitchers at once begin to devote all their time and attention to the ne warrival. Not knowing what the youngster likes, the star twirler may feed him a fast one, letter high, only to see the bush leaguer par the left field fence. He will go trough his entire assortment for the purpose of finding out just what kind of a ball the youngster has trouble hitting, should he happen to have a weakness. Possibly after experimenting for some time he discovers that the ambitious youngster has trouble hitting a curve ball on the outside at the knee. If such happens to be the youngster's weakness, woe unto him, for in a very few days every pitcher in the league will be aware of the fact, and every one will make it a special point to serve him nothing but the very kind of ball that troubles him most.

A year ago last fall the Cleveland club secured Wilbur Goode from the Akron League. Goode jumped into the game just at the time the Naps were batting hardest for the pennant honors. Although his experience had been limited, Goode played excellent ball for the Naps, making his best showing at the bat. All pitchers looked alike to him, and he won many a game for the Cleveland club by his remarkable ability to hit the ball. No player on the Cleveland helped more to make the Naps near pennant winners than Goode.

The Case of Goode.

During the winter months many nice things were said about Goode, and general opinion was that the

From the there has been jealousy betwee Secretary of State and the Tariff in the settlement of tariff dis with other countries, and in the ent crisis, which is in itself enough, this jealousy has result diametrically opposite recomm tions to the President.

When the Tariff Commission, sisting of Chairman Emery of Tariff Board; Mr. Pepper, trad pert for the Bureau of Trade tions of the State Department, Consul-General Foster at Ottawa, cluded their negotiations with Canadian officials they had re the conclusion that no conces could be obtained from Ca Knowing the desperate policy trade war with a country with we have so large and so necessa trade, Prof. Emery and Mr. Pe returned to Washington convi that the only course open to country was to "old and after Goode joined the Cleveland club in 1908, he hit the ball well over the .300 mark, but a slump late in the season brought his mark down to about .280. Last year Goode in ninety-four games hit only slightly over the .200 mark. He failed to show the form that made him look like a runner up for Cobb, so much so that the Cleveland management did not hesitate to trade him to hiladelphia last fall.

Just what caused the sensation of one season to fail to live up to the reputation he had established is something of a mystery, for Goode is only a youngster. Goode's great prowess with the stick caused all the twirlers to pitch their best to him when he stepped to the plate. erhaps some pitcher found out that covery was soon communivated to Goode had a vital weakness, his disother twirlers on the circuit, and as a result Goode's average slumped considerably. It's also just as possible that ill-health affected his work, and that he will come back as good as ever next summer. Connie Mack will soon discover the trouble, if any exists.

Three or four years ago a pitcher by the name of Smith was secured by the St. Louis club. He started off like a wonder, winning the first six games in which he officiated. Critics thought the Browns had a cracking good man in him and many believed he would be one of the best "spit" ball pitchers in the country. That Smith had a good "spit" ball there was no denying, but his curve ball was little or nothing, while his fast ball came to the plate straight and true. In his first six games Smith depended almost entirely on the "spitter," and met with greaet success. He worked a number of games in rather bad weather, and early in May pulled up with a sore arm. The club at that time was rather short on pitchers and Smith tried to work minus the "spitter." He was hit hard in every game and soon passed out of the league. Another phenom had been exploded after getting a Christy Mathewson start.

You must deliver in most any old business to get the money, but more so in baseball than any other business or profession.

TO BE JOHNSON'S TRAINER

Chicago, March 15.—Jack Johnson played his trump card to-day for the Jeffries fight when he engaged Tommy Ryan to train him for the championship encounter on July 4. The coloured champion, who is resting at his home until time for him to leave for New York to defend the assault case which grew out of his trouble with Norman Pinder, made the announcement after holding a long conference with the retired middleweight champion. Ryan confirmed the announcement. Ryan is well suited to superintend Johnson's preparations for the fight. He knows more about Jeffries' style of fighting than anyone in the country and it is doubtful if the former champion has quite as great knowledge of his own capabilities as has Ryan, who taught Jeff all he knows about the fine points of boxing and led him through the early stages of his career, and with the assistance of Billy Delaney got him in shape to whip Fitzsimmons for the championship back in 1899. Ryan taught Jeffries the crouch and thinks he can show Johnson suitable means of beating Jeff's greatest defensive asset.

Ryan and Jeffries have been enemies for years. They split up soon after the battle between the alfalfa farmer and Corbett, which the former won in 23 rounds at Coney Island. The split was the result of financial differences. Ryan always has claimed that Jeff did not pay him for training him for that contest, although some sort of a settlement was effected later on.

Ryan will join the negro's force on the coast about the middle of May and have charge of all the preparations for the battle.

BIG SWINDLE NIPPED IN BUD BY DETECTIVES

Fort Frances, March 16.—One of the biggest conspiracies to defraud the Government that has been unearthed for some time developed today, when Detective Greer of Toronto and Provincial Constable Campbell brought into town nine Indians from the reserve near Barwick, and two white men, M. T. Cathcart, of Barwick, and George Westcott, of Rainy River. Information was laid before Police Magistrate Rollands and was to the effect that the persons charged were guilty of obtaining money from the Province of Ontario under the "wolf bounty act," knowing that they had no right to do so. When brought before the Magistrate they waived examination, and asked to be tried summarily before Judge Fitch. This was granted by the Crown and the case came up this afternoon.

According to the police, the plan was a most successful one to make easy money. The method was for one of those in on the game to go to Winnipeg and visit the fur buyers and fur houses and buy up all the wolf skins they could get, which had been caught in Alberta or Saskatchewan, paying from $2 to $2.50 for each skin. These were then shipped to Rainy River, and divided amongst the gang. In order to deceive the authorities, a number of the skins were scattered among the Indians, who, in turn, went before the local magistrate with the ears clipped off the skins, or the skins themselves, and made the usual affidavit that he had personally killed the wolf in a certain place. This was forwarded to the department at Toronto, when a check would be sent back for the amount of the bounty to the extent of $15 for each wolf supposed to have been killed.

In this way bounties were obtained to the extent of $8,000, and the fraud would have been going on yet had not the department become suspicious that something must be wrong when such an unusual crop of wolves had suddenly been secured from this district. Provincial Constable Campbell was detailed to see why so many wolves were being captured, and he found things so interesting that on the receipt of his report Provincial Detective Greer was sent up, with the result that eleven persons were arrested and others are liable to be. This case is likely to be of much interest. Meantime the Government has held up all pending applications for bounty for wolves killed until they are fully satisfied that no bunco game is being played.

A sensation was caused in Rainy River last night by the arrest of Geo. Westcott, almost before the polls closed in the election in which he was the unsuccessful candidate for Mayor, on a charge of defrauding the Government of Ontario through the wolf bounty act. Westcott has long been very prominent in municipal affairs, and was tax collector last year and promoter of the hospital scheme which has now taken shape.

INVESTORS!!!

MONEY-MAKING OPPORTUNITIES

In our advertisement of last week we informed you that we were opening a department for the handling of syndicate accounts. By the word "syndicate" we mean the joining together of a number of small cash accounts and the utilization of the total sum for the investment of money in New York stocks. By this method the small investor obtains a footing equivalent to the man with a large bank account. For instance, if a man has $100 to invest, the least he could get would be ten shares of stock, and his $100 would protect him ten points. A market such as we have at present, is capable of moving as much as twenty-five points, although this seldom occurs. Therefore the small investor would be wiped out of his money and have nothing to show for it. By putting his $100 into a pool and operating the pool along conservative lines, large percentage profits can be made. This is what we are doing.

Send us what money you can spare, and we will look after it for you. We will do the buying and selling, notifying clients at the end of each week what has been done. Sometimes the markets are not active enough or are in an unsafe condition, in which case we may use our judgment and not operate. In this case we allow our clients 6 per cent. interest on the amount of money to their credit. This is better than you can do in any other line of business, and have your money available. Credit balances can always be withdrawn by making draft on us, by telephoning us or calling in and getting a cheque.

The following are a few instances of what money will do, operating in stocks, taking the range of prices of yesterday, the 15th inst., as an example, the amount of money in use being $600 in each case, the profits being for the day alone:—

By selling 20 Union Pacific.....$40 could have been made
By selling 20 Reading ..... 40 could have been made
By selling 20 United States Steel. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Southern Pacific .. 40 could have been made
By selling 20 Smelters .... 40 could have been made

It will be seen that $40 is the lowest profit on any one of the above six mentioned stocks, and $40 in a day on a $600 investment means enormous profit. Figure it out for yourself. While this percentage cannot be made daily, yet an average of over 50 per cent. is assured on absolutely safe grounds.

Send us a deposit and let us show you how it will grow.

By having a large number of accounts, we will make a great deal of money for our clients, and by so doing will make a fair return on the work involved, out of our commissions. We charge the regular brokerage commission of one-eighth each way for buying and selling, that is for every 100 shares, $12.50 for buying and $12.50 for selling.

Put some of your money with us, and do it now. The market is in a splendid trading condition, and small amounts will grow very rapidly. You can, as we have pointed out before, always withdraw if you do not care to leave your balance open. All we ask you to do is to let us demonstrate to you what can be done in the money making line by conservative investment in New York stocks.

Write us and open an account to-day. You cannot make money faster in any other line of business. You cannot put your money out and have it placed at anything like the earning power that you will have here.

COBALT STOCKS

Cobalt stocks show signs of greater activity. There is an extraordinary demand for good Cobalt properties, and the control of Cobalt mining properties by American capitalists.

Temiskaming recently struck very rich ore at the 425-foot level, demonstrating the fact that the Cobalt camp is not a shallow one, and that this mining region is proving itself to be one of the mining wonders of the world. The gold discoveries in the Porcupine district are also turning out wonderfully well. We strongly recommend the purchase of Temiskaming, Cobalt Lake, Gifford and Beaver. We carry these on margin.

Write, telephone or wire us your orders. Let us make you money. We have done it for others.

CELEBRATED ALL OVER

Archbishop of Montreal Makes an Appeal to the Irish Catholics of That City to Join With the French In Giving the Eucharistic Delegates a Record-Breaking Welcome—Other Cities Celebrate.

Montreal, March 18.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated here with accustomed eclat, it being the first time since the days of Mayor McShane that Montreal's chief magistrate walked in the procession. Mayor Guerin was very much in evidence, wearing his regalia of office.

The sermon was preached at St. Patrick's Church, by Father Walsh of Dublin. The Archbishop of Montreal also spoke.

"Let us unite," he said, "to make the coming eucharistic congress one worthy of the event.

"In September next, I see before me in this vast church, the Irish Catholic people of Montreal, surrounded by Irish archbishops and bishops from Ireland, England and the United States. I see here in this sanctuary the cardinal legate representing his holiness. Prepare, then, my people, for this great event. Let us outdo London and Cologne.

"In the presence of our honored mayor, I thank the City Council for their efforts to make this event great and glorious."

Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 18:—Everywhere the green emblem was prominent yesterday. In the morning high mass was celebrated in St. Patrick's Church, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. There was no procession, that annual function being observed last Sunday.

At St. John.

St. John, N.B., March 18.—Six Irish societies with bands, marched to the cathedral, where a sermon was preached by Rev. Father Meahen. In the evening dinners and amateur theatrical performances were given in observance of the day.

At Kingston.

Kingston, March 18.—At St. Mary's Cathedral Rev. Father McLaughlin, an eloquent preacher of Ogdensburg, N.Y., pointed out the glories and virtues of St. Patrick to a great audience. The Irish societies had paraded to the cathedral to celebrate the event. At night a performance of "The Shaughran" was given.

To Punish for Undervaluation.

Montreal, Que., March 18.—The dry-goods trade of Montreal, through the Board of Trade, hopes to bring to the notice of the Government shortly its views respecting the treatment meted out to persons found guilty of defrauding the customs by undervaluation or other unfair means.

The trade takes the view that a firm found guilty should be fittingly punished. It is claimed that there are cases on record where merchants have been allowed off with a fine, even up to the third offence. Undervaluation is a great hardship to the honest dealer, and they feel keenly on the subject.

Several cases are said to have occurred recently whereby offenders were allowed off lightly by the Department.

Captured Escaped Murderer.

New York, March 18.—After a struggle in a street car on Ninth avenue yesterday, Alexander Devoe, murderer and escaped convict, was captured by a detective. Devoe escaped from Sing Sing prison on March 9.

The United States Does Not Declare Tariff War

Tariff Commission Told President Their Opinion Was That Minimun Tariff Should be Extended to the Dominion, But Secretary Knox Planned a Hold-up.

Washington, D.C., March 18.—Conflicting advices from the Tariff Commission, which is substantially the Tariff Board of the Treasury Department, and the Department of State over the Canadian tariff leaves President Taft in the worst dilemma, politically and diplomatically, that has confronted a Republican Administration in many a year. From the outset there has been jealousy between the Secretary of State and the Tariff Board in the settlement of tariff disputes with other countries, and in the present crisis, which is in itself bad enough, this jealousy has resulted in diametrically opposite recommendations to the President.

When the Tariff Commission, consisting of Chairman Emery of the Tariff Board; Mr. Pepper, trade expert for the Bureau of Trade Relations of the State Department, and Consul-General Foster at Ottawa, concluded their negotiations with the Canadian officials they had reached the conclusion that no concessions could be obtained from Canada. Knowing the desperate policy of a trade war with a country with which we have so large and so necessary a trade, Prof. Emery and Mr. Pepper returned to Washington convinced that the only course open to this country was to yield and grant our minimum tariff to Canadian shipments.

This report was approved by the Tariff Board, of which Prof. Emery is chairman, and in the conference of the members of the board with President Taft last Saturday they recommended that the minimum rates be proclaimed by the President before April 1, when otherwise our maximum will automatically go into effect against Canada. They pointed out to the President that from an economic point of view this country could not afford a tariff war. Many of our imports from Canada, said the tariff men, constitute our sole supply of the article involved, and a trade war would accordingly result in the immediate crippling of whole industries.

More important still, at this juncture, was the political argument presented to the President. It was pointed out that the border cities, besides depending on Canadian trade as a source of supply for crude products, have large proportions of their population absolutely dependent on the international trade that passes through them for their livelihood. This annual exchange between the two countries amounts to something like $250,000,000.

The Democrats are already planning for the campaign this summer a heavy assault on the tariff record of the Republican party, and in many states it is recognized that this attack will not be met with success. Should this attack be given the further point of the complete stifling of trade with a neighboring and naturally friendly country, the return of a Democratic House already not a remote possibility—would be almost made certain.

LEGISLATURE AT AN END

Labor Member In Discussion of Eight-Hour Bill Says That Liberal Members Should Try to Keep Ahead of the Times Instead of Criticizing —His Bill Is Given the Six Months' Hoist Yesterday.

Toronto, March 18.—"What the Opposition should do," declared Allan Studholme (East Hamilton) in the course of his speech, moving the second reading of his bill for an eight-hour working day, and a 20 cents an hour minimum wage, in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, "is to get 25 years ahead of the Government. It should get out in front, like Billy Maclean at Ottawa.

"The trouble with the present Opposition is that it is caustic, critical and reactionary. Stop fault finding. Let the Government jog along and lead out in front."

When Mr. Studholme arose at 12.40 he asked whether, in view of the hour, the Government would not be willing to adjourn for lunch.

The Premier assured him that he was willing to go straight on "till we drop, and perhaps the honorable member will drop too."

Mr. Studholme, who continued speaking till two o'clock, complained of his bill being left till the dying hour of the session.

Its object was above the more commercial side, and looked to the welfare of the people, the biggest asset of the province.

"The trouble with conditions at the present day," he continued, "is that everybody is after the almighty dollar."

The idea of shipping everything on to the Dominion was done in the hope of escaping a vote on the matter.

"Members are said to be busy circulating round robins. If they were as busy working to earn 20 cents an hour to get a 32 bill, they would appreciate this bill better."

Something should be done, he said to take the people back to the land. Under the present conditions we were making criminals of our boys. They were placed in the hands of unmerciful employers and got no schooling.

He had a hard rap for the farmers, who, he declared, sat and smoked while God sent the rain and sunshine, while the laboring man had to work to earn every dollar.

A. E. Fripp (West Ottawa) declared that members of the House should take a stand one way or another on the question. If they went on as they were going the result would be, as in England, the creation of a third party, which he considered would be an undesirable consummation.

T. R. Shillington (Temiskaming) said that from his experience as a large employer of mining labor in northern Ontario, he knew that when a man worked eight hours underground you had the best out of him. If he had a wide experience in other lines of industry he might be as radical as the mover of the bill. He thought there should be more information, however, on how the bill would affect the manufacturer.

Sir James stated there was one clause of the bill which he would never under any circumstances consent to. "It is," he said, "that clause that tells the poor, the cripple and the man over 50 that he shall starve, that he may not take under 20 cents an hour."

The recent deputation of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council had not asked for the changes suggested by this bill, and he did not think they would. They asked for an eight hour day for miners and men on city street railways.

A commissioner appointed by the Dominion Government was gathering information. Why should they not avail themselves of these results. When they were obtained, the Government would make up their minds without delay, and would not hesitate to take this matter up. They would not do this because they had been laggard or because they were afraid.

The Premier closed by moving the six months' hoist.

Hon. A. G. MacKay thought the matter was quite within the field of provincial legislation. He moved an amendment to the amendment providing for the appointment of a provincial labor commission, apart from anything the Dominion was doing. This was lost on a division of 47 to 19. The amendment was declared carried on the same division.

By section 40 of the Statute Law Amendments Act, the Mining Act was changed to prohibit protests against mining claims except by leave of the commissioner. Hon. Frank Cochrane stated that it had been found that protests were made merely in order to be bought off. There had been several cases in the Porcupine district.

On the suggestion of Hon. A. G. MacKay, it was decided to allow an appeal from the commissioner to the courts for the benefit of the man with a really good claim.

The Premier announced the withdrawal of the clause, changing the apportionment to the university from succession duties. The board of governors had intimated their wish to consult the Government on the matter, and no harm would be done by allowing it to stand twelve months. The federated colleges were given the same power to expropriate as the university.

Before adjournment the Premier made a statement regarding the sessional indemnity. When the Government was ready, they would take the responsibility and increase the indemnity, and they would not wait till the last week of the session to do it. He was not prepared to say whether it was too small or too large.

The House concluded its business about six o'clock, and adjourned for prorogation, which will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Harsh Immigration Methods.

Windsor, Ont., March 18.—Mrs. Fowler, who came from Stratford to Detroit a year ago and was later deserted by her husband, was deported from Detroit by the United States immigration officer, who gave her a ferry ticket and practically dumped her upon Windsor.

Mayor Hanna demanded that the United States Immigration Department pay her fare to her former home. This was refused. He then took the matter up with Ottawa, and is instructed to take the matter up again with the Detroit officials.

Task for London Minister.

London, Ont., March 18.—Rev. A. J. Vining, pastor of Talbot street Baptist Church here, has been invited by the Baptist Union of Great Britain, to travel all through Europe to familiarize himself with conditions in different countries and then found a great Baptist University, to be the training ground for students all over the world.

Mr. Vining will give his decision to his congregation on March 27. He recently refused a call to a Hamilton church at a greatly increased salary. For some years he was superintendent of Canadian Baptist Missions in the northwest, and later in charge of the Baptist mission work in old London.
